PREFACE

We live in a time when people can spread their views around the globe at the touch of a button. Yet such views may come from people of little knowledge who can confuse and even misguide others. This is a concern that has become particularly acute with the widespread misrepresentation of Islam, both by those hostile towards it, and, unfortunately, even those who claim to profess it. Through their evil but eloquent schemes, such people can misrepresent the sacred teachings of this religion, and direct the ignorant and the ill-fated to perpetrate heinous crimes against both an innocent public and an innocent religion. Such deception and misinterpretation has sadly become all too common in our day, and among its causes is, undoubtedly, the relative inaccessibility of sound Islamic scholarship and literature in the English language. An additional cause is the suggestion that there is no difference between experts and non-experts. It is as though God never declared in His Book: 'How can those who know be equal to those who do not know?' (39: 9)

A plethora of problems can arise when non-experts begin to consider themselves experts on a subject matter. One can vividly illustrate with the example of a person who requires medical attention. A sensible individual would choose to be treated by a medical professional—an expert in the field—rather than risk their health by consenting to a medical procedure from someone who fancies themselves a doctor simply because they have read a medical textbook in their spare time. Indeed, there are serious legal consequences for those who claim to practice medicine without a recognized licence—one which is granted because they have been through rigorous training and examination. Such legal repercussions are entirely appropriate of course, for such frauds place people's worldly lives at risk. Yet why is it that when it comes to our health we seek an expert opinion, but when it comes to our everlasting Hereafter so many of us prefer to follow someone who considers himself an expert after reading just a couple of books? Simply put: why do we risk our eternity by following those who are not qualified? Why do we not seek out recognized experts? As God the Almighty says: 'ask the people of knowledge if you do not know.' (16: 43) It is precisely to address this gap between scholarly works and non-scholarly opinions that we have endeavoured to produce this invaluable resource.

After reading the entirety of al-Minhāj in Turkish, the Director of Organisational Management at Islamic Community Milli Gorus (ICMG) Youth Australia, Adem Temel, conducted a meeting with our small team in which we studied the book and recognized how blessed we were to have access to such a stupendous work. It was evident that the renowned scholar and author of al-Minhāj, Imam al-Nawawī, may God have mercy on him, had wisdom and knowledge many today are in desperate need of. Indeed, al-Minhāj is one of the greatest and most respected commentaries on Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim. While an English translation of a hadith can struggle to convey its apparent meaning, let alone the appropriate context and other subtleties, commentaries by experts like Imam al-Nawawī can shed light on hadiths more comprehensively and thus give us greater access to the intended meaning while guarding us against misunderstanding. During a subsequent meeting, our team compared the Turkish translation of Fī Zilāl al-Qurʿan with the English translation by Dr Adil Salahi and were impressed by the remarkable consistency between the two translations. Immediately thereafter, the team made the decision to contact Dr Salahi with a view to proposing that he translate Imam al-Nawawī's al-Minhāj into English. We were overjoyed to hear his positive response.

A number of people and organizations have contributed to this project. Firstly, this work would not have been possible without Adil Salahi's mastery of both the Arabic and English languages. His love of Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him, and his dedication to making knowledge accessible has led to the translation of significant works from the Islamic literary heritage. Second, the ICMG Youth Australia and Kube Publishing (UK) teams worked closely to meet all project timelines. Third, many individuals and groups volunteered to support this project both physically and financially. Lastly, and most importantly, God, the Almighty, guided us, brought ease, and opened closed doors to make everything possible.

'... and my success can only come from God. In Him I put my trust, and to Him I will return.' (11: 88)

BEFORE YOU READ

There are some important points that the reader, particularly a student of Hadith, needs to bear in mind when using this book. Although these have been explained in the Introduction to the first volume, it is considered worthwhile to remind readers of the editorial method followed in this work.

1. Numbering and references

It is surprising, but there has never been a full and serial numbering of hadiths in Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, and hence references to hadiths vary. A hadith is often referenced by book and chapter: 'Related by Muslim, Book of Faith, Chapter so-and-so', and so forth. This is a difficult method of referencing, particularly because the headings of some chapters run into two or three lines, or even longer. The fullest numbering of the hadiths in Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim is that given in al-Muʿjam al-Mufahras li-Alfāz al-Ḥadīth, but many hadiths are left without numbers. These are versions of the previous hadith, differing only in their chains of transmission, and it was probably felt that they should count with the earlier and often more complete version.

Al-Muʿjam al-Mufahras is a concordance of the words of the Prophet's hadiths listed in the most important nine anthologies: al-Bukhārī, Muslim, Abū Dāwūd, al-Tirmidhī, al-Nasā'ī, Ibn Mājah, as well as Mālik's al-Muwaṭṭa', Ahmad's al-Musnad and al-Dārimī's Sunan. It was prepared by a group of forty Western researchers of Islamic studies under the supervision of Arent Jan Wensinck (1882–1939) and edited by the Egyptian scholar Muhammad Fu'ād 'Abd al-Bāqī (1882–1967).ⁱ

However, al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras gives a serial number to each 'book' in Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ. Thus, it lists the numbers of the hadiths in the Book of Faith from 1 to 380, and then begins the numbering in the Book of Cleansing from 1. As such, it does not give a complete serial numbering to the entire anthology. I have therefore decided to provide serial numbering, giving every hadith its own numbered identification. In doing so, I follow the method adopted by the late hadith scholar Mūsā Shāhīn Lāshīn (1920–2009) in his 10-volume commentary, Faṭḥ al-Mun'im fī Sharḥ Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim. This method does not assign a number for a hadith that differs from the one before it only in its chain of transmission, but that has exactly the same text.

Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ has been translated into English by Abd al-Hamid Siddiqui. The translation is well circulated and its better known edition, published by Dār al-Salām, is available online. After looking carefully at this translation, I have decided to provide my own. However, the translation gives a full serial numbering of the hadiths listed by Muslim, bringing the total to 7,190 hadiths. This is different from Lāshīn's method of numbering, which brings the total to 6,571 hadiths. To make it easier for readers who wish to refer to Dār al-Salām's translation, I give the number in that translation in brackets before the chain of transmission.

Thus, three sets of numbers are included before the chain of transmission of each hadith. The first is a complete serial number following Lāshīn's method. The second is that of al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras and the third is that of Dār al-Salām's translation given in brackets. Where Lāshīn or al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras does not give a hadith a number, because it is the same as the hadith before it, I follow the convention of giving it the mark '000'. Thus, either of the first two numbers may be replaced by 000. Where Dār al-Salām's translation omits a hadith or does not give it a number, I give it the mark '0'. The pattern of numbering is simplified, as follows:

[Lāshīn] – [Al-Mu'jam] – (Dār al-Salām)

This applies to all the hadiths that are entered in the anthology itself, beginning with the Book of Faith. Imam Muslim wrote a long introduction to his work, explaining his method. In it, he includes ninety-two hadiths and statements by the early scholars of Hadith. These are given separate numbers, from 1 to 92. Only a few of these are entered in al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras, because the majority are attributed to scholars of Hadith. Whichever is entered in al-Mu'jam al-Mufahras its number is stated. Dār al-Salām's translation does not include this introduction.

When a hadith is entered in any of the other five anthologies considered to be the most authentic, I mention these in a footnote. Where no such information is given, it means that the hadith is entered only in Muslim's anthology. The Arabic original of each hadith is given immediately after the English translation, but this applies to the main body of the anthology, not to Muslim's introduction.

Imam Muslim divided his anthology into books, each covering an important area of the Islamic faith, such as the Book of Faith, the Book of Prayer, etc. He did not make further classification. It was left to Imam al-Nawawī to divide each book into chapters, and give headings to these. These chapters were later given numbers in al-Muʿjam al-Mufahras. The headings and their numbers are given in this translation. However, as many headings tend to be long, I have tried to reduce them while retaining the elements highlighted in the headings. It should be pointed out, however, that some of these chapters are not given numbers. Where no number is given to a chapter in al-Muʿjam al-Mufahras, it appears without a number in this translation.

There are a few instances where the same number is given to two consecutive hadiths. In order to indicate that this is not an error, but merely following the Arabic original, the repetition is indicated by the symbol [R].

2. The chain of transmission

Hadith scholars were very specific in their terminology. Therefore, when they used synonymous words, they imparted clear distinction to them. Thus, the words ḥaddathanā, akhbaranā, anbaʿanā, and ʿan, have different meanings, although linguistically speaking they are very similar and denote receiving information from a named person. However, ḥaddathanā is used to refer to a process whereby the teacher reads out the hadith to his students, whether he is narrating from memory or reading out loud directly. Akhbaranā and anba'anā are practically identical in meaning. However, the first refers to a process whereby a student is reading aloud from his teacher's books in the presence of the teacher. Anba'anā does not specify this process, but means that the information was passed on by the teacher or in his presence. 'An, on the other hand, does not specify any process, nor does it specify that the reporter actually heard the teacher's narration or his student's reading out in his presence. Indeed, it could, thus, mean that the reporter heard the hadith from a colleague who was in the teacher's circle at the time.

In order to reflect these differences, 'narrated' is the term used here for ḥaddathanā, 'reported' for akhbaranā, 'mentioned' for anba'anā, and 'from' for 'an. However, any of the first three ways could involve a one-to-one situation in which the reporter is the only one present with his teacher. In Arabic, this is marked by changing the last letter in the three Arabic words, using 'ī' instead of 'ā'. Thus the words become ḥaddathanī, akhbaranī, and anba'anī. To reflect the difference in the English translation the words 'to me' have been used after 'narrated', 'reported' and 'mentioned' to indicate the one-to-one situation, while the three words on their own indicate the presence of others when the narration took place.

Readers will also note that in some hadiths the chain of transmission includes the mark [H]. This is indicated in Arabic by the use of the letter [Ḥ], and it may occur once, twice, or even more in the chain of transmission of the same hadith. What this signifies is that the hadith is narrated by two or more chains of transmission, but these join up at some stage. Rather than give them separately, repeating the names of reporters from where they join up to the Prophet's companion, Hadith scholars use this way to indicate that the different chains are joined at this point.

Another symbol used in the chain of transmission is [R], but this is much less frequent. It simply indicates that the number given to a particular hadith is repeated, which means that the number has been given to more than one hadith instead of giving each of them a separate number.

Sometimes Muslim narrates a hadith from three of his teachers and uses the word 'narrated', but their methods of learning from their teacher whom they quote differ. Muslim is too careful and meticulous to overlook this fact. He makes this clear by immediately adding something like: 'The first said "narrated" and the other two said "reported".'

3. Word usage

The usage of some Arabic words need to be explained. The word 'imam' is often used in reference to some scholars quoted in this work. It is also used in reference to both Muslim and al-Nawawī. There is, however, a very clear difference in the use of this word by Sunni Muslims and the Shia.

Linguistically speaking, imām means 'leader' and is often used, particularly in books of Islamic Jurisprudence, or fiqh, to refer to the ruler or the head of state, whether he has the title of caliph or some other title. It is also commonly used to refer to the person who leads congregational prayer. In this second usage, there is no difference between the one who leads the prayer and anyone in the congregation, except that the imam leads and the congregation follow.

A far more common usage of the word is as a title of respect added before the name of a scholar who is recognized for his high achievement and scholarship. This is how it is mostly used in this work. It may, however, also be used here in the sense of the 'leader of congregational prayer' when this topic is discussed, but as such will be clearly identified at that juncture. A scholar who is considered an imam has no special distinction, apart from what his scholarship gives him; he does not enjoy any special status. It will be noted in this work that the views of some such scholars are outlined, and discussed or rejected. This is clearly a matter of scholarly difference that does not detract from the high standing of the scholar or the one who differs with him.

The Shia have a totally different concept of 'imam'. They give this status to twelve people starting with 'Alī ibn Abī Tālib, the Prophet's cousin, followed by eleven of his descendants through Fāṭimah, his wife and the Prophet's daughter. To the Shia, those imams were infallible and enjoy a rank that is almost equal to that of the Prophet. Indeed, the way some Shia speak of the third Imam, al-Ḥusayn, the Prophet's grandson, gives at times the impression that they rank him above the Prophet himself. Moreover, the Shia believe that the twelfth Imam was taken away and did not die: he will return at some point when he will bring justice to the world. This Shia concept is absolutely unacceptable to Sunni Muslims who do not recognize any such status as belonging to anyone.

We speak of a hadith having a chain of transmission and we mention 'transmitters'. We also use the words 'reporter' and 'narrator'. These three words are used interchangeably and they refer to the people named in the chain of transmission. These have the same status with regard to how the Prophet's statement or action is taught and learnt. When we use the verb 'narrate' we are referring to the action of stating the hadith, whether by reading it out loud or otherwise. However, the word 'narrate' is often used in Islamic literature in reference to the works of the leading scholars of Hadith and what they include in their anthologies. Thus, we often see phrases like 'al-Tirmidhī narrated ...', 'al-Bukhārī narrated ...'. It is felt that it is better to distinguish the mere quoting of a hadith and its entry in an anthology. Therefore we use the word 'narrate' to indicate quoting a hadith and the word 'relate' to mean the 'entry in a Hadith anthology'. Thus, we say: 'al-Bukhārī relates in his Ṣaḥīḥ', or 'al-Bayhaqī relates in Shu'ab al-Īmān', or 'al-Nasā'ī relates in al-Sunan al-Kubrā'.

The words Abū and Abī are often used in the names of hadith reporters and scholars. These two are the same word, but the endings are case markers according to their position in the sentence. Invariably, Abū is used at the beginning of the sentence and when not preceded by a name, while Abī is used when preceded by the word 'ibn'. There are other situations that indicate which of the two should be used. Both words mean 'father of' and their use indicates an appellation of respect.

The word mawlā is used to describe some reporters and other persons mentioned in the commentary. This word is one of the few Arabic words that denote opposite meanings. Linguistically, it means both ‘master’ and ‘slave’, and it is used in the Qur’an to refer to God as the mawlā of the believers. When someone is referred to as the mawlā may have more than one meaning, he discusses these and shows of another or of a tribe, it most frequently refers to a slave who was set free. He then allied himself with his former master or with his tribe, as this was a recognized practice in Arabia both under Islam and prior to it.

It will be noted that the phrase ‘but God knows best’ is used very frequently in al-Nawawī’s commentary and by the scholars he quotes: this is a mark of humility. They express their views but shy away from presenting these as the true and correct view, to the exclusion of anything different. It is akin to saying that ‘this is what I know, but ultimate knowledge rests with God’.

The word hadith is used with a capital or small ‘h’ and this usage indicates a difference. When it is used with the lower case first letter it refers to a single statement by the Prophet. Hence, the reference to one or more statements by the Prophet is always with the lower case. When it is used with a capital first letter, it refers to the Hadith discipline, which is a specialized branch of study, concerned with the Prophet’s statements, actions and approvals.

4. Arrangement

Imam al-Nawawī discusses three areas in relation to every hadith included in Muslim's anthology: 1) The general meaning of the hadith and its message. He also outlines the important points it includes and highlights any rulings that it stipulates or may be based on it. 2) The chain of transmission: he identifies the different reporters, giving some information about them and their full names if they are mentioned by first name or by appellation. He also highlights any useful point that the chain provides, and explains any subtle point that reflects Muslim's careful and meticulous scholarship. 3) He explains the language of the hadith, stating the meanings of individual words, particularly those that may be unfamiliar to readers or became rarely used. Where a word, phrase or sentence may have more than one meaning, he discusses these and shows which, if any, is unacceptable. However, he does not follow a single pattern in the arrangement of his commentary. Sometimes, he begins by discussing the chain of transmission, but often he discusses the general meaning first. He may also start by explaining the language and the meaning of individual words.

In this English version, liberty has been taken to follow a consistent pattern. The meaning of the hadith is given first and then its explanation, under the subheading 'text explanation', is provided. This is followed with any discussion al-Nawawī gives concerning the chain of transmission, using the subheading 'transmission'. The information al-Nawawī provides about the meaning of individual words and the pronunciation of unfamiliar words and names has been ignored, because these are already reflected in the translation. However, when he discusses alternative meanings, what is considered useful to English readers is included. If it is a matter of pronunciation or a grammatical aspect that does not affect the meaning or the message of the hadith, this has been disregarded.

5. Quotations and references

In his monumental work, al-Nawawī cites numerous quotations from various scholars. At times, he mentions the work from which the quotation is made, but in most cases this is not done. Although his work has been checked and verified several times, and published many times in different countries, none of these undertook the task of checking the original works in order to provide detailed references. There are several reasons for this omission. Many of the original works have not been published, but remain in manuscript form held in different libraries in various countries. Moreover, many of these works are voluminous. For example, al-Nawawī often quotes from Imam al-Ḥaramayn, who wrote a large number of books. As mentioned in the biographical note on Imam al-Ḥaramayn, one of his books is published in twenty-one volumes. Although a discerning scholar may have a good guess as to the book from which a particular quote is taken, finding it may require several hours, if not days of hard work. Imam al-Nawawī died 750 years ago and we cannot blame him for not citing his references according to modern methods of citation. It should be remembered that all the books he read were written in long hand and manuscripts of the same book differed in size, number of pages and style of writing. Readers and students must simply trust to his scholarship and piety with all that he quotes from other scholars. May God bless them all for their meticulous and faithful scholarship.

6. Notes and editorial liberty

In certain cases, it is felt that a note should be added within the text to explain certain points or add a particular perspective. This is not surprising considering that the book was written nearly eight centuries ago. In order to make the addition very clear, it is preceded by the word 'Note' and given an independent paragraph.

In a few cases, a sentence is started by mentioning the author's name before mentioning what he says, such as 'al-Nawawī considers these hadiths self-explanatory, adding only ...', and in a very few cases, a short comment by the author is not included in the translation, because time has made it irrelevant and including it would be either confusing or require a long explanatory footnote. Since it is unlikely to concern the reader, it is felt that omission is better. Such liberty is taken only in cases where it is felt that had the author lived in our time, he would have approved of such omission.

Shaykh Muhammad Rashīd Riḍā gave an English copy of A Manual of the Early Muhammadan Traditions by Arent Jan Wensinck, Professor of Arabic and Islam at the University of Leiden in Holland, to one of his regular students, Muhammad Fu'ād 'Abd al-Bāqī, and asked him to translate it into Arabic. 'Abd al-Bāqī, who was working as a translator at the Agricultural Bank in Cairo at the time, complied and translated the book, but first he wrote to Wensinck for his permission. Wensinck expressed delight at the idea and also sent ‘Abd al-Bāqī a copy of the first part of a concordance of the Prophet’s hadiths that he and other researchers were working on. ‘Abd al-Bāqī reviewed the work and found many mistakes. He made a list of these and sent it to Wensinck, who was delighted with the input and recruited ‘Abd al-Bāqī as editor of the entire al-Mu‘jam al-Mufahras concordance.

Al-Mu‘jam al-Mufahras is published in Arabic in eight volumes and is indispensable for any researcher in Islamic Studies. Words are listed alphabetically, and a short sentence or phrase in which the word occurs is given. Then the hadith which includes the sentence or phrase is referenced to any of the nine anthologies. ‘Abd al-Bāqī’s role is acknowledged by Wensinck in the Introduction, and working on this concordance enabled Muhammad Fu’ād ‘Abd al-Bāqī to subsequently undertake his own highly acclaimed concordance of the Qur’an.

THE PROHIBITIONS IN MAKKAH

[2898-445]. (Dar al-Salam 3139) Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm al-Ḥanzalī narrated:ⁱ Jarīr reported; from Manṣūr; from Mujāhid; from Ṭāwūs; from Ibn ‘Abbās. He said: ‘God’s Messenger said on the day of the takeover, the takeover of Makkah: “There shall be no migration, but only jihad and the intention. When you are urged [for jihad], respond”. And he said on the day of the takeover, the takeover of Makkah: “God has made this city a sanctuary on the day when He created the heavens and the earth. It remains sacred by God’s sanctity till the Day of Judgement. Fighting in it was never lawful for anyone before me. It was made lawful to me for a short while on one day. It continues to be sacred by God’s sanctity till the Day of Resurrection. Its thorn may not be cut, its game may not be scared, [nothing] may be picked up except by one who will identify it and its grass may not be mowed”.’

Al-‘Abbās said: ‘Messenger of God, except for idhkhir: it is used by their labourers and in

Text Explanation

In hadith No. 2898, the Prophet states that there shall be no migration, but jihad and the intention will continue. Scholars say that migration from the land of unbelief to the land of Islam will continue until the Day of Judgement. This statement by the Prophet is explained in two ways. The first is that there shall never be any need to migrate from Makkah after it was taken over by the Prophet, because it became a land of Islam. Migration takes place from a land where Muslims are unsafe or persecuted. This is a miraculous statement by the Prophet as he stated that Makkah will forever remain a land of Islam, and that no one needs to migrate from it. The other explanation is that no migration that occurs after Makkah was taken over will be equal in virtue and reward as the migration that took place before its takeover. This is the same as God saying: ‘Those of you who gave and fought [for God’s cause] before the victory are not like others: they are higher in rank than those who gave and fought afterwards, although God has promised the ultimate good to all of them’. (57: 10) The Prophet adds that jihad and the intention will continue. This means that people have a way to achieve the merits that attend migrating for God’s cause. This is achieved through jihad and the intention to do what is good in all matters and affairs.

The Prophet says in this hadith: 'If you are urged [for jihad], respond'. This means that if the ruler urges you to join a jihad campaign, you should go. We shall explain the rules that apply to jihad and show the duty part of it at the appropriate place, God willing.

In the same hadith, No. 2898, the Prophet says of Makkah that God made it a sanctuary 'on the day He created the heavens and the earth'. After this, Muslim mentions some hadiths that say that 'Abraham established the sanctity of Makkah'. Thus, these hadiths are apparently in conflict. There is indeed a well-known difference of views on this question, which is mentioned by al-Māwardī in his book al-Aḥkām al-Sulṭāniyyah and by other scholars, concerning the time that Makkah was sanctified. Some scholars say that it was sanctified ever since God created the universe, while others say that it was given the same status as the rest of the world until Abraham's time, when it was sanctified. This view is consistent with the second hadith, while the first view is consistent with the first hadith, and it is shared by the majority of scholars. They reconcile the second hadith by saying that its sanctity was clear from the day when the heavens and the earth were created, but then it became unknown and remained so until Abraham's time when he declared it anew and publicised it. Thus, he did not initiate it. Scholars who take the other view reconcile the two hadiths by saying that God wrote in the Imperishable Tablet or somewhere else on the day He created the heavens and the earth that Abraham would sanctify Makkah, by His order, but God knows best.

In the same hadith, No. 2898, the Prophet says: 'It remains sacred by God's sanctity till the Day of Judgement. Fighting in it was never lawful for anyone before me. It was made lawful to me for a short while on one day. It continues to be sacred by God's sanctity till the Day of Resurrection'. In the next hadith, the word 'killing' replaces 'fighting'. And in No. 2900, the Prophet says: 'It is not permissible for anyone who believes in God and the Last Day to shed blood in it or to fell a tree. If anyone cites the fact that God's Messenger fought in it, tell him that God permitted His Messenger, but He has not permitted you. He permitted me only for a short while on one day. Today, it has regained its sanctity as it was sanctified yesterday. Let those who are present inform those who are not'. These hadiths are very clear in prohibiting fighting in Makkah.

In his book al-Aḥkām al-Sulṭāniyyah, Imam Abu al-Ḥasan al-Māwardī, who belonged to our Shāfi'ī School, says: 'One of the special rules that apply to the Ḥaram is that its people are not fought. If they are in rebellion, then some scholars say that fighting them is forbidden. Instead, they are harassed until they return to obedience of their rightful ruler. The majority of scholars say that they are fought for their rebellion, if there is no other way to bring them back into the fold. Fighting rebellious people is one of the rights owed to God and it may not be ignored. To fulfil it in the Ḥaram area is more important than ignoring it'. What al-Māwardī stated as the view of the majority of scholars is certainly the correct view. Al-Shāfi'ī states this view in two places of his book, al-Umm. Al-Qaffāl of Marw, a Shāfi'ī scholar, said in his book Sharḥ al-Talkhīṣ: 'Fighting in Makkah is not permissible...even if a group of unbelievers fortify themselves in it, we are not permitted to fight them inside Makkah'. However, al-Qaffāl's view is wrong, and I am only mentioning it so that it is not taken as correct.

The answer to this point raised by these hadiths is given by al-Shāfi'ī in his book Siyar al-Wāqidi, which is part of his voluminous work, al-Umm. He says that the hadiths mean that it is prohibited to attack and fight them with weapons that cause wide-spread damage, such as mangonels, if the situation can be put to right without using them. This is different from all other places where it is permissible to fight enemies who are unbelievers in any way, and with all legitimate weapons, but God knows best.

The hadiths in this chapter give details of what may not be done in Makkah. Thus, we learn that thorny plants may not be cut, green grass may not be mowed, dry grass may not be cut or beaten with sticks so that it drops off. Scholars agree that it is forbidden to cut or fell the trees that people do not normally grow, and that fresh grass is forbidden to cut in anyway. They differ with regard to what people may grow of trees and plants. They also differ with regard to compensation for cutting trees. Mālik said it counts as committing a sin, but no compensation is payable. Al-Shāfi'ī and Abu Ḥanīfah say that a compensation is payable, but they differ on its amount. Al-Shāfi'ī said that the compensation for a large tree is a cow, while a sheep is sufficient for a small tree. This is also reported from Ibn 'Abbās and Ibn al-Zubayr, and stated by Ahmad, while Abu Ḥanīfah says that all such trees are compensated for according to their respective values. Al-Shāfi'ī said that the compensation for cutting fresh grass is determined by its value. According to al-Shāfi'ī and other scholars, it is permissible to let animals graze in the meadows of the Ḥaram area, while Abu Ḥanīfah, Ahmad and Muhammad say it is not permissible. As for hunting, it is unanimously agreed that it is forbidden to all people, whether they are in iḥrām or not. If a person kills a game animal, compensation is obligatory according to all scholars, except Dāwūd who says that it is a sin, but no particular punishment is enforceable. If a game animal comes into the Ḥaram area from outside it, then according to our Shāfi‘ī School, Mālik and Dāwūd, it is permissible to slaughter, eat and dispense with it in other ways. Abu Ḥanīfah and Ahmad said that it is not permissible to kill or do anything with it other than set it free. However, if it is brought into the Ḥaram area after having been killed, it is permissible to eat. They base this ruling on analogy with the case of a person in iḥrām. In support of their view, our scholars cite the evidence derived from the hadith in which the Prophet asked a young boy: ‘Abu ‘Umayr, what has the little bird done?’ as well as drawing an analogy with bringing into the Ḥaram area a tree or some grass from outside. Moreover, it is not game hunted in the Ḥaram area.

The hadiths mention that thorny plants that grow in the Ḥaram area may not be cut. This serves as evidence in support of the view that all vegetation, whether trees, shrubs or grass, in the Ḥaram area are forbidden to cut, including thorny plants that may hurt. This is the view chosen by al-Mutawallī, a well-known Shāfi‘ī scholar. However, the majority of our scholars say that thorny plants are not forbidden to cut because they are harmful. As such, they belong to the same status as the five harmful animals [that are permissible to kill in the Ḥaram]. They limit the import of the hadith on the basis of analogy. However, the correct view is that of al-Mutawallī, but God knows best.

The Prophet says that fighting in Makkah was not permitted to anyone before him, and it was permitted for him for only a short period during one day. This statement is cited in support of the view that Makkah was taken over by force. This is the view of Abu Ḥanīfah and many, or rather the majority of scholars. However, al-Shāfi‘ī and other scholars say that the takeover of Makkah was peaceful. They explain this hadith as meaning that fighting in Makkah was permissible for him and that he would have resorted to fighting if it had been necessary, but he did not have to, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2898, the Prophet says: ‘Its game may not be scared’. This makes it clear that scaring game animals to drive them away from their places is not permissible. A person who scares such animals commits a sin, whether the animal dies or not. However, if the animal dies during its escape and before it finds a refuge, the one who scares it incurs an indemnity. Otherwise, no indemnity is payable. Scholars say that the Prophet mentions scaring a game animal so as to alert believers to the prohibition of causing the death of the animal or other damage. If scaring is prohibited, killing is more so.

In the same hadith, the Prophet says that it is not permissible to pick up what is dropped by others, except by someone intending to identify it to the public. The hadith means that it is not permissible to pick up such an article if one intends to publicize it for a year and if no one claims it during this time, it becomes his property. This is the rule concerning what is found anywhere else, but in Makkah it is only permissible to pick up what is dropped if one intends to publicize it for all time and never to make it his own property. Mālik said that it is permissible to own such an article if it remained unclaimed after one year publicity, as is the rule in other places. A number of Shāfi'ī scholars share this view and give some interpretations of the hadith, but these are lacking in evidence.

In the same hadith, the Prophet makes an exception of idhkhir, which is a plant with a pleasant smell. Al-'Abbās, who requested this exception, said that it was needed by labourers and in people's homes, while in the hadith No. 2901 its use is stated as being in homes and graves. The labourers referred to were blacksmiths and jewellery manufacturers and they used this to light their fires. It was also used in graves to fill up holes between mud bricks and within a home, it was used on roofs. The Prophet responds to the request and makes the exception of idhkhir. This is understood to mean that he immediately received revelations to make this exception, or that the revelation was given to him earlier, in the form of agreeing to the exception if requested by anyone, or that he gave this ruling on the basis of personal scholarly discretion, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2900, the narrator Abu Sharīḥ al-'Adawī says to the governor of Madinah as he was preparing an army to send to Makkah where it was to fight against 'Abdullāh ibn al-Zubayr that he wanted to tell him a hadith he had heard from the Prophet. He says: 'I heard it with my ears and understood it well, and I saw him when he said it'.

He put it in this way to emphasize that he was fully certain of his accurate memorization of what he heard the Prophet say, and where and when he said it. The Prophet said: 'Makkah is sanctified by God, not by people'. This means that its sanctity was ordained by Divine revelation, not by agreement amongst people on the basis of no Divine order.

The Prophet says: 'It is not permissible for anyone who believes in God and the Last Day to shed blood in it or to fell a tree'. This may be cited as evidence in support of the view that unbelievers are not required to observe the detailed Islamic legislation. The correct view of our school and other scholars is that they are required to observe them as they are required to believe in the essential principles of Islam.^v The Prophet said, 'It is not permissible for anyone who believes in God and the Last Day...', because it is such that a believer who observes our rulings, refrains from what Islam forbids and implements its principles. Hence, the Prophet refers to such people. There is nothing in the hadith to suggest that an unbeliever is not required to observe its details.

The Prophet adds: 'If anyone cites the fact that God's Messenger fought in it, tell him that God permitted His Messenger, but He has not permitted you. He permitted me only for a short while on one day. Today, it has regained its sanctity as it was sanctified yesterday'. This provides evidence in support of the view that Makkah was taken over by force. We have already discussed in this chapter the different views on this point. Those who understand that Makkah was taken over peacefully understand this hadith as meaning that the Prophet entered Makkah ready to fight, if the need arose. This is the evidence for its permissibility to the Prophet at that particular time. The Prophet then said: 'Let those who are present inform those who are not'. This requirement is mentioned in several hadiths. It is clear that knowledge should be spread, Islamic rulings should be transmitted, and people should be made aware of them. 'Amr ibn Responding to Abu Sharīḥ, Sa'īd said that the Ḥaram does not give protection to a rebel or to someone trying to escape punishment for a major sin.

In hadith No. 2901 and No. 2902 the Prophet mentions the case of a person who is killed. He says: 'Anyone who suffers the killing of a kin may choose the better of two options: either to take blood money or to enforce the death penalty'. This means that the victim's next of kin has a choice of either enforcing the death penalty in just retribution or of taking blood money. This is clear evidence supporting the view of al-Shāfi'ī and other scholars who give the next of kin this choice, whereby he can determine either course of punishment to be enforced. This view is shared by Sa'īd ibn al-Musayyib, Ibn Sīrīn, Ahmad, Ishāq and Abu Thawr. On the other hand, Mālik said that the victim's next of kin has the choice of either enforcing the death penalty or extending a pardon. He does not have the choice of blood money except by the offender's agreement. This is contrary to the text of this hadith.

The hadith also provides evidence in support of those who say that a killer must incur either just retribution, i.e., the death penalty, or the payment of blood money. This is one of two views expressed by al-Shāfi'ī. His other view is that he incurs just retribution only. Blood money is incurred on the basis of choice. The benefit of such difference of views becomes apparent in certain situations, such as the case when the next of kin forgoes enforcing the death penalty. If we say that the incurred punishment is one of the two options, then when the death penalty is forgone, blood money becomes enforceable. If we say that the punishment is just retribution and this is forgone, then neither is incurred. This hadith is understood to apply to deliberate murder. The death penalty is not incurred as just retribution except in the case of deliberate murder.

These two hadiths mention the case of Abu Shāh. His name is unknown, and he is only known by his appellation, i.e., kunyah. The Prophet grants his request to have the information written for him. It is clear, therefore, that it is permissible to write down Islamic information other than the Qur'an. The same may be said about the hadith narrated by 'Alī: 'He has nothing other than what is in this scroll', and Abu Hurayrah's hadith: "Abdullāh ibn 'Umar used to write and I did not write'. There are some hadiths that order not to write anything other than the Qur'an. Therefore, some scholars of the earliest generations prevented the writing of information. The majority of early scholars were of the view that all knowledge may be committed to writing. Later, the Muslim community unanimously agreed that such writing is desirable. The hadiths mentioning its prohibition are answered in two ways. The first is that they were subsequently abrogated. The prohibition occurred during the initial period, before the Qur'an was known to all. Writing anything other than the Qur'an was prohibited for fear that it might be confused with the Qur'an. When the Qur'an was well known, writing other knowledge was permitted. The second is that the order not to write was merely meant for those who were reliable in their memorization. They were ordered not to write so that they would not rely on writing, without memorizing what they had learnt. Writing was at the same time permitted to those who could not rely on their memory, but God knows best.

Transmission

In its chain of transmission, hadith No. 2900 includes Abu Sharīḥ al-‘Adawī. This is how his name is mentioned in this hadith in both Ṣaḥīḥ anthologies of al-Bukhari and Muslim. However, he is also described as al-Ka‘bī and al-Khuzā‘ī. His name is variously given as Khuwaylid ibn ‘Amr, or ‘Amr ibn Khuwaylid, or ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Amr, or Hāni’ ibn ‘Amr. He embraced Islam before the takeover of Makkah and died in Madinah in year 68 AH, 688 CE.

THE PROHIBITION OF CARRYING ARMS IN MAKKAH

[2903-449]. (Dar al-Salam 3144) Salamah ibn Shabīb narrated to me: Ibn A‘yan narrated; Ma‘qil narrated; from Abu al-Zubayr; from Jābir. He said: ‘I heard God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) say: “It is not permissible for any of you to carry arms in Makkah”.’

حَدَّثَنِي سَلَمَةُ بْنُ شَبِيبٍ، حَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ أَغَيْنٍ، حَدَّثَنَا مَعْقِلٌ، عَنْ أَبِي الزُّبَيْرِ، عَنْ جَابِرٍ، قَالَ سَمِعْتُ النَّبِيَّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَقُولُ: «لَا يَحِلُّ لِأَحَدِكُمْ أَنْ يَحْمِلَ بِمَكَّةَ السَّلَاحَ».

Text Explanation

In this hadith the Prophet makes it clear that one must not carry arms in Makkah. This is understood to apply when there is no need. If there is need, it is permissible. This is our view and the view of the great majority of scholars. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘According to scholars, this is understood to apply to carrying arms when there is no need. If need is there, it is permissible. This is the view of Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and ‘Aṭā’. However, al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī considers it reprehensible, i.e., makrūh, in view of the apparent meaning of the hadith. The view of the majority of scholars is based on the fact that the Prophet entered Makkah for his compensatory 'umrah with his companions, carrying their swords in their sheaths as stipulated in the al-Hudaybiyah peace agreement. In the year of the takeover of Makkah, he entered ready to fight. 'Ikrimah has a different opinion saying that if a person needs to carry arms, he may do so, but he incurs an indemnity. Perhaps he meant a person who is in a state of iḥrām and he wears a shield or body armour. If this is his meaning, then he is not in disagreement with the majority, but God knows best.

THE PERMISSIBILITY OF ENTERING MAKKAH WITHOUT CONSECRATION

[2904-450]. (Dar al-Salam 3145) ‘Abdullāh ibn Maslamah al-Qa‘nabī, Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā and Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd narrated:ⁱ (Al-Qa‘nabī said: I read out to Mālik ibn Anas, while Qutaybah said: Mālik narrated) and Yaḥyā said (his text): ‘I said to Mālik: “Did Ibn Shihāb narrate to you from Anas ibn Mālik that ‘The Prophet entered Makkah in the year of the takeover wearing a helmet? When he took it off a man came to him and said: “Ibn Khaṭal is holding on to the covers of the Ka‘bah”, and the Prophet said: “Kill him”.’ Mālik said: “Yes”.’

حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ مَسْلَمَةَ الْقَعْنَبِيُّ، وَيَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى، وَقُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ. أَمَّا الْقَعْنَبِيُّ فَقَالَ: قَرَأْتُ عَلَى مَالِكِ بْنِ أَنَسٍ، وَأَمَّا قُتَيْبَةُ فَقَالَ حَدَّثَنَا مَالِكٌ. وَقَالَ يَحْيَى (وَاللَّفْظُ لَهُ) قُلْتُ لِمَالِكٍ: أَخَذَكَ ابْنُ شِهَابٍ عَنْ أَنَسِ بْنِ مَالِكٍ أَنَّ النَّبِيَّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ دَخَلَ مَكَّةَ

[2905-451]. (Dar al-Salam 3146) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā al-Tamīmī and Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd al-Thaqafī narrated:ⁱⁱ Mu‘āwiyah ibn ‘Ammār al-Duhnī (Yaḥyā said: ‘reported’ and Qutaybah said: ‘narrated’); from Abu al-Zubayr; from Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh al-Anṣārī; that ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) entered Makkah (but Qutaybah said: entered on the day of the takeover of Makkah) wearing a black turban, without iḥrām’.

In Qutaybah’s narration: Abu al-Zubayr narrated from Jābir.

حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى التَّمِيمِيُّ، وَقُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ الثَّقَفِيُّ، (قَالَ يَحْيَى

Abu Bakr did not say: ‘standing on the platform’.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 2904 mentions that the Prophet entered Makkah wearing a helmet while in the other hadiths he is mentioned as wearing a black turban. Qadi ‘Iyād said: ‘The two versions may be reconciled by saying that he was wearing the helmet when he first entered Makkah, but later removed the helmet and put on his black turban. This is based on hadith No. 2907, which says that the Prophet ‘addressed the people wearing a black turban’. When Makkah was completely taken over, the Prophet addressed the people standing close to the door of the Ka‘bah.

Hadith No. 2905 mentions that the Prophet ‘entered Makkah without iḥrām’. This serves as evidence in support of the view that it is permissible to enter Makkah without iḥrām, by anyone who does not intend to perform the hajj or the ‘umrah. This applies to one who enters frequently, such as the one who fetches firewood, grass or water into Makkah, or a hunter, or one who comes occasionally, such as one doing some temporary business or paying a visit to some people, and it also applies to one who is in a state of fear or security. This is the more correct of the two views expressed by al-Shāfi'ī, and it is the one his disciples state as their ruling. The other view is that it is not permissible to enter Makkah without iḥrām if one does not need to enter frequently, except for a fighter or one who is in fear of being involved in a fight, or one who is chased by an oppressor and fears to be identified. Qadi 'Iyād reports something of this sort expressed by the majority of scholars.

In hadith No. 2904, someone tells the Prophet that 'Ibn Khaṭal was holding on to the covers of the Ka'bah' and the Prophet then ordered that he should be killed. Scholars said that the Prophet ordered his killing because he was a Muslim who had renounced Islam and killed his servant who was a Muslim. He further used to verbally abuse the Prophet and encouraged his two maids to sing poems of abuse about the Prophet and the Muslims. It may be said that the other hadith declared that 'whoever enters the Mosque is safe'. So, why did the Prophet order Ibn Khaṭal's killing when he was holding onto the covers of the Ka'bah? The answer is that this person was not given the pledge of security. He, as well as Ibn Abi Sarḥ and the two maids, were excepted. The Prophet ordered his killing even though he had been found holding on to the covers of the Ka'bah, as clearly stated in other hadiths. It is further said that Ibn Khaṭal was killed because he did not fulfil the agreed pledge and he subsequently fought. This hadith gives an argument in support of the view of Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and other scholars that it is permissible to enforce mandatory punishment and just retributions in Makkah and the Ḥaram area. Abu Ḥanīfah said that this is not permissible. They take this hadith to mean that Ibn Khaṭal was killed within the brief period when fighting in Makkah was permitted for the Prophet. Our scholars respond to this argument by saying that fighting in Makkah was permitted to the Prophet at the time of entry. Once Makkah was under his authority and its people submitted to him, the permission was withdrawn. Ibn Khaṭal was killed after that, but God knows best.

Ibn Khaṭal's name was 'Abd al-'Uzzā. Muhammad ibn Ishāq said that his name was 'Abdullāh. Al-Kalbī said that his name was Ghālib ibn 'Abdullāh ibn 'Abd Manāf ibn As'ad ibn Jābir ibn Kathīr ibn Taym ibn Ghālib. Other historians cite his name as Sa'd ibn Ḥurayth, but God knows best.

In all the hadiths in this chapter, except the first, the Prophet is said to be wearing a black turban. This makes it clear that it is permissible to wear black garments, even when delivering a khutbah or sermon, although white garments are preferable, as clearly indicated by the hadith that says: 'Your best clothes are the white ones'. The Prophet wore a black turban on this occasion to show that this is permissible, but God knows best.

Transmission

In the chain of transmission of hadith No. 2904 we read: 'Al-Qa'nabī said: I read out to Mālik ibn Anas... and Yaḥyā said: "I said to Mālik: 'Did Ibn Shihāb narrate to you from Anas ibn Mālik that...'".' Then at the end of the hadith: 'He said: "Yes".' He meant that Mālik said 'yes' in answer to the question of whether Ibn Shihāb narrated it to Mālik on Anas' authority. In both Ṣaḥīḥ anthologies, something similar to this question is stated in numerous places without adding the answer ‘yes’ at the end. Scholars differ as to whether it is necessary to provide this answer in such cases. They cite the case of a student reciting to his teacher and asking: ‘Did so-and-so tell you this’, when the teacher is listening, understanding what is being recited, and giving no negative response. Some scholars of the Shāfi‘ī School and some of the Zāhirī School say that it is a must for a correct transmission. If the teacher does not say the answer ‘yes’, the student’s reception of the hadith is incorrect. The great majority of scholars of Hadith, Fiqh and methodology say that it is desirable for the teacher to say ‘yes’ when he is asked this question, but it is not a condition that he should say anything. It is sufficient for the correct reception of the hadith that the teacher remains silent in this condition. The apparent situation is thus sufficient because it is not permissible to allow someone to remain in error in such a case. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘This is the view of all scholars. Scholars of the early generations who said ‘yes’ only did so in confirmation, not to meet a condition’.

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 2905 includes the narrator Mu‘āwiyah ibn ‘Ammār al-Duhnī. His surname is by affiliation to Duhn, a branch of the Bujaylah tribe. ‘Al-Duhnī’ is the better-known pronunciation of the surname, but it is also pronounced as ‘al-Duhanī’, as reported by al-Sam‘ānī in his book al-Ansāb and by ‘Abd al-Ghanī al-Maqdisī.

He did not say: ‘on the Day of Judgement’. He added: ‘A pledge given by the Muslim community is one pledge; it may be given by their lowest in rank. Whoever breaches a pledge of security given by a Muslim incurs God’s curse and the curse of the angels and all mankind. No indemnity is accepted from him on the Day of Judgement’.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 2909 quotes the Prophet as saying: ‘Abraham established the sanctity of Makkah’. This statement may be cited as evidence in support of the view that the sanctity of Makkah was established during Abraham's lifetime. The correct view is that it was established when God created the heavens and earth. We discussed this question in detail earlier. Scholars mention two possibilities concerning Abraham's sanctity of Makkah. The first is that he did so in obedience to an order God gave him, not on his own initiative. Hence, its sanctity is attributed to God at times and to Abraham at other times. The other possibility is that Abraham supplicated for Makkah and God answered his supplication by establishing its sanctity. Hence, the sanctity of Makkah was attributed to Abraham.

The Prophet then said: 'I establish the sanctity of Madinah as Abraham did with Makkah'. Muslim then mentions the hadiths that give the same meaning. These hadiths clearly confirm the argument of al-Shāfi'ī, Mālik and other scholars who maintain that it is forbidden to hunt in Madinah or fell its trees. Abu Ḥanīfah considers both permissible, citing in support the hadith that mentions the Prophet's question to the child: 'Abu 'Umayr: "what did al-Nughayr [i.e., a small bird the child had] do?"' Our scholars respond in two ways. The first is that this hadith about al-Nughayr took place before the Prophet established the sanctity of Madinah. The other answer is that the hunting of that bird took place outside the sanctified area and was subsequently brought in. This latter answer, however, is not convincing to them, according to their principles, because the Ḥanafīs apply a rule saying that game hunted outside the sanctity and brought into it acquires the same status as that hunted within it. However, this rule is rather weak, and they may be answered by the evidence showing it as weak.

The well-known view of Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars is that no indemnity or compensation is due for violating the prohibition of killing game or cutting trees in Madinah. Such actions are forbidden, and no compensation is due. Ibn Abī Dhi‘b and Ibn Abi Laylā maintain that compensation is due in the same way as such violations incur in Makkah. Some Mālikī scholars share this view. Al-Shāfi‘ī has a view expressed in his early rulings, which states that one who kills such game is punished by having his belongings taken away, including his clothes. This is based on the hadith mentioning Sa‘d ibn Abi Waqqāṣ in the present chapter. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘No one after the Prophet’s Companions said this apart from al-Shāfi‘ī in his older version, but God knows best’.

In several hadiths in this chapter, the Prophet defines the area he made a sanctity to be ‘between the two black-stone areas’. These are two areas to the east and west of Madinah covered with volcanic black rocks, leaving only narrow passages in between. They make Madinah extremely defensible against any enemy attack. The Prophet’s words mean that the sanctity applies to these two areas and all the space in between them.

As outlined by the Prophet in these hadiths, the terms of the sanctity of Madinah include that ‘its trees may not be felled and its game may not be hunted’. The Prophet uses a special word, ‘idāh, which refers to any tree that may have thorns. This includes practically all trees.

In hadith No. 2914, the Prophet says: ‘Anyone who patiently endures its tough life and hard toil, I will be his intercessor or witness on the Day of Judgement’. Here, the Prophet uses the word la’wā, which is translated as ‘tough life'. Literally, the word means 'difficulty and hunger'. Thus, the Prophet refers to the fact that life in Madinah could be hard to endure, but those who endure it are assured of his intercession on their behalf on the Day of Judgement. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said:

A long time ago I asked about the meaning of this hadith and why the Prophet specifically mentions Madinah residents by his intercession, when we know that his intercession will apply to all his community. I received a well thought out and convincing answer written on several pages. Whoever read it felt it was definitely correct and to the point. It is useful to quote some points from it.

Some of our scholars quoted the Prophet saying, 'I will be his intercessor or witness...' They added that the word 'or' implies doubt, [meaning by the narrator as to which of the two words the Prophet used]. To us, it appears that it bears no element of doubt by the narrator. This hadith has been narrated by Jābir ibn 'Abdullāh, Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqāṣ, Ibn 'Umar, Abu Sa'īd, Abu Hurayrah, Asmā' bint 'Umays and Ṣafiyyah bint Abu 'Ubayd from the Prophet (peace be upon him) with this same wording. It is practically impossible that all of them or all those who narrated from them had the same doubt and expressed it in the same way. It is far more likely that the Prophet said it in this wording, either to make it more informative or he used 'or' in the sense of division. He would be a witness for some of the people of Madinah and an intercessor for the rest. He may be an intercessor on behalf of the sinners and a witness for those who are obedient, or a witness for those who died during his lifetime and an intercessor on behalf of those who died after him, or some other division.

This is a special privilege that is added to his intercession on behalf of the sinners or on behalf of all people, and to his testimony on behalf of all the Muslim community throughout all generations. The Prophet said about the martyrs in the Battle of Uḥud: 'I am a witness on behalf of these...'. Such statements are meant as an added privilege and honour. Alternatively, 'or' may be used in the sense of 'and', which makes the meaning of the hadith that the Prophet will be an intercessor and witness for the residents of Madinah.

Nevertheless, if we still consider 'or' to imply doubt by the narrator, as some scholars said, then one of the two words is the correct one. If 'witness' is the right word, there is no problem or objection, because it is a special privilege for them in addition to the intercession the Prophet has kept in store so that he will use it on behalf of all his community on the Day of Judgement. On the other hand, if 'intercessor' is the right word, then this is a special intercession for the Madinah residents to be added to the one in which they share with the rest of the Muslim community. This common intercession is the one the Prophet saved so that he could use it on the Day of Judgement to save his community from Hell. The added intercession for the Madinah residents will take a different form, such as giving them higher grades, or easier reckoning of their deeds, or some other form of privilege God may extend to them, such as sheltering them under His throne, or placing them on special platforms, or speeding them on their way to Heaven or some other forms given to some of them, but God knows best.

In the same hadith, No. 2914, the Prophet says of Madinah: 'If anyone leaves it in preference for some other place, God will replace him with one who is better'. Qadi 'Iyād mentions that scholars differ in their views about this statement. Some said that this was the case during the Prophet's own lifetime, while others said that it applies for all time. This latter view is more correct.

In hadith No. 2915, the Prophet says: 'Whoever harbours ill for the people of Madinah, God will be sure to get him melted in fire, like lead, or like salt in water'. Qadi 'Iyād said:

This addition, 'in fire', clarifies the problem presented by the hadiths which do not include it. It makes it clear that this is His judgement in the life to come. However, the hadith may refer to anyone who harboured ill for the people of Madinah during the Prophet's lifetime and that such people would see their efforts foiled. God will ensure that their power will not be firmly established. It will disappear within a short period of time, just like what happened when hostilities took place there during the Umayyad period. Muslim ibn 'Uqbah, the commander of the attacking army, died on his way back. The caliph who sent him, Yazīd ibn Mu'āwiyah died shortly afterwards. The same applied to those who followed their suit.

It may also be suggested that the Prophet's statement applies to anyone who tries to launch a surprise attack on Madinah, hoping to take it unawares. Their efforts will be foiled. This is different from those who attack it openly.

Hadith No. 2916 mentions that 'Sa'd rode to his palace at al-'Aqīq where he found a slave cutting tree branches or hitting them to drop their leaves. He took everything the slave had. When Sa'd returned, the slave's people came over and requested that he return to the slave, or to them, what he had taken from him. He said: "Far be it from me to return something God's Messenger gave me". He refused to return anything'. The hadith provides clear evidence in support of the view prohibiting hunting and tree felling in Madinah, which is the view of Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī, Ahmad and the majority of scholars. Abu Ḥanīfah takes a different view, as we mentioned earlier. Muslim mentions the prohibition attributed to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and narrated by 'Alī ibn Abi Ṭālib, Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqāṣ, Anas ibn Mālik, Jābir ibn 'Abdullāh, Abu Sa'īd, Abu Hurayrah, 'Abdullāh ibn Zayd, Rāfi' ibn Khadij and Sahl ibn Ḥanīf. Other hadith scholars mention other hadiths reported by other Companions of the Prophet. Therefore, any view that is at variance with these clear and widely known authentic hadiths should be discarded.

This hadith provides the basis for al-Shāfi'ī's old ruling stating that a person who kills game or cuts trees within the sanctity of Madinah is punished by being stripped of whatever he has on him. This is the view of Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqāṣ and a number of the Prophet's Companions. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'After the Prophet's Companions, no one shared this view except al-Shāfi'ī in his old ruling. The leading scholars of all provinces disagree with him'. To my mind, their disagreement is of no consequence as the sunnah confirms his view. Thus, al-Shāfi'ī's old ruling is the view of choice because the hadith mentioning it is authentic, the Prophet's Companions implemented it and there is no confirmed evidence to negate it.

Our scholars said that if we are to put this old ruling into effect, the indemnity is defined in two ways. The first is that the game, trees and grazing grass are compensated for in the same way as if the violation had occurred in Makkah. The other way, which is more correct and shared by the majority of scholars explaining this old ruling, is that the hunter, tree cutter and grass puller is stripped. Again, there are two views concerning what is to be taken from the offender. One view suggests his clothes only, but the more correct one, which is shared by the majority, is that everything is taken from him just as it is taken from an unbeliever killed in war, which means his horse, arms, money and whatever else he had. Another question then follows, who benefits from this? Three answers are given, and the most correct one is that it belongs to the one who takes it away, as mentioned in the hadith stating Sa'd's case. The second answer is that it is given to the poor in Madinah, and the third is that it goes to the state treasury. When such a person is punished, everything he has is taken away, including his clothes, except what covers his awrah, i.e., the part of his body which is forbidden to expose. Our scholars say that such punishment is inflicted for mere hunting, whether the person kills the hunted game or not, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2917, the Prophet looks at Mount Uhud and says that 'it loves us and we love it'. The correct view is that Mount Uhud has this special distinctive quality of truly loving us. There are many other examples attributing feelings to inanimate objects, such as when God says in the Qur'an: 'Some other rocks fall down for fear of God'. (2: 74). Other examples include: the tree branch giving support to the Prophet as he delivered his Friday speech felt sorry when the Prophet stood away on the platform; the gravel which glorified God; the stone on which Prophet Moses put his clothes ran away; the Prophet's statement: 'I know a stone in Makkah which used to greet me'; the Prophet summoned two separate trees and they joined each other; Mount Hirā' quaked and the Prophet said: 'Be calm, Hirā'. Those on you are only a prophet, a firm believer...'; and the poisoned lamb shoulder warned the Prophet against eating it, etc. Above all, God says in the Qur'an: 'Indeed every single thing extols His glory and praise, but you cannot understand their praises'. (17: 44) The correct meaning of this verse is that everything glorifies God according to their own abilities and characteristics, but we do not know how this is accomplished. This and similar things are endorsements of what we and other scholars understand of the meaning of the hadith, confirming that Mount Uhud loves us truly. Yet it is said that it means that Uhud's people love us, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2919 the Prophet says: 'Whoever commits an offence in it, the curse of God, the angels and all mankind may fall on him'. That the Prophet threatens such an offender with curses by God, the angels and mankind spells a very strong warning. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'Scholars take this statement as confirmation that it is a major sin. A curse is only incurred by a grave or major sin. Here we are told that God curses such a person, as do the angels and mankind. This gives a very strong sense of placing such a person far away from God's mercy. Linguistically speaking, a curse means expulsion. Scholars add that in this case, curse means the punishment such a person deserves for his sin. He is punished by being barred from Heaven in the initial period. This is different from the case of unbelievers who are denied all grace from God, but God knows best.

The Prophet adds: 'God shall not accept any indemnity from him on the Day of Judgement'. The word 'indemnity' is expressed in the Arabic original in two words ṣarf and ʿadl, and these words are interpreted differently by scholars. Some say that they mean obligatory and voluntary worship, while others say that they mean repentance and recompense. There are various other views. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'The meaning is that what such a person offers of obligatory and voluntary worship will be accepted only as the discharge of one's duty, but not as an act earning God's pleasure. However, the meaning may be that such a person will not find in his good deeds what is enough to repay for his offence. Thus, his case is different from other sinners who receive God's grace and pardon'.

At the end of the hadith, we have: 'Ibn Anas added: Or shelters an offender'. This means that Ibn Anas was present when his father narrated the hadith and he reminded him of this, which Anas had dropped.

In hadith No. 2921 the Prophet supplicates for the people of Madinah, saying: 'My Lord, bless their measure for them, and bless their ṣā' and their mudd for them'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said:

Blessing in this context means growth and increase. It may also mean consistency and continuity. It has been said that this blessing may be a religious one, which relates to what is due to God and measured by these measures, such as zakat and indemnities for errors and missed duties. Thus, the blessing means the continuity of these measures as long as the Shariah continues to be implemented. On the other hand, the blessing could be related to the present life which means an increase of what is measured by these measures, so that a measure in Madinah will go farther than the same measure elsewhere. Or perhaps the blessing occurs in how these measures are used in trading and the profit it generates, and also to the abundance of what is measured by these measures of the produce of Madinah. The increase could refer to what is measured because God gave the people of Madinah plenty after they had experienced a life of limited resources. He enabled them to take over vast areas in Syria, Iraq and Egypt, as well as other places. Goods from these areas were sent over to Madinah and its people became affluent. Such blessing and increase applied to the measure itself. Their mudd became of the Hāshimī type, twice or one and a half times the Prophet's mudd. All these are manifestations of how his supplication was answered.

What appears from all this is that the blessing occurs in what is measured by these measures in Madinah itself, so as to make a mudd in Madinah go farther than its equivalent elsewhere, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2923 the narrator says: “Alī ibn Abi Ṭālib addressed us and said: Whoever alleges that we have something to recite other than God’s Book and this sheet (he said: to a sheet hanging from the sheathe of his sword) is a liar’. This is a clear statement by ‘Alī (may God be pleased with him) refuting all that the Shia fabricate, alleging that the Prophet imparted to ‘Alī a wealth of inner and hidden knowledge, the principles of religion and treasures of the Shariah, and that the Prophet gave members of his household what he withheld from other people. All such claims are false and baseless lies. This statement by ‘Alī is sufficient to refute such falsehood. His statement also provides evidence confirming the permissibility of writing down religious knowledge. We explained this earlier.

The hadith continues with the Prophet saying: ‘Madinah is a sanctity between ‘Ayr and Thawr’. ‘Ayr is the name of a well-known mountain. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said that Muṣ‘ab ibn al-Zubayr and others said that there is neither ‘Ayr nor Thawr in Madinah, but Thawr is close to Makkah. Al-Zubayr said that ‘Ayr is a mountain near Madinah. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ adds: ‘Most narrators quoted in al-Bukhari’s book mention ‘Ayr. As for Thawr, some of them use an implicit reference and some leave out the name without replacing it with anything, because they felt that the mention of Thawr here is an error. Al-Māzarī said: “Some scholars consider the mention of Thawr here to be a mistake by the narrator, while the correct word is Uhud”. Thus says Abu ‘Ubayd as well: “The correct version is: from ‘Ayr to Uhud”.’ The same view is expressed by Abu Bakr al-Ḥāzimī and other hadith scholars. I may add that it is possible that Thawr was the name of a mountain close to Madinah, which could have been another name for Uhud or a different mountain, but the name was subsequently forgotten, and God knows best.

In this hadith the borders of the sanctity are 'Ayr to Thawr, or to Uhud, as already explained. In hadith No. 2917, the area is 'between its two mountains'. And in the earlier hadiths it is 'the area between its two black-stone areas'. All these versions are consistent, because 'between its two black-stone areas' define the limits of the sanctity from the east to the west, while 'between its two mountains' define the limits in the north and south, but God knows best.

Also, in No. 2923 the Prophet says: 'A pledge given by the Muslim community is one pledge; it may be given by their lowest in rank'. A pledge here means a pledge of security. This clearly says that it is perfectly acceptable for Muslims to give a pledge of security to a non-Muslim. If one Muslim gives such a pledge of security, it is forbidden for all other Muslims to molest or harm the unbeliever, as long as that person remains under such protection. Such security has certain well-known conditions. The fact that the Prophet confirms that a pledge of security 'may be given by their lowest in rank' means that a pledge of security could be extended by any Muslim man or woman as also by a Muslim slave who is of lower rank than a free man.

The Prophet then adds: 'Whoever claims himself to belong to anyone other than his own father, or affiliates himself to any other than his own people, incurs God's curse and the curse of the angels and all mankind'. This is a very clear statement confirming the strong prohibition of claiming false parenthood or a freed slave affiliating himself or herself to other than the people who set him free. It is so strongly forbidden because it signifies ingratitude and leads to the confusion of the rights of inheritance, allegiance, payment of blood money, etc. In addition, it involves severance of ties of kinship and undutifulness.

In hadith No. 2928, the Prophet says: 'Whoever breaches a pledge of security given by a Muslim incurs God's curse and the curse of the angels and all mankind. No indemnity is accepted from him on the Day of Judgement'. This applies to a person who violates the pledge of security given by a Muslim to an unbeliever. This is clearly a very serious offence because such a pledge, given by an individual Muslim, applies to the entire Muslim community.

Abu Hurayrah says in hadith No. 2929: 'If I were to see deer roaming in Madinah, I would not scare them'. This is interpreted as the deer grazing or walking around. He would not cause them to flee.

In hadiths No. 2930 and 2931: 'When people saw the early fruit, they would bring it to the Prophet (peace be upon him). God's Messenger (peace be upon him) would take it and say: 'Our Lord, bless our city for us, and our fruits, and our mudd and our ṣā'. A blessing followed by a blessing'. Scholars said that the people of Madinah used to do this hoping that the Prophet would supplicate for God to bless the fruit, the city and the measures they use. They also wanted to inform him that the fruit was now beginning to ripen, so that he would consider what needed to be done concerning the zakat due on them, and to send the zakat official to estimate the produce and the zakat liable on it.

‘He would then give it to the youngest child present.’ This tells of the Prophet’s perfect manners, limitless compassion and his care for both adults and children. He would give the fruit to the youngest child present because children would be looking forward to receiving it.

THE DESIRABILITY OF LIVING IN MADINAH AND ENDURING ITS HARDSHIP

[2933-475]. (Dar al-Salam 3172) Ḥammād ibn Ismā'īl ibn 'Ulayyah narrated: my father narrated; from Wuhayb; from Yaḥyā ibn Abi Ishāq; that he was told from Abu Sa'īd, al-Mahrī's mawlā; that [at one time] they suffered much hardship. He went to see Abu Sa'īd al-Khudrī and said: 'I have a large family and we are in difficult times. I want to move some of my children to some rural area. Abu Sa'īd said: "Do not do it. Stay in Madinah. We travelled with the Prophet (peace be upon him) (I think he said) until we reached 'Uṣfān where he stayed for several nights. People said: 'By God, we are not doing anything here, and our families have none to protect them. We fear for their safety'. The Prophet was informed of this. He said: 'What is this that I was told you said? (I am not sure how exactly he spoke). By Him I swear by, or by Him who holds my soul in His hand, I am thinking, or if you wish (I am unsure which one he said), I would order that my she- camel be prepared, and I would not let her rest until I reach Madinah'. He also said: 'My Lord, Abraham established the sanctity of Makkah and made it Ḥaram. I sanctify Madinah, making it a sanctity between its two mounts: that no blood may be shed in it, no arms are carried in it for fighting and no tree may be stripped except to feed [cattle]. My Lord, bless our city for us. My Lord, bless our ṣā' for us. My Lord, bless our mudd for us. My Lord, bless our ṣā' for us. My Lord, bless our mudd for us. My Lord, bless our city for us. My Lord, add with the blessing two more blessings. By Him who holds my soul in His hand, every passage and every approach leading to Madinah has two angels guarding it until you reach it'. He then said to the people: 'March on'. We marched and we arrived in Madinah. By Him we swear by, or by Him oaths are said (the doubt is Ḥammād's) we hardly put down our luggage in Madinah when the clan of 'Abdullāh ibn Ghatafān launched a raid against us. Nothing stirred them before we arrived".'

Harrah and sought his advice about moving out of Madinah. He complained about high prices and his large family. He further said that he could not endure the hardship of Madinah and its tough life. [Abu Sa'īd al-Khudrī] said to him: 'By no means! I certainly do not advise you to do that. I heard God's Messenger (peace be upon him) say: "Whoever endures its tough life and dies, I shall be his intercessor or witness on the Day of Judgement, if he is a Muslim".'

Text Explanation

In the first hadith, No. 2933 a man seeks Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī’s advice about moving out of Madinah to settle in some rural area because he was finding life difficult in the city. Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī advises him against this and relates to him what he witnessed during the Prophet’s lifetime. They had travelled with the Prophet and stayed at ‘Uṣfān, a valley at a long distance from Madinah. As the days went by, they felt that there was no real purpose for their staying and they were worried about their families. As they put the matter to the Prophet, he told them that he would return immediately, travelling without a rest stop until they reached Madinah. He further told them about the sanctity he established for Madinah, in the same terms as Abraham made Makkah a sanctity. There may be no bloodshed in Madinah, and no one may carry arms for fighting. Trees may not be cut or forcibly stripped of their leaves, except that their leaves may be collected for feeding cattle. The Prophet then passionately prayed for Madinah to be blessed. The blessing of the weight and volume measures indicates good activity in the marketplace, which generates profit and enables people to earn their living. The Prophet then tells them that all approaches to Madinah are guarded by angels. This shows the privilege of Madinah and its being guarded during the Prophet's lifetime. Its guards were numerous so as to ensure that every passage and approach to it had angels guarding it.

Abu Sa'īd then says: 'We hardly put down our luggage in Madinah when the clan of 'Abdullāh ibn Ghatafān launched a raid against us. Nothing stirred them before we arrived'. This means that when they were away with the Prophet, Madinah was guarded and protected, as the Prophet told them. However, when they arrived the Ghatafānī, people launched a raid against it. The raiders were close, but while the Prophet's Companions were away, they did not stir. There was no apparent reason for them not to launch their raid in the absence of its defenders. They were not preoccupied with any diversion, such as fearing a different enemy close by. The only reason for their refrain from attacking the city was that it was guarded by angels, as the Prophet stated.

The attackers are described in the hadith as the clan of 'Abdullāh ibn Ghatafān. In pre-Islamic days the clan was called Bani 'Abd al-'Uzzā, but the Prophet changed their name to Bani 'Abdullāh. Other Arabs called them Bani Muḥawwalah, i.e., the name changers, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 2935 refers to the same story mentioning that the man consulted Abu Sa'īd al-Khudrī 'at the time of al-Ḥarrah'. This was a time of conflict and struggle for power, culminating in the caliph sending an army to suppress the uprising in Madinah in year 63 AH, 683 CE.

In hadith No. 2937, the Prophet describes Madinah as a 'secure sanctity'. This is further evidence confirming the prohibition of game hunting and tree cutting, as we discussed earlier.

‘Āishah mentions in hadith No. 2938 that when the Prophet’s Companions arrived in Madinah, it had an infectious disease. The word she uses, wabī’ah, has two meanings: (1) a fatal epidemic, and (2) an infection that particularly affects strangers. It may be asked, how could the Prophet’s Companions go to Madinah when it had an epidemic, when another hadith prohibits entering a city where an epidemic is rife? The first is that the prohibition was ordered later, after the Prophet and his Companions settled in Madinah. The other answer is that the prohibition applies to a serious epidemic, such as the plague. What Madinah had at the time was a viral infection, and strangers to the city were more likely to contract it, but God knows best.

The Prophet adds a supplication that its fever be transferred to al-Juḥfah. Al-Khaṭṭābī and others said: ‘At the time, al-Juḥfah’s residents were Jews. This means that it is permissible to pray to God to afflict unbelievers with diseases’.ⁱⁱⁱ The hadith also shows the desirability for Muslims to pray for good health and a healthy environment, as well as to bless their cities and remove all hardship from them. This is the view of all scholars. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘This is contrary to the view of some Sufis who claim that supplication should not be made because it detracts from having trust and full reliance on God that should be coupled with accepting whatever comes from Him. It is also contrary to the view of the Mu'tazilah who say that supplication is of no use because Divine will is certain to be done. The right view of all scholars is that supplication is a separate act of worship and it is answered according to Divine decree, but God knows best.

This hadith includes a clear sign of the prophethood of Muhammad (peace be upon him). People have ever since avoided al-Juḥfah, and whoever drinks its water catches an infection.

In hadith No. 2940, Ibn 'Umar says to the woman who wanted to leave Madinah as times became hard for her: 'Stay, silly one!' The Arabic word he uses in addressing her is lakā', which is used to describe an ungrateful or a silly person and also to address a young girl. Ibn 'Umar did not intend his word as a description of her mental status, but as a way of objecting to her decision, as she belonged to his people. He was actually urging her to stay in Madinah as her best option.

Scholars have said that the hadiths in this chapter, as well as earlier and later ones, give clear evidence of the merit of living in Madinah and enduring its tough life. This remains valid for all time. Scholars, however, differ as to the merit of living in Makkah and Madinah. Abu Ḥanīfah and a number of scholars have said that it is discouraged in Makkah. Conversely, Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal and a number of other scholars have said that residence in Makkah is not discouraged; indeed, it is desirable. Those who expressed undesirability give their reasons as fear of boredom, a weakening in the feeling of its sanctity, and a fear of committing sin because a sin there is graver than anywhere else. By contrast, a good deed done there is given a greatly multiplied reward. On the other hand, scholars who say that residence there is desirable cite in evidence the good deeds that are available there but nowhere else, and the multiple reward given to prayers and all good deeds, etc.

The preferred view is that residence in either city is desirable, except for one who thinks that he is more likely to commit sinful actions there. Countless people chose to reside in either place, right from the earliest generations until the present day, and many of those are devout and well worth emulating. If one chooses to reside in either city, one should take every precaution against committing what is forbidden or warned against. One should steer away from whatever leads to such sins, but God knows best.

iii. There is practically no historic evidence that al-Juhfah was populated by Jews at the time. It was a small village, surrounded by desert, and the Prophet most probably intended the desert area because he made al-Juhfah the point where pilgrims from Syria start their consecration. The village was later deserted. Thus, the Prophet's prayer that the Madinah infection be transferred there was due to the fact that it would then affect very few people.

THE PLAGUE AND THE IMPOSTOR ARE BARRED FROM MADINAH

[2944-485]. (Dar al-Salam 3186) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated:ⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik; from Nu‘aym ibn ‘Abdullāh; from Abu Hurayrah. He said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “Angel guards stand at the approaches of Madinah, ensuring that neither the plague nor the Impostor can enter it”.’

وَحَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ أَبِي يُوسُفَ، وَقُتَيْبَةُ، وَابْنُ حُجْرٍ، جَمِيعًا عَنْ إِسْمَاعِيلَ بْنِ جَعْفَرٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي الْعَلَاءُ، عَنْ أَبِيهِ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ، أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ: «يَأْتِي الْمَسِيحُ مِنْ قِبَلِ الْمَشْرِقِ هَمَّتُهُ الْمَدِينَةُ، حَتَّى يَنْزِلَ دُبُرَ أُحُدٍ، ثُمَّ تَصْرِفُ الْمَلَائِكَةُ وَجْهَهُ قِبَلَ الشَّامِ، وَهَذَا لَكَ يَهْلِكُ».

Text Explanation

Imam al-Nawawī only mentions here that these hadiths highlight the merit of Madinah and encourage residence there. The hadith also highlights that it is protected against the plague and the Impostor.

MADINAH EJECTS EVIL PEOPLE

[2946-487]. (Dar al-Salam 3188) Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated: 'Abd al-'Azīz (meaning al-Darāwardī) narrated; from al-'Alā'; from his father; from Abu Hurayrah; that God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: 'People will witness a time when a person will call to his cousin and his relative: "Come over to a life of plenty, come over to a life of plenty". But Madinah is better for them, if only they would realise. By Him who holds my soul in His hand, anyone who leaves it in preference for some other will be replaced by God by someone better. Madinah is like a fire which eliminates impurities. The Last Hour shall not occur until Madinah has expelled its evil ones, just like the fire [in a blacksmith's forge] gets rid of iron impurities'.

Text Explanation

These hadiths mention that Madinah expels bad people from its environs. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'The apparent meaning suggests that this applies to the Prophet's lifetime. Only those who were firm in faith were able to endure the hardship of migration and the tough life that ensued in Madinah. Hypocrites and ignorant Bedouins could not tolerate this tough life in the hope of receiving God's reward for it. The Bedouin mentioned in the hadith gives us an example as he requested the Prophet to release him from his pledge after he fell sick'.

This is what Qadi 'Iyāḍ said. However, that which he claimed to be the apparent meaning is not so apparent. The first hadith in this chapter states: 'The Last Hour shall not occur until Madinah has expelled its evil ones, just like the fire [in a blacksmith's forge] gets rid of iron impurities'. This points to the period of the Impostor, but God knows best. An authentic hadith mentioned towards the end of Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ anthology mentions that the Impostor travels towards Madinah, and Madinah will quake three times and God will eject from it every unbeliever and hypocrite. It is possible that the hadith refers to the time of the Impostor, but it is also possible that it refers to different periods of time, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2947, the Prophet says: 'I was commanded to come to a town that devours other towns'. This means that the Prophet was commanded to migrate to Madinah and make it his place of residence. Scholars give two meanings to its description as 'devouring other towns'. The first is that Madinah was, in the early days of Islam, the centre and base of the Muslim armies. It was from Madinah that these armies set out, taking over other cities and receiving their resources and captives. The second meaning is that its provisions and income came from these other towns and cities that the Muslims took over.

The Prophet then says: 'They say it is Yathrib, but it is Madinah'. This means that some hypocrites and others call it Yathrib,^{iv} but its names are Madinah, Ṭābah and Ṭaybah. This implies that calling it Yathrib is discouraged. A hadith related by Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal in his al-Musnad anthology makes it clear that calling it Yathrib is reprehensible. 'Īsā ibn Dīnār is quoted as saying that 'a person who calls it Yathrib incurs a recorded sin'. Scholars say that the discouragement behind calling it Yathrib is due to the fact that the name derives from a root that signifies 'blame, remonstration, rebuke, etc.'. It is called Ṭaybah and Ṭābah because these names are pleasant to pronounce, and they are derived from a root that signifies a pleasant smell and perfume. The Prophet used to love pleasant names and disliked names with unpleasant meanings.

Madinah is referred to in the Qur'an as Yathrib, but this is merely quoting the hypocrites and others with sickness of the heart. Scholars say that the Prophet's city has several names, the first of which is Madinah. God says in the Qur'an: 'Some of the people of Madinah...' (9: 101) and 'It does not behove the people of Madinah'. (9: 120) Other names include Ṭābah, Ṭaybah and al-Dār. This last name means 'the home', and it is given this name because it is secure and stable. The other two names mean fine smell. It is also said that these two names are derived from Ṭayyib, which means 'the pure' because it was purified from disbelief in God's Oneness.

Derivation of the word Madinah is either dāna or madana. The first means 'to obey', hence dīn, i.e., religion means obedience. The second means to stay in a place.

Hadith No. 2949 states: 'A Bedouin gave a pledge of allegiance to God's Messenger (peace be upon him). The Bedouin then fell ill. He went to the Prophet and said: "Muhammad, release me from my pledge". The Prophet refused. He went again and said: "Release me from my pledge". The Prophet refused. He went once more and said: "Release me from my pledge". The Prophet refused. The Bedouin then departed. God's Messenger said: "Madinah is like a fire: it gets rid of impurity and lets the good element shine".'

Scholars say that the Prophet did not release him from his pledge because it is not permissible for one who embraces Islam to abandon it. Nor is it permissible for one who migrates to join the Prophet (peace be upon him) and who pledges to migrate to join him to abandon his migration and settle in his original place of abode or a different place. This Bedouin was one who migrated to join the Prophet and pledged to stay with him. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'It is also possible that this Bedouin gave his pledge to the Prophet after the fall of Makkah, when migration to join the Prophet was over. Hence, his pledge was only the pledge of embracing Islam. Hence the Prophet did not release him'.

The correct view, however, is the first one, but God knows best.

The hadith concludes with: ‘Madinah is like a fire: it gets rid of impurity and lets the good element shine’. This means that those whose faith is complete and pure remain in Madinah, while those whose faith is suspect do not stay in Madinah.

Hadith No. 2951 quotes the Prophet: ‘God, the Exalted, has named Madinah Ṭābah’. This means that calling it by this name is desirable, but this does not exclude using its other names. In several instances in the Qur’an, it is referred to as Madinah. Also, in hadith No. 2950 the Prophet calls it Ṭaybah. We explained the meanings of all these hadiths, but God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 2951 starts: ‘Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd, Hannād al-Sariy and Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated’. This is how it occurs in most copies. However, in some copies the name of Abu Kurayb is added after Hannād al-Sariy.

Text Explanation

Considering that the meanings of these hadiths are included in the previous chapters, Imam al-Nawawī has very little to say about them. He merely states that ‘whoever intends harming the people of Madinah’ may be a reference to one who is aiming to attack it. However, other possibilities may also apply.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 4952 includes: “‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Yuḥannis reported to me; from Abu ‘Abdullāh al-Qarrāz’. This is his correct name, and it is entered correctly in all copies in our areas and in most copies of the western provinces [i.e., North Africa and Andalusia]. However, in some copies, it occurs as ‘Ubaydullāh, but this is wrong. His grandfather is Yuḥannis, but it is also pronounced as Yuḥannas.

Abu ‘Abdullāh al-Qarrāz’s name is Dīnār, as it occurs in the chain of hadith No. 2955. He is called al-Qarrāz because he sold the commodity called qurḥ, which is used in the tanning of animal hide.

CHAPTER 90

RESIDENCE IN MADINAH ENCOURAGED

He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Syria shall be liberated, and some people will leave Madinah in haste with their families. Text Explanation

In both versions of this hadith, the Prophet uses the word yabussūn or yubissūn, which is rendered as leaving or coming 'in haste'. Linguists explain it in several ways. Ibrāhīm al-Ḥarbī says it means they encourage people to leave and settle in more fertile lands. Abu 'Ubayd says it means they drive their camels. Ibn Wahb says it means they speak to people about the more comfortable life in these areas, encouraging them to leave Madinah and settle there. This is as mentioned in hadith No. 2946, in which the Prophet says: 'People will witness a time when a person will call to his cousin and his relative: "Come over to a life of plenty".' Al-Dāwūdī says it means that people drive their mounts to Madinah, raising dust behind them, and they tempt the residents of Madinah to migrate as they speak to them about the easy life in these areas. This meaning is far-fetched, or rather false. The correct meaning is that the Prophet is speaking of people who would carry their families and travel in haste to these areas of plenty, which the Prophet said would be liberated from their oppressive rulers.

Scholars have said that this hadith includes a miracle as the Prophet tells of the liberation of these areas, and that people will leave Madinah and migrate, with their families, in haste. These areas were definitely liberated in the order the Prophet mentioned. All this took place, by the grace of God. All praise is due to Him. The hadiths again highlight the merit of residing in Madinah, enduring its tough life and the hardships involved in living there.

WHEN THE PEOPLE OF MADINAH WILL LEAVE

[2960-498]. (Dar al-Salam 3202) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated to me: Abu Ṣafwān narrated; from Yūnus ibn Yazīd [H]. Also, Ḥarmalah ibn Yaḥyā narrated to me (his text); Ibn Wahb reported; Yūnus reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; from Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib; that he heard Abu Hurayrah say: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said about Madinah: “Its people will leave when it is in its best condition, making it available to the wild”, meaning wild animals and birds.

Muslim said: ‘Abu Ṣafwān is ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Abd al-Malik, the orphan Ibn Jurayj took under his care, looking after him for ten years’.

[2961-499]. (Dar al-Salam 3203) ‘Abd al-Malik ibn Shu‘ayb ibn al-Layth narrated to me: my father narrated to me; from my grandfather; ‘Uqayl ibn Khālid narrated to me; from Ibn Shihāb; he said: Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib reported to me; that Abu Hurayrah said: ‘I heard God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) say: “They will leave Madinah in its best condition. Only the wild (meaning wild animals and birds) haunt it. Then two shepherds from Muzaynah set out aiming for Madinah, shouting at their sheep. They will find it deserted. When they reach Thaniyyat al-Wadā‘, they will drop on their face”.’

Text Explanation

It appears that the Prophet is speaking about an event that will occur close to the Last Hour when the Day of Judgement is imminent. This is clear from the mention of the two shepherds from Muzaynah. They drop on their faces as they are overtaken by the Last Hour. They are the last to be resurrected as confirmed in al-Bukhari's Ṣaḥīḥ. This is the apparent meaning and is the one that we choose.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This is what happened in the early period of Islam. This is one of the miracles of the Prophet. Madinah was left in its best condition when the capital of the Muslim state, the seat of the caliphate, moved to Syria, then to Iraq. At that time, Madinah was in its best condition from the viewpoints of faith and living conditions. As for faith, it had a large number of scholars who attained the highest grades, and as for conditions, it was well populated, well cultivated and its people lived in plenty'. He added that historians mention this because of the events of strife that subsequently occurred, when people were in fear and most people of Madinah left, abandoning its farm produce, or most of it, to wild animals. It was deserted for a while, then people started to return. Its condition today is close to this, with its outskirts ruined'. This is what Qadi 'Iyāḍ said, but God knows best.

In the second hadith, the Prophet says that the two shepherds will find Madinah deserted. The Prophet used the word waḥsh to indicate such desertion. Ibrāhīm al-Ḥarbī says that when it describes a land, this word means empty. The correct meaning of the hadith is that they find wild animals in it, as mentioned in al-Bukhari's version. The same word waḥsh means 'beast'. It originally refers to any animal that cannot be domesticated. Ibn al-Murābiṭ is quoted by Qadi ‘Iyāḍ as mentioning that the shepherds will find that their own sheep became wild, either they are transformed into beasts, or that they become uncontrollable, scared by noises. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ disagrees with this interpretation, stating that the pronoun in ‘they find it deserted’ applies to Madinah, not to the sheep. This is correct, and Ibn al-Murābiṭ’s explanation is wrong, but God knows best.

A GARDEN OF HEAVEN

[2963-501]. (Dar al-Salam 3205) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated: 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Muhammad al-Madanī reported; from Yazīd ibn al-Hād; from Abu Bakr; from 'Abbād ibn Tamīm; from 'Abdullāh ibn Zayd al-Anṣārī; that he heard God's Messenger (peace be upon him) say: 'In between my platform and my home is a garden of Heaven'.

 مِئْبَرِي وَبَيْتِي رَوْضَةٌ مِنْ رِيَاضِ الْجَنَّةِ» .

[2964-502]. (Dar al-Salam 3206) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb and Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated:ⁱⁱ both said: Yahyā ibn Sa‘īd narrated; from ‘Ubaydullāh [H]. Also, Ibn Numayr narrated; my father narrated; ‘Ubaydullāh narrated; from Khubayb ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān; from Ḥafṣ ibn ‘Āṣim; from Abu Hurayrah that God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: ‘The place in between my home and my platform is one of the gardens of Heaven. My platform is over my pond’.

حَدَّثَنَا زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ، وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْمُثَنَّى، قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ
 سَعِيدٍ، عَنْ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ ثَمِيرٍ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبِي، حَدَّثَنَا عُبَيْدُ اللَّهِ،
 عَنْ حُبَيْبِ بْنِ عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ، عَنْ حَفْصِ بْنِ عَاصِمٍ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ،
 أَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ: «مَا بَيْنَ بَيْتِي وَمِئْبَرِي
 رَوْضَةٌ مِنْ رِيَاضِ الْجَنَّةِ، وَمِئْبَرِي عَلَى حَوْضِي» .

Text Explanation

Scholars have explained this hadith in two ways: 1) that the place itself will be transferred into Heaven, and 2) that worship there leads to Heaven. Al-Ṭabarī said that ‘my home' in this context is interpreted in two ways. One interpretation mentioned by Zayd ibn Aslam is that it means the Prophet's grave. The other interpretation is that it means his actual home. Al-Ṭabarī adds that the two interpretations are consistent with each other because the Prophet was buried in his own apartment.

In the last hadith the Prophet said: 'My platform, i.e., minbar, is over my pond'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'The majority of scholars are in agreement that the statement refers to the platform on which he stood in his lifetime. This is the more apparent meaning. Many scholars deny that it means anything else. However, some say that on the Day of Judgement the Prophet will have a platform over his pool. It is also said that to aim to be close to his platform and do good deeds will set the way open to reach his pool and drink from it, but God knows best.'

Text Explanation

In these hadiths the Prophet states that a love relationship exists between Mount Uhud, which overlooks Madinah, and the Muslim community. Scholars have said that it means that the people of the mountain, who are the people of Madinah, have this mutual loving relationship with the Prophet. The true meaning is the apparent one which means that the mountain itself has been given a special quality by God, enabling it to distinguish between people and to love the Muslim community. We explained this hadith earlier, but God knows best.

[2970-507]. (Dar al-Salam 3211) Ishāq ibn Manṣūr narrated to me:ⁱⁱ ‘Īsā ibn al-Mundhir al-Ḥimṣī narrated; Muhammad ibn Ḥarb narrated; al-Zubaydī narrated; from al-Zuhri; from Abu Salamah ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān and Abu ‘Abdullāh al-Agharr, the Juhaynīs mawlā (who was a companion of Abu Hurayrah); that they both heard Abu Hurayrah say: ‘A prayer in God’s Messenger’s Mosque is better than one thousand prayers in other mosques except the Inviolable Mosque. God’s Messenger is the last of the prophets and his mosque is the last mosque’.

Abu Salamah and Abu ‘Abdullāh said: ‘We had no doubt that Abu Hurayrah was stating a hadith by God’s Messenger (peace be upon him), and because of this we did not confirm with Abu Hurayrah that it was a hadith. After Abu Hurayrah died, we discussed this and blamed ourselves for not having checked with Abu Hurayrah so that he could attribute the words to God's Messenger, stating if he had heard it from him. As we were thus engaged, 'Abdullāh ibn Ibrāhīm ibn Qārīḡ joined us. We mentioned the hadith and what we neglected of its confirmation with Abu Hurayrah. 'Abdullāh ibn Ibrāhīm said to us: "I bear witness that I heard Abu Hurayrah say: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "I am the last of prophets and my mosque is the last mosque".'"

Text Explanation

In these hadiths the Prophet says: ‘One prayer in this, my mosque, is better than one thousand prayers elsewhere, except for the Inviolable Mosque’. Scholars differ as to what is meant by the exception and their disagreement is in line with their disagreement on which of the two cities is better: Makkah or Madinah. The view of al-Shāfi‘ī and the great majority of scholars is that Makkah is better than Madinah and the mosque in Makkah is better than the one in Madinah. Mālik and a group of scholars say the opposite. Al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars say that the hadith means that a prayer in the Prophet’s Mosque is better than prayer elsewhere, with the exception of the Inviolable Mosque where a prayer is better than its equivalent in my mosque’. Mālik and the scholars who share his view understand the hadith as meaning: ‘except the Inviolable Mosque; for a prayer in my mosque is better than its equivalent in the Inviolable Mosque by less than one thousand’. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘They unanimously agree that the place where the Prophet is buried is the best spot on earth, and that Makkah and Madinah are the best places on earth except for the Prophet’s place of burial. ‘Umar, some of the Prophet’s Companions, Mālik and the majority of Madinah scholars say that Madinah is superior. The scholars of Makkah and Kufah, al-Shāfi‘ī and the two Mālikī scholars Ibn Wahb and Ibn Ḥabīb maintain that Makkah is superior.

Our scholars’ argument in support of their view that Makkah is better includes the hadith narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Adiy ibn al-Ḥamrā,’ who confirms that he heard the Prophet say as he was on his she-camel in Makkah: ‘By God, you are the best of God’s earth, and the dearest land on earth to God. Had it not been that I was forcibly made to leave you, I would not have left you'. This hadith is related by al-Tirmidhī and al-Nasā'ī. Al-Tirmidhī said that it is of the grade of 'good and authentic'. Moreover, 'Abdullāh ibn al-Zubayr said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "One prayer in this my mosque is better than one thousand prayers in other mosques, except for the Inviolable Mosque. And a prayer in the Inviolable Mosque is better than one hundred prayers in my mosque".' This hadith is of the 'good' grade, and it is related by Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal in his anthology, al-Musnad, and al-Bayhaqī and others with a chain of transmission attaining the grade 'good', but God knows best.

Our school considers that this preferability is not limited to offering the obligatory prayers in these two mosques. It applies to both obligatory and recommended prayers. This is also stated by Muṭarrif, a Mālikī scholar. On the other hand, al-Ṭaḥāwī said that it is limited to obligatory prayers. This is contrary to the fact that these authentic hadiths are of general import, but God knows best.

It should be clear that prayer in the Madinah Mosque is better than one thousand prayers elsewhere, other than the Inviolable Mosque, i.e., the Ḥaram or Grand Mosque in Makkah. Such a prayer is better than one thousand others, as these hadiths make clear. Scholars say that this refers to the reward God grants for such prayer. The reward God grants for a prayer in this mosque is more than a thousand times the reward He grants for a prayer elsewhere. This is not extended to compensatory prayers. If a person has missed two obligatory prayers and he offers one prayer in the Prophet's Mosque, it will not redeem both missed prayers. There is no disagreement among scholars on this point, but God knows best.

It should be clear that this preference applies to the Prophet's Mosque itself, i.e., the mosque as it was in his own time, not to the extensions added later.^v Therefore, worshippers should be keen to pray there. I highlighted this in my book on the hajj and its duties, but God knows best.

Maymūnah, the Prophet's wife, gives a woman who pledged to pray in Jerusalem a fatwa that she may redeem her pledge by praying in the Prophet's Mosque. She cites the hadith as her evidence. This supports the most correct view on this question: If a person pledges to pray in the mosque in Madinah or in al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem, does it have to be there? There are two views, and the more correct one is that it does. To pray anywhere else is not enough to fulfil a pledge. The other view says that it does not have to be there. Wherever one prays fulfils one's pledge.

Let us take the first view that the prayer must be offered there. Suppose that a person pledges to pray in one of these two mosques, the Prophet's and al-Aqsa, then he proposes to pray in the other mosque, is this acceptable? Here we have three views: (1) it is acceptable; (2) it is not acceptable, and (3) (which is the most correct) if the pledge were to pray in al-Aqsa Mosque, he may offer it in the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah, but not the reverse, and God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 2973 includes ‘Layth narrated; from Nāfi‘; from Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Ma‘bad; from Ibn ‘Abbās’, and then it mentions Maymūnah’s report. This is one of the hadiths in Muslim’s Ṣaḥīḥ that have been questioned because of a problem in the transmission chain. Hadith masters say that the mention of Ibn ‘Abbās as its narrator is an error. The correct chain is ‘from Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh from Maymūnah’. This is what is learnt from the narration of both al-Layth and Ibn Jurayj from Nāfi‘, from Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh, from Maymūnah, without any mention of Ibn ‘Abbās. Likewise, al-Bukhari relates the hadith in his Ṣaḥīḥ: ‘from al-Layth, from Nāfi‘, from Ibrāhīm, from Maymūnah’, without mentioning Ibn ‘Abbās. In his book al-‘Ilal, al-Dāraquṭnī says: ‘Some narrate the hadith from Ibn ‘Abbās, from Maymūnah’, but this is invalid.

In his work al-Tārīkh al-Kabīr, al-Bukhari says: ‘Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Ma‘bad ibn al-‘Abbās ibn ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib, from his father and Maymūnah’, adding this hadith through al-Layth and Ibn Jurayj, without any mention of Ibn ‘Abbās.^{vi} He then adds: ‘Al-Makkī told us that Ibn Jurayj heard Nāfi‘ say that Ibrāhīm ibn Ma‘bad narrated that Ibn ‘Abbās narrated to him from Maymūnah.’ Al-Bukhari comments: ‘Mentioning Ibn ‘Abbās here is incorrect’.

Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said that some scholars suggest that the correct way is ‘that Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Ma‘bad ibn ‘Abbās said: A woman complained of an illness...’. He adds that Muslim mentions earlier in this chapter the hadith narrated by ‘Abdullāh, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar. He also mentions the narration of Mūsā al-Juhanī, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar and the narration of Ayyūb, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar. This is also questioned by al-Dāraquṭnī who says that this hadith is not known to be of Ayyūb’s narration. He goes on to say that Nāfi’s narration is, therefore, defective. He adds: al-Layth and Ibn Jurayj report it differently, from Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Ma‘bad, from Maymūnah. Muslim mentions both versions, but al-Bukhari does not mention Nāfi’s narration in his Ṣaḥīḥ at all. Yet, in his Tārīkh, al-Bukhari mentions the narration of ‘Abdullāh and Mūsā from Nāfi’. He adds that the first one is more authentic. He means the narration by Ibrāhīm ibn ‘Abdullāh, from Maymūnah. Thus, he agrees with al-Dāraquṭnī, but God knows best.

My view is that both versions may be authentic, as Muslim has considered. The disagreement we have mentioned does not preclude this. Nevertheless, there is no disagreement on the fact that the text of the hadith is authentic, but God knows best.

إِبِلْيَاءَ» .

Text Explanation

The Aqsa Mosque is called by this name because it is far from the mosque in Makkah. Al-Aqsa means ‘faraway’.

These hadiths highlight the importance of these three mosques and the commendable action of undertaking a journey to visit any of them. Scholars say that the hadiths mean that there is no merit or advantage in travelling to visit any particular mosque other than these three. Shaykh Abu Muhammad al-Juwaynī, of our Shāfi‘ī School, said that it is forbidden to undertake a journey to any other mosque, but this is wrong.

We have already spoken about the meaning of these hadiths in Chapter 74, discussing a woman’s travel to perform pilgrimage and other journeys and the need to have the company of a close relative, i.e., a maḥram.

THE MOSQUE FOUNDED ON PIETY

[2977-514]. (Dar al-Salam 3221-3222) Muhammad ibn Ḥātim narrated to me: Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd narrated; from Ḥumayd al-Kharrāṭ. He said: ‘I heard Abu Salamah ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān say: “‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī passed by me, and I said to him: ‘What did you hear your father say about the mosque which was founded on piety?’ He said: ‘My father said: “I visited God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) in the home of one of his wives and I asked: ‘Messenger of God, which of the two mosques is the one founded on piety?’ He took a handful of gravel and threw it on the ground, then said: ‘It is this mosque of yours’ (meaning the Madinah Mosque).”’ I said: ‘I bear witness that I heard your father mentioning it in this way’.”’

حَدَّثَنِي مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ حَاتِمٍ، حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، عَنْ حُمَيْدِ الْخَرَّاطِ
قَالَ: سَمِعْتُ أَبَا سَلَمَةَ بْنَ عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ قَالَ: مَرَّ بِي عَبْدُ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنُ
أَبِي سَعِيدٍ الْخُدْرِيِّ. قَالَ قُلْتُ لَهُ: كَيْفَ سَمِعْتَ أَبَاكَ يَذْكُرُ فِي
الْمَسْجِدِ الَّذِي أُسِّسَ عَلَى التَّقْوَى؟ قَالَ قَالَ أَبِي: دَخَلْتُ عَلَى

رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فِي بَيْتِ بَعْضِ نِسَائِهِ فَقُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ، أَيُّ الْمَسْجِدَيْنِ الَّذِي أُسِّسَ عَلَى التَّقْوَى؟ قَالَ فَأَخَذَ كَفًّا مِنْ حَصْبَاءٍ فَصَرَبَ بِهِ الْأَرْضَ، ثُمَّ قَالَ: «هُوَ مَسْجِدُكُمْ هَذَا»، لِمَسْجِدِ الْمَدِينَةِ. قَالَ: فَقُلْتُ أَشْهَدُ أَنِّي سَمِعْتُ أَبَاكَ هَكَذَا يَذْكُرُهُ.

Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Sa'īd ibn 'Amr al-Ash'athī narrated: Hātim ibn Ismā'il (Sa'īd said: 'reported' and Abu Bakr said: 'narrated'); from Hūmayd; from Abu Salamah; from Abu Sa'īd; from the Prophet (peace be upon him): the same text. He did not mention 'Abd al-Rahmān ibn Abi Sa'īd in this chain of transmission.

وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، وَسَعِيدُ بْنُ عَمْرِو الْأَشْعَثِيُّ، (قَالَ سَعِيدُ أَخْبَرَنَا وَقَالَ أَبُو بَكْرٍ حَدَّثَنَا) حَاتِمُ بْنُ إِسْمَاعِيلَ، عَنْ حُمَيْدٍ، عَنْ أَبِي سَلَمَةَ، عَنْ أَبِي سَعِيدٍ، عَنِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ بِمِثْلِهِ. وَلَمْ يَذْكُرْ عَبْدَ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنُ أَبِي سَعِيدٍ فِي الْإِسْنَادِ

This hadith refers to the mosque mentioned in the Qur'an: 'Only a house of worship that from the very first day has been founded on piety is worthy of you standing to pray there. In it are men who love to grow in purity, for God loves those who purify themselves'. (9: 108) This hadith makes it clear that it is definitely the Prophet's Mosque in Madinah. It refutes what some commentators say about it being the Qubā' mosque. That the Prophet took a handful of gravel and threw it on the ground was a gesture to emphasize what he said in answer.

Text Explanation

Qubā’ was very close to Madinah, but now it forms part of it. These hadiths highlight the merit of this area and the mosque that was built there as also prayer therein. They also stress that it is perfectly permissible to go there using a means of transport or on foot. This applies to all such places. The hadiths also make it clear that any voluntary prayer offered during the day should be two rak’ahs at a time, in the same way as night worship. This is the view of our Shāfi’ī School and the majority of scholars, but Abu Ḥanīfah differs on this point. We discussed this in the Book of Prayer.

The hadiths mention that the Prophet used to visit Qubā’ ‘every Saturday’. This shows that it is permissible to make such visits on particular days. This is right and confirmed by the majority of scholars. Ibn Maslamah al-Mālikī, however, expressed discouragement. Scholars said that he might not have been aware of these hadiths, but God knows best. To God belongs all praise for His favours. To Him we appeal for guidance and protection from error.

THE DESIRABILITY OF MARRIAGE

[2986-1]. (Dar al-Salam 3231) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā al-Tamīmī, Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Muhammad ibn al-‘Alā’ al-Hamdānī narrated: all from Abu Mu‘āwiyah (Yaḥyā’s text); Abu Mu‘āwiyah reported; from al-A‘mash; from Ibrāhīm; from ‘Alqamah. He said: ‘I was walking with ‘Abdullāh at Mina when ‘Uthmān met him. They were in conversation and ‘Uthmān said to him: “Abu ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, shall we find you a young woman to marry. Maybe she will remind you of some of your past days”. ‘Abdullāh said: “As you are saying this, God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said to us: ‘Young people, whoever of you can meet marriage requirements, should get married. For marriage helps to lower one’s gaze and maintain chastity. Whoever cannot, may resort to fasting, and it will be of help’.”’

حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى التَّمِيمِيُّ، وَأَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ
الْعَلَاءِ الْهَمْدَانِيُّ، جَمِيعًا عَنْ أَبِي مُعَاوِيَةَ (وَاللَّفْظُ لِيَحْيَى) أَخْبَرَنَا أَبُو
مُعَاوِيَةَ، عَنِ الْأَعْمَشِ، عَنْ إِبْرَاهِيمَ، عَنْ عَلْقَمَةَ قَالَ: كُنْتُ أَمْشِي مَعَ

عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بِمَنَى، فَلَقِيَهُ عُثْمَانُ، فَقَامَ مَعَهُ يُحَدِّثُهُ، فَقَالَ لَهُ عُثْمَانُ: يَا أَبَا عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ، أَلَا تُرَوِّجُكَ جَارِيَةً شَابَةً، لَعَلَّهَا تُذَكِّرُكَ بَعْضَ مَا مَضَى مِنْ رَمَانِكَ؟ قَالَ فَقَالَ عَبْدُ اللَّهِ: لَيْنُ قُلْتُ ذَاكَ لَقَدْ قَالَ لَنَا رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «يَا مَعْشَرَ الشَّبَابِ، مَنْ اسْتَطَاعَ مِنْكُمْ الْبَاءَةَ فَلْيَتَزَوَّجْ، فَإِنَّهُ أَغْضُ لِلْبَصْرِ، وَأَخْصَنُ لِلْفَرْجِ. وَمَنْ لَمْ يَسْتَطِعْ فَعَلَيْهِ بِالصَّوْمِ فَإِنَّهُ لَهُ وَجَاءٌ» .

[2987-2]. (Dar al-Salam 3232) ‘Uthmān ibn Abi Shaybah nar-rated: Jarīr narrated; from al-A‘mash; from Ibrāhīm; from ‘Alqamah. He said: ‘I was walking with ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd at Mina when ‘Uthmān ibn ‘Affān met him. He said: “Abu ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, come over”. He wanted to speak to him alone. When ‘Abdullāh realized that he did not have any private business, he said to me: “Come over, ‘Alqamah”. I went to them. ‘Uthmān said to him: “Abu ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, shall we find you a virgin woman to marry. Perhaps this will give you back some of what you used to have”. ‘Abdullāh said: “As you say this...”.’ He added the same text as Abu Mu‘āwiyah’s narration.

فَلَمَّا رَأَى عَبْدُ اللَّهِ أَنْ لَيْسَتْ لَهُ حَاجَةٌ - قَالَ - قَالَ لِي: تَعَالَ يَا عَلْقَمَةُ. قَالَ: فَجِئْتُ فَقَالَ لَهُ عُثْمَانُ: أَلَا تُرَوِّجُكَ يَا أَبَا عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ جَارِيَةً يَكْرًا، لَعَلَّهُ يَرْجِعُ إِلَيْكَ مِنْ نَفْسِكَ مَا كُنْتَ تَعْهَدُ؟ فَقَالَ عَبْدُ اللَّهِ: لَيْنُ قُلْتُ ذَلِكَ.. . فَذَكَرَ بِمِثْلِ حَدِيثِ أَبِي مُعَاوِيَةَ.

[2988-3]. (Dar al-Salam 3233) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Abu Kurayb narrated: both said: Abu Mu'āwiyah narrated; from al-A'mash; from 'Umārah ibn 'Umayr; from 'Abd al-Rahmān ibn Yazīd; from 'Abdullāh. He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said to us: "Young people, whoever of you can meet its requirement, should get married. For marriage helps to lower one's gaze and maintain chastity. was a young man at the time. He mentioned a hadith and I thought he narrated it especially for me. He said: “God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said...” the same text as Abu Mu‘āwiyah’s narration. He added: ‘It was only a short while before I got married’.

Some said: “I shall not marry”. Others said: “I shall not eat meat” and others still said: “I shall not sleep on a bed”. He praised God and glorified Him, then said: “How is it that some people say such-and-such? As for me, I pray and sleep, I fast on some days but not on others and I marry women. Whoever dislikes my way does not belong to me”.’

Text Explanation

Imam al-Nawawī starts with a detailed discussion of the Arabic word nikāḥ, outlining its linguistic meaning and etymology, before highlighting its treatment by Fiqh scholars. The conclusion is that the word is used in Arabic in two senses: the marriage contract and sexual intercourse. Fiqh scholars consider it in three ways, outlined by Qadi Ḥusayn of our Shāfi'ī School. The most correct of these three views is that its real significance is the marriage contract, but it is used figuratively to mean intercourse. This is the view confirmed as correct by Qadi Abu al-Ṭayyib and endorsed by the leading Shāfi'ī scholar, 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Mutawallī and others. This is how it is used in the Qur'an and the hadiths. The second view is that its real sense is sexual intercourse, but it is figuratively used to mean marriage. This is Abu Ḥanīfah's view. The third view is that both senses are correct, but God knows best.

In the first hadith, No. 2986, the Prophet says: 'Young people, who-ever of you can meet marriage requirements should get married. For marriage helps to lower one's gaze and maintain chastity. Whoever cannot, may resort to fasting, and it will be of help'. The Prophet uses the words ma'shar al-shabāb, indicating that his address applies to all young people. The age group addressed here is between puberty and thirty years. The Prophet expresses his reference to marriage figuratively, using the word bā'ah, which has different meanings. Hence, scholars have two views concerning the exact meaning of the hadith. Yet both views give the same message. The first is that the word is intended in its linguistic sense, which is 'sexual intercourse'. Hence, the Prophet's words would mean whoever is able to meet what marriage entails should get married. A person who cannot afford this should resort to fasting in order to keep his sexual desire in check. This is why the Prophet addresses the young people because they are the ones at a stage of life when sexual desire is at its strongest. The second view is that the word bā'ah is used in the sense of the requirements attendant on it. Scholars who share this view argue that the hadith adds: 'Whoever cannot, may resort to fasting'. A man who cannot have intercourse does not need to fast in order to keep his desire in check.

The hadith orders people to get married if they can afford it and desire it. This is an order of encouragement, not an obligation. It is not obligatory for anyone to get married, whether one fears to be troubled by desire or not.

This is agreed upon by all scholars. It is not known that any considers marriage obligatory except Dāwūd and the Zāhirī School, as well as one report from Ahmad. They say that a person who fears being troubled by sexual desire must get married. They add that the obligation applies once only in one's lifetime. The Zāhirīs further add that what is obligatory is marriage, but not necessarily intercourse. They claim that this is the apparent meaning of this hadith and other hadiths, as well as the Qur'an.

The argument of the majority of scholars cites the Qur'anic verse: 'You may marry of other women as may be agreeable to you, two or three or four. But if you fear that you will not be able to maintain fairness between them, then marry only one, or those whom your right hands possess'. (4: 3) The verse gives a choice between marriage or a bondswoman partner. Imam al-Māzarī said that this is a valid argument in support of the majority view because God gives this choice. Had marriage been obligatory the choice would not have been given. Scholars of legal theory make clear that there can be no question of choice between what is obligatory and what is not. To offer such a choice negates the obligation and renders a person who omits it free of sin.

In hadith No. 2991 the Prophet says: 'Whoever dislikes my way does not belong to me'. This refers to a person who turns away from the Prophet's sunnah believing in what is at variance with it, but God knows best.

The question arises as to which is more preferable: marriage or celibacy. Our scholars say that people may be classified into four groups: 1) Those who have the desire to get married and are able to afford it. These are encouraged to marry; 2) Those who neither find the desire nor are able to afford marriage. For these, marriage is discouraged; 3) Those who have the desire but cannot afford it. Marriage is discouraged for these, and they are recommended to fast in order to keep their desire in check; and 4) Those who can afford marriage but do not have the urge to get married. The view of the Shāfi‘ī School is that for such people it is preferable not to marry, but rather to give more time to worship. We may not say that for them marriage is makrūh, i.e., reprehensible, but we say non-marriage is preferable. However, according to the Ḥanafī School and some Shāfi‘ī and Mālikī scholars, marriage is preferable for this fourth section, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 2986, ‘Uthmān ibn ‘Affān says to ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd: ‘Shall we find you a young woman to marry. Maybe she will remind you of some of your past days’. This shows that it is appropriate to make such a suggestion to a friend who does not have such a wife, if he is fit to marry her, as explained above. It also shows that it is preferable to marry a woman in her prime because she is better able to give her husband what is intended in marriage of satisfying instinctive desire and providing a good family atmosphere. Moreover, she is better able to adapt to the good things her husband likes.

‘Uthmān says by way of encouragement: ‘Maybe she will remind you of some of your past days’. This means that she would bring back some of his earlier strength and refresh his vigour.

In hadith No. 2987, ‘Uthmān called ‘Abdullāh and spoke to him privately. This shows that it is preferable to keep such conversations private, as some people may feel shy talking about this in public. ‘Uthmān suggests that ‘Abdullāh should marry a virgin, which again shows this to be preferable.

In hadith No. 2989 ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Yazīd says: ‘I visited ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd with my uncle ‘Alqamah and al-Aswad’. This is how this sentence occurs in all copies. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ says that in some copies, it occurs in the following wording: ‘I visited ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd with my uncles: ‘Alqamah and al-Aswad’. This is obviously wrong because al-Aswad is ‘Abd al-Raḥmān’s brother, and ‘Alqamah ibn Qays is the uncle of both.

Hadith No. 2991 mentions that the Prophet addressed the people saying: ‘How is it that some people say such-and-such?’ This was his practice when he objected to some practice and needed to warn against it. He would mention the action, criticizing it, without naming who did it. This reflects his refined manners. What he had to say against the action itself applies to its doer and to all those present, as well as anyone who may be later informed of it. If the Prophet merely rebuked the perpetrator of that action in public, no such advantage would be gained.

In hadiths No. 2992, 2993 and 2994, the Prophet rejects ‘Uthmān ibn Maḥ‘ūn’s intention of remaining celibate. The word used in the hadith to signify celibacy is tabattul, which means to abandon worldly pleasures and to devote oneself to worship. The Prophet rejected the idea and prohibited ‘Uthmān from doing so. According to our scholars, this is understood to apply to a person who desires marriage and can afford it, as explained above. It also applies to one who suffers as a result of devoting too much time to worship and endures hardship in the process of fulfilling what is arduous. If a person can abstain from normal and permissible desires and pleasures, without harming himself or neglecting the rights due to any wife or other people, then he may not be discouraged from his purpose but rather, he should be encouraged.

These hadiths add: 'Had he been permitted, we would have castrated ourselves'. This means that if the Prophet permitted 'Uthmān ibn Maz'ūn to abandon marriage and other pleasures we would have done the same, and we would have resorted to castrating ourselves so as to suppress our sexual desires and be able to devote our time to worship. This is understood to mean that, at the time, they thought that such action was permissible. Their thought process, however, was wrong, for castration is forbidden for any human being, whether young or old. Al-Baghawī adds: 'It is also forbidden to castrate any animal that it is forbidden to eat. As for animals that may be eaten by humans, it is permissible to castrate them when they are young, but not when they grow up', but God knows best.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 2997 explains the first hadith in this chapter. What it means is that if a person feels a sexual urge on seeing a woman, he should go to his wife and have sex with her so as to satisfy his desire and be able to attend to whatever he needs to do. In hadith No. 2995, the Prophet gives a figurative image as he says that 'a woman advances in the image of a devil and retreats in the image of a devil'. Scholars say this refers to the woman's desire to be attractive and admired, realizing that by nature a man loves to look at women and is attracted by whatever they have. As such, there is this common aspect of offering temptation and painting what is forbidden as attractive and enjoyable. We may deduce from this that a woman should not mix with men except for what is necessary, and that a man should lower his gaze and turn away.

The same hadith, No. 2995, says: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) saw a woman. He went to his wife, Zaynab, as she was tanning a piece of leather, and satisfied his desire. He then joined his companions and said to them...'. Scholars say that the Prophet did this in order to explain to people what they should do. His instruction was by word and action. The hadith makes clear that it is permissible for a man to desire to have sex with his wife during the day or at any time, even if she is busy doing something that can be put off for a while. This is because a man's desire may be strong and unless he satisfies it, he may experience some negative effect, either physically or mentally, but God knows best.

THE FINAL PROHIBITION OF TEMPORARY MARRIAGE

[2998-11]. (Dar al-Salam 3243) Muhammad ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Numayr al-Hamdānī narrated:¹ my father, Wakī‘ and Ibn Bishr narrated; from Ismā‘īl; from Qays. He said: ‘I heard ‘Abdullāh say: “We used to go on military expeditions with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him), and we had no wives. We thought, should we castrate ourselves? The Prophet commanded us not to do that. He then permitted us to marry a woman temporarily in return for [something like] a garment. ‘Abdullāh then recited the verse that says: “Believers, do not forbid yourselves the good things God has made lawful to you. Do not exceed the bounds, God does not love those who exceed the bounds”. (5: 87)’

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ بْنِ ثُمَيْرٍ الْهَمْدَانِيُّ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبِي، وَوَكَيْعٌ، وَابْنُ بَشِيرٍ، عَنْ إِسْمَاعِيلَ، عَنْ قَيْسٍ قَالَ: سَمِعْتُ عَبْدَ اللَّهِ يَقُولُ: كُنَّا نَعْرُو مَعَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، لَيْسَ لَنَا نِسَاءٌ. فَقُلْنَا: أَلَا تَسْتَخْصِي؟ فَتَهَاتَا عَنْ ذَلِكَ، ثُمَّ رَخَّصَ لَنَا أَنْ تَنْكِحَ الْمَرْأَةَ، بِالتَّوْبِ

إِلَى أَجَلٍ. ثُمَّ قَرَأَ عَبْدُ اللَّهِ: «يَا أَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا لَا تَحَرِّمُوا طَيِّبَاتِ مَا أَحَلَّ اللَّهُ لَكُمْ وَلَا تَعْتَدُوا إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَا يُحِبُّ الْمُعْتَدِينَ» .

I set out with a man from my people. I was smarter than him as he was close to being ugly. Each one of us had a cloak, but mine was old and my cousin’s was new and soft. When we were at the lower or higher end of Makkah a woman who looked young and fine in stature met us. We said: “Do you agree to a temporary marriage with one of us?” She said: “What will you give?” Each one of us presented his cloak. She looked at the two of us, and my friend saw her looking to her side. He said: “His cloak is

Text Explanation

Qadi ‘Iyād gives a scholarly explanation of the hadiths included in this chapter, highlighting certain gems, but he also included certain points which are subject to different views. It is our purpose to give a full summary of what he said, then mention the points of difference and point out the view of choice. Qadi ‘Iyād said:

Al-Māzarī said: It is confirmed that temporary marriage, i.e., mut‘ah, was permissible in the early days of Islam. It is also confirmed in the authentic hadiths in this chapter that this permission was subsequently abrogated. It is the unanimous verdict that it is forbidden. Only some deviant people still permit it, citing the hadiths that mention it. We have already stated that these hadiths were abrogated and serve no purpose for them. They all cite the verse that says: ‘To those with whom you seek to enjoy marriage, you shall give the dowries due to them’. (4: 24) In Ibn Mas'ūd's version 'you seek to enjoy marriage for a time'. Ibn Mas'ūd's version is odd and totally discarded.^{vi} It cannot apply. Zufar^{vii} said: 'Whoever enters into a temporary marriage, his marriage is deemed permanent'. Thus, he considers the setting of a time period for the marriage as an invalid condition of the marriage contract. Such conditions are discarded, and the marriage remains valid.

Al-Māzarī also said: In Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ, reports of the prohibition of temporary marriage differ, with some saying that the Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited it on the day of the Battle of Khaybar and others saying that it was on the Day of Victory at Makkah. To claim that temporary marriage is permissible because these hadiths are contradictory, which makes them inapplicable, is certainly wrong. There is no contradiction in these hadiths because it is perfectly appropriate that the Prophet should prohibit it at one time, then reassert the prohibition by stating it again on a later occasion so that it became better and more widely known. The repetition on different occasions enables people who did not hear it on the first occasion to learn of it later. In this case, some narrators heard of it at one time and others became aware of it at another time, with each group stating the time they heard it.

All this was stated by Imam al-Māzarī, as quoted by Qadi 'Iyāḍ who goes on to say:

The hadith permitting temporary marriage has been reported by a number of the Prophet's companions.

Muslim relates it as narrated by Ibn Mas'ūd, Ibn 'Abbās, Jābir, Salamah ibn al-Akwa' and Sabrah ibn Ma'bad al-Juhanī. In none of these hadiths is there any mention that the permission was given when they were in residence in Madinah. They all occurred during their travels on military expeditions, which was at a time of need or necessity, as their women were not accompanying them. Besides, their home country was of hot climate, which made them rather impatient when they were away from their wives.

In hadith No. 3017, Ibn Abi 'Amrah said: 'It was a concession granted in the early days of Islam for those who needed it, in the same way as [the concession of eating] carrion...' The same was also reported from Ibn 'Abbās. Muslim relates from Salamah ibn al-Akwa' that it was permitted on the Day of Awṭās and from Sabrah that it was permitted on the Day of Victory at Makkah. The two days are the same. It was subsequently prohibited on the same occasion. In the hadith reported by 'Alī, it was prohibited on the day of the Battle of Khaybar, which was prior to the fall of Makkah. In a different hadith anthology, the Prophet is said to have prohibited it during the Tabuk Expedition, and this is said to have been narrated by Ishāq ibn Rāshid from al-Zuhrī from 'Abdullāh ibn Muhammad ibn 'Alī, from his father, from 'Alī. Yet this is wrong and not confirmed by anyone else. Indeed, the same text is entered by Mālik in al-Muwaṭṭa' as narrated by Sufyān ibn 'Uyaynah, al-'Umari, Yūnus and others, from al-Zuhrī, but it mentions 'the day of the Battle of Khaybar'. This is how Muslim enters it in his Ṣaḥīḥ from several narrators quoting al-Zuhrī. This is indeed the correct version.

Abu Dāwūd relates on the authority of al-Rabī' ibn Sabrah, from his father, that the prohibition took place during the Farewell Pilgrimage. Abu Dāwūd said: 'This is the most authentic of all reports on this issue'. It was also reported from Sabrah that it was permitted during the Farewell Pilgrimage, but then the Prophet declared it forbidden until the Day of Judgement. It is further reported by al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī that it was never permitted except during the compensatory 'umrah. The same sort of report is attributed to Sabrah al-Juhanī.

In his various reports of the hadith stated by Sabrah, Muslim does not mention any date, except in the narrations by Ahmad ibn Sa'īd al-Dārimī, Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm and Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā. In these, the time mentioned is the Year of Victory. Scholars say that the report that it was permitted during the Farewell Pilgrimage is a mistake because there was neither need nor celibacy at the time. Most of the Prophet's Companions were accompanied by their wives on this pilgrimage. What is true, as confirmed in several reports, is that the prohibition of temporary marriage was declared during the Farewell Pilgrimage. Thus, the renewal of the prohibition by the Prophet (peace be upon him) was a means of announcing it to the great number of people present, so that those attending would inform others who were not present during that pilgrimage. The purpose, then, was to ensure that the Shariah and God's message were delivered in full. Indeed, the Prophet emphasized the rulings on several matters, making it clear what was permissible and what was prohibited, stating that temporary marriage was forbidden 'until the Day of Judgement'.

These reports of prohibiting temporary marriage at Khaybar, during the compensatory 'umrah and on the Awṭās Day at the time of the Victory in Makkah, probably mean that the Prophet repeated the prohibition on these occasions. The hadith stating its prohibition at Khaybar is authentic, without doubt, and narrated by solid and reliable narrators. However, in Sufyān's narration [i.e., hadith No. 3021] the hadith says: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) prohibited temporary marriage on the day of [the Battle of] Khaybar and prohibited eating the meat of domestic donkeys'. Some scholars said that there is a stop in this text, and it means that the Prophet prohibited temporary marriage without defining the time of such prohibition, and he prohibited eating donkey meat on the day of Khaybar.^{viii} They, thus, date the prohibition of donkey meat to the day of Khaybar, leaving the prohibition of temporary marriage undated. Thus, they could reconcile the different reports. They add: 'It is more likely, that the prohibition of temporary marriage was in Makkah, and the prohibition of donkey meat was undoubtedly at Khaybar.

This view could hold, if other hadiths by narrators other than Sufyān support it. But it is better, as we have mentioned, that the Prophet declared it forbidden then. What remains in this latter case is the reported permission of temporary marriage during the compensatory 'umrah and on the Day of Victory. It is possible that the Prophet might have permitted it anew as a measure of necessity, then prohibited it for all time. This means that the Prophet prohibited temporary marriage on the Day of Khaybar and during the compensatory 'umrah, then permitted it at the time of the takeover of Makkah as a measure of necessity, before declaring it soon after prohibited for the rest of time. The report that it was permitted during the Farewell Pilgrimage will thus be discarded because it is narrated from Sabrah al-Juhanī. The fact is that solid and reliable narrators have reported from him its permissibility at the time of the Victory at Makkah, while what they reported at the time of the Farewell Pilgrimage is its prohibition. Therefore, what should be upheld from his hadiths is what is agreed upon by the majority of narrators and confirmed by other Companions of the Prophet, which is its prohibition on the Day of Victory at Makkah. Thus, its prohibition during the Farewell Pilgrimage was for re-emphasis and wider circulation.

Al-Ḥasan said that the prohibition occurred during the compensatory 'umrah, neither earlier nor later. However, this statement is refuted by the authentic hadiths stating that it was prohibited on the day of the Battle of Khaybar, which preceded the compensatory 'umrah. These hadiths also state that it was permitted at the time of the Victory at Makkah. This report is attributed to Sabrah al-Juhanī, who is also the narrator of the other reports that are more authentic. Therefore, what is at variance with the authentic is discarded. Some scholars said that the question of temporary marriage is one case that was the subject of prohibition, permission and abrogation twice. But God knows best.

This is what Qadi 'Iyāḍ had to say on this matter. Yet the correct view of choice is that the prohibition and permission occurred twice. It was permissible before the Battle of Khaybar but was prohibited at that time. It was subsequently permitted on the Day of Victory, which is the Day of Awṭās – as the two are consecutive. Three days later, it was forbidden forever, and this prohibition continues till the Day of Judgement.

It is not right to say that the permissibility applies to the time before Khaybar and that the prohibition declared at Khaybar was permanent and re-emphasized on the Day of Victory, without being preceded by a relaxation of the prohibition at the time, as stated by al-Māzarī and Qadi 'Iyāḍ. The hadiths related by Muslim clearly state that there was a permissibility at the time. We cannot drop these as there is no reason to prevent the repetition of permissibility [and subsequent prohibition], but God knows best.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: Scholars are in agreement that this mut'ah meant a temporary marriage for an agreed period and that it does not qualify for inheritance in case of death. The marriage is terminated when the period is over, and no divorce process is needed. Its prohibition is unanimously agreed upon by all scholars, except for the Shia. Ibn 'Abbās used to say that it was permissible, but he is reported to have retracted and changed his view. Scholars are unanimous in that if a temporary marriage is agreed to now, it is ruled null and void, whether the ruling is given before or after consummation. The only exception is Zufar's view we mentioned earlier, stating that the marriage is permanent and the condition attaching it to a stated period is invalid.

Mālikī scholars have different views on whether the mandatory punishment of adultery is inflicted on a person who has sexual intercourse in a temporary marriage arrangement. The view of our school is that the mandatory punishment of adultery does not apply because of the element of contract and the lack of unanimity. This lack of unanimity is based on disagreement among scholars of legal theory regarding the question: when unanimity is achieved after a period of difference, is the difference discarded and the agreement subsequently unanimous? The more correct view upheld by scholars of our Shāfi'ī School is that the difference is not removed, and the question does not become unanimous. This is stated by Qadi Abu Bakr al-Bāqillānī.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'Scholars are unanimous that if a man enters into a normal marriage contract, intending that he would stay with his wife only for a period he keeps to himself, his marriage is correct and legitimate. It is not a temporary or mut'ah marriage. A temporary marriage is one which defines the time condition. However, Mālik said that this is morally unacceptable. Imam al-Awzā'ī expresses an odd view, saying that it is a mut'ah marriage which is devoid of goodness. But God knows best.'

In the first hadith, No. 2298 the Prophet's Companions thought of resorting to castration, but the Prophet prohibited them from doing so. This is consistent with the hadiths in the previous chapter which make castration forbidden as it involves changing God's creation, stopping childbirth and, if done to animals, involves torture, but God knows best. 'Abdullāh ibn Mas'ūd then says: 'He then permitted us to marry a woman temporarily in return for a garment'. This means giving the woman something she accepts, whether a garment or something else. 'Abdullāh then recited the verse that says: 'Believers, do not forbid yourselves the good things God has made lawful to you'. (5: 87) This perhaps indicates that Ibn Mas'ūd might have thought it lawful, as Ibn 'Abbās did, and that he was not aware of the abrogation of its permissibility.

In hadith No. 3001 Jābir and Salamah says: 'God's Messenger's caller came over and said: "God's Messenger permits you to enjoy yourselves", meaning having temporary marriage'. And in the next hadith they report: 'God's Messenger came to us and permitted us temporary marriage'. This may mean that God's Messenger came at the same time as his caller. However, as the second hadith says 'God's Messenger came to us', it is possible that the Prophet passed them later and said the same to them. In hadith No. 3003 the narrator says: 'We had temporary marriage during the Prophet's lifetime, and Abu Bakr's and 'Umar's'. This is understood to mean that whoever had a temporary marriage during the mentioned period had not been informed of the abrogation of permissibility and the subsequent prohibition. Hadith No. 3004 quotes the narrator: 'Then 'Umar prohibited it'. This is when he was informed of the prohibition.

Hadith No. 3010 quotes the Prophet: 'I had permitted you to have temporary marriage with women. God has forbidden this until the Day of Judgement. Whoever has a woman on this basis must let her go. Do not take anything of what you have given them'. This hadith clearly states the abrogation and what abrogates it in God's Messenger's own words. It is the same as the hadith that says: 'I had previously prohibited the visiting of graves. Now you may visit them'. In the present hadith, we have a clear statement of the prohibition of temporary marriage until the Day of Judgement. Therefore, we must take the previous hadith mentioning that some continued to do it until the reign of Abu Bakr and 'Umar as indicating that they were unaware of the abrogation. This hadith makes it clear that the dowry given to the woman remains hers and it is not permissible to claim any part of it back. This is the same as in a normal marriage contract. The dowry is owed in full once the marriage has been consummated. No part of it may be claimed back in the case of termination of the marriage.

Hadith No. 3017 mentions that 'Abdullāh ibn al-Zubayr said in a speech: 'Some people, whose hearts God has made blind as He gave them blindness in their sight, give a fatwa permitting temporary marriage. He aimed his remark at a particular person'. That particular person was 'Abdullāh ibn 'Abbās who called him and said: 'You are uncouth, coarse'. Both adjectives are similar in meaning and Ibn 'Abbās wanted to emphasize his meaning.

Ibn al-Zubayr said to him: ‘Then try it yourself. For, by God, if you do it, I shall stone you’. This is understood to mean that he explained to Ibn ‘Abbās how it was abrogated and that there was no longer any doubt about its complete prohibition. Therefore, he gave him a warning that if he still did it and had intercourse on the basis of a temporary marriage, this was a case of adultery and the normal punishment for adultery would become mandatory.

Hadiths No. 3019-3023 mention the prohibition of donkey meat. It is certainly prohibited. This is the view of our Shāfi‘ī School and all scholars, apart from a small number of early scholars. It has been reported that Ibn ‘Abbās, ‘Ā’ishah and a number of early scholars said that it is permissible, but it is also reported from them that they ruled that it is forbidden. Mālik is reported to have ruled that it is reprehensible and also that it is forbidden, but God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3002 is as follows: ‘Umayyah ibn Bisṭām al-‘Ayshī narrated to me: Yazīd (meaning ibn Zuray‘) narrated; Rawḥ (meaning ibn al-Qāsim) narrated; from ‘Amr ibn Dīnār; from al-Ḥasan ibn Muhammad; from Salamah ibn al-Akwa‘ and Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh’. This is how it occurs in some copies, while in other copies the name of al-Ḥasan ibn Muhammad is dropped, making the chain ‘from ‘Amr ibn Dīnār; from Salamah ibn al-Akwa‘ and Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh’. Al-Māzarī also mentions that there is difference in copying, with al-Ḥasan mentioned in Ibn Māhān’s narration and dropped in al-Julūdī’s.

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3005 includes Ḥāmid ibn ‘Umar al-Bakrāwī. He is called al-Bakrāwī in affiliation to his great grandfather Abu Bakarah, a Companion of the Prophet (peace be upon him).

Text Explanation

Note: Islam permits polygamy, allowing a man to marry up to four women at the same time. Therefore, speaking about ‘combination in marriage’ means being married to more than one woman at the same time. In societies which do not allow polygamy, a case of marriage combination may need to be expressed in many words.

In the first hadith, No. 3024, the Prophet says: ‘A woman may not be combined [in marriage] with her paternal aunt, nor with her maternal aunt'. And in hadith No. 3026, he puts the same prohibition in a different expression: 'A paternal aunt may not be married together with her brother's daughter [to the same man], nor a sister's daughter together with her maternal aunt'. This is unanimously agreed upon by all scholars, whether these aunts are real, i.e., a father's or a mother's sister, or more distant, i.e., the sister of the woman's grandfather or great-grandfather, or the sister of the woman's grandmother or great-grandmother, on both her father's or mother's sides. All such women are not permissible for a man to marry alongside his wife.

Some of the Khawārij and Shia scholars argue that such combination is permissible, citing the Qur'anic statement: 'Lawful to you are all women other than these'. (4: 24) This statement occurs after the list of women that are forbidden to marry stated in verses 22-4 of Surah 4, Women. The majority of scholars make the hadiths we have in this chapter the basis of their ruling, saying that they place a limitation on the general text of the said verse. The great majority of scholars of legal theory agree that a singly-reported hadith may add a limitation to a general Qur'anic statement, because a hadith is stated by the Prophet whose duty is to explain to people what God revealed to them in the Qur'an.

During the time when slavery was common, women who were close relatives might be owned by the same man. The question then arose as to whether it was lawful for a master to consort with such relatives at the same time. The answer was that he could not, and this was unanimously agreed upon, but the Shia argued that it was permissible, and even consorting with two sisters if the man possessed them. They argued that the restriction on combining two sisters at the same time relates to marriage only. All other scholars say that it is forbidden in the same way as marriage because the text forbidding that is general, not limited to marriage. Indeed, all the women listed as prohibited in marriage are also prohibited if they are slaves.

As for marrying other relatives at the same time, such as cousins [born to different parents], this is permissible according to our school and all other scholars, except for what Qadi 'Iyāḍ reported that some early scholars said it is forbidden. To marry someone else's divorced or widowed wife and his daughter by a different wife is permissible according to the Shāfi'ī, Mālikī, Ḥanafī schools as well as the majority of scholars. However, al-Ḥasan, 'Ikrimah and Ibn Abi Laylā said that it is not permissible. The evidence in support of the view of the majority is the above-quoted Qur'anic statement: 'Lawful to you are all women other than these'. (4: 24)

The Prophet makes clear that it is forbidden to combine a woman and her aunt, whether paternal or maternal, in marriage. It is obvious that there is no difference between marrying both at the same time or marrying one first and the other later. Both being married to him at one time is clearly forbidden. In the version related by Abu Dāwūd and others: 'Neither the younger may be married ahead of the elder, nor the elder ahead of the younger'. However, if the man marries both at the same time with one marriage contract, the marriage is invalid for both, but if he marries one and later marries the other, the marriage of the first one is correct and that of the second is invalid, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 3029, the Prophet says: ‘Let no man put a marriage proposal to a woman who has been proposed to by his brother; nor may he outbid his brother’s bid in business’. The Prophet expresses this order in an emphatic form, implying that Muslims must treat this as an absolute order that may not be disregarded in any situation. We will discuss these two rulings further in their appropriate places.

The Prophet adds in the same hadith: ‘Let no woman request her sister’s divorce to take over what she has. Let her get married, for she will only get what is decreed for her’. This is an order prohibiting any woman from persuading a man to divorce his wife in order to marry her, so that he would then look after her and she would get all that he provides for his present wife. The Prophet uses the expression ‘her sister’ to refer to any woman, not necessarily her true sister. Indeed, it applies to any married woman, whether she is her sister in Islam, or an unbeliever.

NO MARRIAGE CONTRACT DURING CONSECRATION

[3032-41]. (Dar al-Salam 3278) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated:ⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik; from Nāfi'; from Nubayh ibn Wahb; that 'Umar ibn 'Ubaydullāh wanted to get Ṭalḥah ibn 'Umar married to Shaybah ibn Jubayr's daughter. He sent to Abān ibn 'Uthmān, the hajj chief, inviting him to attend. Abān said: I heard 'Uthmān ibn 'Affān say: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "A man in a state of consecration may not enter into a marriage contract, nor can he perform a marriage contract, and he may not make a marriage proposal".'

حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى، قَالَ قَرَأْتُ عَلَى مَالِكٍ عَنْ تَافِعٍ، عَنْ ثُبَيْهِ بْنِ وَهْبٍ، أَنَّ عُمَرَ بْنَ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ أَرَادَ أَنْ يُزَوِّجَ طَلْحَةَ بْنَ عُمَرَ بِنْتَ شَيْبَةَ بْنِ جُبَيْرٍ. فَأَرْسَلَ إِلَى أَبَانَ بْنِ عُثْمَانَ يَحْضُرُ ذَلِكَ، وَهُوَ أَمِيرُ الْحَجِّ. فَقَالَ أَبَانُ: سَمِعْتُ عُثْمَانَ بْنَ عَفَّانَ يَقُولُ: قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «لَا يَنْكِحُ الْمُحْرِمُ، وَلَا يُنْكَحُ وَلَا يَخْطُبُ».

He [i.e., Abān] said: 'He looks to me a Bedouin. "A man in consecration may not enter into a marriage contract, nor can he perform a marriage contract". We have been told this by 'Uthmān reporting from God's Messenger (peace be upon him).'

Text Explanation

In several of these hadiths the Prophet is quoted as saying: ‘A man in a state of consecration may not enter into a marriage contract, nor can he perform a marriage contract, and he may not make a marriage proposal’. Muslim then mentions the different reports whereby the Prophet (peace be upon him) married Maymūnah when he was in consecration, or when he was not. Therefore, scholars hold different views on the validity of marriage by a person in consecration, i.e., iḥrām. Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī, Ahmad and the majority of scholars, from the time of the Prophet’s Companions and later, said that marriage by a person in consecration is invalid. They rely on the hadiths in this chapter. Abu Ḥanīfah and Kūfī scholars argue that such a marriage is valid, relying on Maymūnah’s case.

The majority of scholars give several answers in response to the hadith concerning Maymūnah. The most correct of these answers is that the Prophet married her after he finished his iḥrām and released himself. This is how it is reported by most Companions of the Prophet. Qadi ‘Iyād and others said: Only Ibn ‘Abbās reported that the Prophet was in iḥrām when he married her, while Maymūnah, Abu Rāfi‘ and others reported that he was not in iḥrām. They were better aware of the situation than Ibn ‘Abbās and they were larger in number and more accurate.

The second answer interprets Ibn ‘Abbās’ hadith as meaning that he married her in the Ḥaram area, but he was not in iḥrām. This is based on a common use of language, that describes a person as muḥrim [i.e., in iḥrām] when he is actually in the Ḥaram area, but not necessarily in a state of consecration. A well-known poem includes a line saying: ‘They killed ‘Uthmān the Caliph when he was a muḥrim’, meaning that he was in the Ḥaram area of Madinah, where no iḥrām is required at any time.

The third answer is that there is a conflict here between what is said and the action. According to scholars of legal theory, i.e., uṣūl al-fiqh, in such a scenario, the verbal statement is given precedence because it applies to others while action could be limited to the person doing it.

The fourth answer is given by some of our Shāfi‘ī scholars who say that getting married while in iḥrām was one of the special privileges given to the Prophet, but it is not applicable to anyone else. This is one of two views and our scholars consider it more correct. The other view is that marriage during consecration, or iḥrām, was forbidden to the Prophet, like the rest of the Muslim community.

The hadiths say that a person in iḥrām ‘may not perform a marriage contract’. This means that he cannot give a woman in marriage if she is under his guardianship or if she has given him power of attorney to act for her. Scholars say that since a man cannot enter into a marriage contract for himself while he is in iḥrām, his status is the same as that of a woman, and a woman cannot perform a marriage contract for herself or anyone else. The apparent import of this view is that there is no difference between one who has a special guardianship, such as the woman’s father, brother or uncle, or a general one which belongs to the ruler, a judge or his deputy. This is the correct view according to our school, endorsed by the great majority of our scholars. However, a few of our scholars said that a person in iḥrām who has a general guardianship may perform a marriage contract because such guardianship is more beneficial than the special one. Hence, it is permissible for a Muslim to marry a woman who is a dhimmi by such general guardianship.

It should be clear that the prohibition of marriage during consecration is total. If a marriage contract is done in this state, it is invalid, whether the person in consecration is the husband, the wife or the one performing for either through guardianship or power of attorney. Even if the man and the woman to be married are not in consecration and either of them or the woman's guardian requests a person in iḥrām to act on their behalf in the marriage contract, the marriage is invalid. The order not to make a marriage proposal is one of discouragement, not prohibition.

Likewise, it is makrūh, i.e., reprehensible for a person in consecration to act as witness in a marriage contract performed by parties who are not in consecration. Some of our scholars say that the contract remains invalid if he is a witness because, like the woman's guardian, witnesses are essential for the validity of the marriage contract. However, the correct view upheld by the majority is that the contract is valid with such a witness.

In hadith No. 3036, Abān says to 'Umar ibn 'Ubaydullāh: 'You appear to be a coarse Iraqi'. This is how it occurs in all copies in our areas. Qadi 'Iyād says that in some copies it occurs as 'coarse Iraqi' and in others 'coarse Bedouin'. The latter is the correct rendering as it means that he was unaware of the sunnah. 'Iraqi' would only be correct if he were aware that the scholars of Kufah considered marriage performed by a person in iḥrām to be valid. It would then mean that he was following these scholars of Kufah and was ignorant of the sunnah, but God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3032 mentions Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā reporting from Mālik; from Nāfi'; from Nubayh ibn Wahb; that 'Umar ibn 'Ubaydullāh wanted to marry Ṭalḥah ibn 'Umar and Shaybah ibn Jubayr's daughter. The next hadith which is narrated by Ḥammād ibn Zayd from Ayyūb from Nāfi' from Nubayh ibn Wahb mentions "Umar ibn 'Ubaydullāh ibn Ma'mar, who was proposing a marriage between Shaybah ibn 'Uthmān's daughter and his son, sent me to Abān ibn 'Uthmān, the hajj chief'.

This is how Ahmad says it in a narration from Ayyūb: 'the daughter of Shaybah ibn 'Uthmān'. The same is said by Muhammad ibn Rāshid ibn 'Uthmān ibn 'Amr al-Qurashī. In his Sunan anthology, Abu Dāwūd claims that this is the correct name and that Mālik is mistaken. The majority of scholars, however, have said that Mālik's version is the correct one. She was the daughter of Shaybah ibn Jubayr ibn 'Uthmān al-Ḥajabī. It is reported thus by al-Dāraqūṭnī, confirming the majority narration.

Qadi 'Iyād said: 'Perhaps those who said Shaybah ibn 'Uthmān associated him with his grandfather. In this case, there is no mistake, and the two reports are correct: one real and the other figurative'. Al-Zubayr ibn Bakkār mentions that the woman in question was called Amat al-Ḥamīd.

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 2033 includes four narrators from the tābi'in generation, reporting from each other. They are Ayyūb al-Sikhtiyānī, Nāfi', Nubayh and Abān ibn 'Uthmān. We have already mentioned several such cases in this book.

Text Explanation

The hadiths included in this chapter are very clear in prohibiting making a proposal of marriage to a woman who has received a proposal by another man. Scholars are unanimous that doing this is certainly forbidden if the first man has informed the second that his proposal was accepted, and he neither permitted the other man to speak to the family, nor did he abandon his proposal. If, nevertheless, the second man presents his proposal and it is accepted and the marriage has taken place, the husband has committed a sin, but his marriage is valid, and it is not terminated by a judge. This is the view of our Shāfi‘ī School and the majority of scholars.

Dāwūd said that in this case, the marriage is terminated by a judge. Mālik gives two rulings in the same way as these two views. A number of Mālikī scholars say that the marriage is terminated if it has not been consummated, but if it is consummated, it is not terminated. If the first man merely hints that his proposal is acceptable but did not clearly say that it has been accepted, al-Shāfi‘ī expresses two views about the prohibition of the second proposal. The more correct view is that it is not forbidden. Some Mālikī scholars say that it is not forbidden to offer a new proposal until the woman’s family has approved of the suitor and the dowry has been fixed. In support of the view that the prohibition occurs when the first proposal has been accepted, they cite the hadith narrated by Fāṭimah bint Qays who said that Abu Jahm and Mu‘āwiyah proposed to her, and the Prophet did not criticize them for doing so, but rather wanted her for Usāmah. This piece of evidence may be objected to by suggesting that the second suitor might not have known of the first one’s proposal. As for the Prophet, he only advised in favour of Usāmah, without putting a proposal on his behalf. Scholars are in agreement that if the first suitor abandons his proposal or if he permits the second suitor, then it is permissible to put a counter proposal. This is clearly stated in these hadiths.

In several of these hadiths, the Prophet prohibits countering “one’s brother’s proposal”. Al-Khaṭṭābī and other scholars said that at face value, the prohibition applies only if the one making the first proposal is a Muslim. If he is an unbeliever, the prohibition does not apply, and a counter proposal is fine. This view is also expressed by al-Awzā‘ī. However, the majority of scholars say that putting forward a counter proposal of marriage is also forbidden when the first proposal is made by an unbeliever. They respond to the argument citing a proposal by 'his brother' as the expression that imposes no limitation because it takes into consideration the fact that in the great majority of cases the other person is a Muslim. Therefore, the limitation does not apply. Situations like this one, which include non-Muslim individuals being treated in the same way as Muslims, are variously found in the Qur'an, as in: 'Do not kill your children because of your poverty'. (6: 151) 'Your stepdaughters - who are your foster children - born to your wives with whom you have consummated your marriage'.^{vi} (4: 23)

The correct view which the hadiths imply through their general way of expression is that the prohibition of putting a counter proposal of marriage applies in all cases. There is distinction between a proposer who is devout and one who is a transgressor. However, Ibn al-Qāsim, of the Mālikī School of Fiqh, said that it is permissible to make a counter proposal if the first proposer is a transgressor.

The rulings given in these hadiths prohibiting outbidding in business transactions, conniving to raise prices and assuming an agency role for a Bedouin will be discussed fully in their appropriate places in the Book of Sales, God willing.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3046 includes: 'Shu'bah narrated; from al-'Alā' and Suhayl; from their father'. This is how it occurs in all copies. However, al-'Alā' and Suhayl are not brothers, and they have different fathers. Therefore, to say ‘from their father’ is wrong, and the word should be in the dual form in Arabic and in the plural in English. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ provides a different way of pronouncing the word, retaining its written form, to express the dual form. This is a little used method, but it makes the chain of transmission correct as it is, but God knows best.

[3053-62]. (Dar al-Salam 3301) Ḥārūn ibn ‘Abdullāh narrated to me: Ḥajjāj ibn Muhammad narrated; he said: Ibn Jurayj said [H]. Also, Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm and Muhammad ibn Rāfi‘ narrated; from ‘Abd al-Razzāq; Ibn Jurayj reported; Abu al-Zubayr reported to me; that he heard Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh say: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) prohibited shigār [i.e., exchange marriage]’.

Text Explanation

These hadiths focus on the prohibition of exchange marriage, which is known in Arabic as shighār. The first hadith, No. 3048, includes an explanation of shighār, but it is clear that this explanation is provided by Nāfi‘, not attributed to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). The linguistic meaning of shighār is ‘to lift’. Therefore, such an exchange marriage is similar to one man saying to another: ‘You cannot lift my daughter’s leg until I can lift your daughter’s leg’. It is also said that the word derives from the expression describing a city that has become empty, using the verb shagharat, which is derived from the same root. Its applicability to exchange marriage is based on the fact that such marriage involves no dowry payment.

Shighār used to be practised in pre-Islamic days. Scholars are unanimous that it is prohibited, but they differ on whether the prohibition means that, if done, the marriage is invalid. According to al-Shāfi‘ī, the prohibition rules it invalid. Al-Khaṭṭābī reports the same view as being stated by Ahmad, Ishāq and Abu ‘Ubayd. On the other hand, Mālik said the marriage is annulled, whether it has been consummated or not. One report from Mālik makes the annulment only before consummation, but not after it. A number of scholars have said that the marriage becomes valid if each woman receives a dowry equal to that of her peers. This is Abu Ḥanīfah’s view. The same view is said to be shared by ‘Aṭā’, al-Zuhri, al-Layth, and it is one ruling given by Ahmad and Ishāq. It is also shared by Abu Thawr and Ibn Jarīr al-Ṭabarī.

Scholars are unanimous that the same ruling applies to relatives other than daughters, such as sisters, nieces, aunts, cousins and maids. Its clear form is that one man says to another: ‘I will give you my daughter to marry if you give me your daughter to marry.’ Thus, each woman is made the dowry of the other woman. The other man says: I accept. But God knows best.

HONOURING CONDITIONS OF MARRIAGE

[3054-63]. (Dar al-Salam 3302) Yaḥyā ibn Ayyūb narrated:ⁱ Hushaym narrated [H]. Also, Ibn Numayr narrated; Wakī' narrated [H]. And Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Abu Khālid al-Aḥmar narrated [H]. Further, Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated; Yaḥyā (who is al-Qaṭṭān) narrated; from 'Abd al-Hamīd ibn Ja'far; from Yazīd ibn Abi Ḥabīb; from Marthad ibn 'Abdullāh al-Yazanī; from 'Uqbah ibn 'Āmir. He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "The condition that most deserves to be honoured is one which makes your woman lawful to you".'

This is the wording narrated by Abu Bakr and Ibn al-Muthannā, but Ibn al-Muthannā used 'conditions' in the plural.

Text Explanation

The Prophet says that the conditions made at the time of a marriage contract are those which deserve to be fulfilled. Al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars say that this is understood to refer to conditions that do not contradict the nature of marriage, but are rather included in its purpose and what it entails, such as stipulating kindly treatment, looking properly after one’s wife and fulfilling her needs of shelter and clothing according to what is reasonable, and that her husband does not ignore any of her rights, as well as fair and equal treatment with his other wives, if any. Other normal conditions include that she asks permission before going out, does not act rebelliously, does not fast voluntarily without his permission, and does not dispense with his money or property unless he agrees, etc.

As for conditions that contravene the standards of marriage, such as a woman stipulating a condition that her husband does not marry another wife, or the man making a condition that he would not look after his wife financially, or that he will not ask her to travel with him, etc. such conditions need not be fulfilled. Indeed, such conditions are null and void, while the marriage is valid when a dowry of the same standard as the woman’s peers normally receive is paid. This view is based on the hadith which quotes the Prophet as saying: ‘Every condition that is not consistent with God’s book is null and void’. On the other hand, Ahmad and a number of scholars say that all conditions must be honoured, quoting the above-mentioned hadith, but God knows best.

Text Explanation

The first hadith, No. 3055, quotes the Prophet as saying: ‘No mature woman may be given in marriage until she has given her instructions, and no virgin woman may be given in marriage until she has given permission’. They asked: ‘Messenger of God, how does she give permission?’ He said: ‘By remaining silent’. Other hadiths in this chapter say: ‘A mature woman has more right regarding herself than her guardian. A virgin’s consent must be sought regarding herself, and her silence expresses her consent'. Scholars said the word ayyim, used in the hadith and translated here as 'mature woman', refers to a previously married woman, as explained in another hadith, but the word also has other meanings.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: Scholars hold different views on the intended meaning of the word ayyim, yet linguists agree that it refers to a woman without a husband, whether young or old, virgin or previously married. This is stated by Ibrāhīm al-Ḥarbī, Ismā'īl al-Qāḍī and others. Scholars further disagree on its meaning in the present context. Scholars of both Hijaz and Fiqh say that it refers to a previously married woman. Their evidence is that the other hadith specifically states this, and also it is contrasted with a 'virgin'. Moreover, it is mostly used in reference to a woman who was previously married. Scholars of Kufah and Zuhrah, who was a prominent Ḥanafī scholar, said that the word is used in the hadith in its linguistic sense, which is a woman without a husband. Therefore, every woman, whether virgin or previously married, who has attained puberty has a greater right than that of her guardian regarding herself. Therefore, if she acts for herself in a marriage contract, the contract is correct and valid. The same view is expressed by al-Sha'bī and al-Zuhri. They add that the presence of the woman's guardian is not essential for the validity of the marriage contract, but it makes it perfect. Imam al-Awzā'ī and the two leading Ḥanafī scholars, Abu Yūsuf and Muhammad ibn al-Ḥasan said that the validity of the contract is subject to the approval of the woman's guardian.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that scholars also differ in their understanding of the Prophet's statement that 'a woman has more right than her guardian': Does she have more right to give permission, or to do so and act for herself in the marriage contract? The majority of scholars say that it is only the permission, but these scholars maintain that it applies to the permission and the contract.

The Prophet said that a woman 'has more right regarding herself'. This may mean that her right is greater in all things, including the contract, as Abu Ḥanīfah and Dāwūd said. On the other hand, it may mean that she has more right to express agreement. In other words, she is not married unless she has verbally stated her consent, which is different from the case of a virgin whose consent is expressed by remaining silent. However, an authentic hadith says: 'No marriage contract may be made without a guardian'. Other hadiths also confirm that the presence of the woman's guardian is a condition. Therefore, the second alternative is upheld.

It should be noted that the phrase 'has more right' indicates sharing. This means that she has rights regarding her own marriage and her guardian has rights, but her rights are firmer and take precedence. Therefore, if he wishes to marry her to someone of compatible status and she refuses, she cannot be forced to accept. By contrast, if she wants to get married and her guardian objects, he is forced to accept. If he persists in refusing, the judge takes over and acts for her in her marriage. This confirms that her right is stronger and weightier than that of her guardian.

In hadith No. 3058, the Prophet says: 'A virgin's consent must be sought'. Scholars have different interpretations of this statement. Al-Shāfi'ī, Ibn Abi Laylā, Ahmad, Ishāq and others have said that this is an order to obtain the consent of a virgin girl before her marriage is contracted. However, if her guardian is her father or grandfather, seeking her consent is desirable. If such a guardian gives her in marriage without first obtaining her consent, her marriage is valid because her father and grandfather are keen to do well by her. If the guardian is some other relative, obtaining her consent is a duty, and the marriage is invalid without it. Imam al-Awzā'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah and other Kufi scholars said that obtaining her consent is a duty in the case of any virgin who is above the age of puberty.

The Prophet (peace be upon him) adds: 'Her silence is her consent'. This is a general statement which appears to apply to every virgin woman and every guardian. If she remains silent, this is sufficient in all cases. This is the correct view. Some scholars of our school have said if the guardian is her father or grandfather, obtaining her consent is desirable and her silence is sufficient. If he is someone else, her consent must be spoken because normally a virgin girl is more shy with her father and grandfather. The correct view expressed by the majority of scholars is that her silence is enough whoever her guardian is, as the hadith statement is general, and shyness is a characteristic common to virgin girls.

A previously married woman expresses her agreement to the marriage verbally. There is no difference on this point, whether her guardian is her father or any other relative. She is deemed to be less shy since she has had previous marriage experience. This applies if she has lost her virginity^v through a proper or invalid marriage, an intercourse that is uncertain as to its legality, or clear adultery. Even if the loss of her virginity occurs through a jump, or the insertion of a finger or through old age, or anal sex, etc. In all such cases, the more correct view is that she is considered like a previously married woman. Some, however, say that she is treated like a virgin woman, but God knows best.

The view of our school and the majority of scholars is that it is not a condition that a virgin should be informed that her silence means her consent. Some Mālikī scholars, however, say that it is a condition, while all Mālikī scholars agree that it is desirable.

Scholars also hold different views on whether the presence of the woman's guardian is a condition for the validity of her marriage. Mālik and al-Shāfi'ī said that it is a condition, and that no marriage is valid without the guardian. Abu Ḥanīfah said that it is not a condition in the case of a previously married woman, or a virgin who has attained puberty. He adds that she may contract her own marriage without her guardian's permission. Abu Thawr said that she may contract her marriage by her guardian's permission, but not without it. Dāwūd said that the presence of the guardian is a condition in the marriage of a virgin woman, but not in that of a previously married one. Mālik and al-Shāfi'ī cite in support of their view the well-known hadith: 'No marriage may be contracted without a guardian'. This is a negation of its validity. Dāwūd argues that the hadith Muslim relates in his Ṣaḥīḥ makes it clear that there is a difference between a virgin and a previously married woman, and the latter has more right regarding herself, while a virgin's consent is sought. Our scholars argue, in response, that having 'more right' means that she has a share of right in the sense that she may not be forced into a marriage, and that she has more right to choose her husband. Abu Ḥanīfah bases his argument on analogy with commercial and other transactions. In these, a woman has full independence and need not consult her guardian. He applies the hadiths mentioning a guardian to the marriage of slave and young girls. Thus, he limits the applicability of the general statements in these hadiths on the basis of analogy. This procedure is acceptable according to the majority of scholars of legal theory, i.e., uṣūl al-fiqh. Abu Thawr gives his argument on the basis of the well-known hadith that quotes the Prophet as saying: 'Any woman who marries without permission by her guardian, her marriage is invalid'. A guardian is required to ensure the suitor's status so that the marriage causes no shame to the woman's family. This is ensured if he gives permission.

Scholars, however, have said that as Dāwūd makes the presence of a guardian a condition in the marriage of a virgin, but not a previously married woman, he contradicts his own school. This is an introduction of a ruling on a controversial question. According to his Zāhirī School, this is not permissible. This was never done by anyone else, but God knows best.

MARRIAGE OF A YOUNG VIRGIN BY HER FATHER'S ACTION

[3060-69]. (Dar al-Salam 3309) Abu Kurayb Muhammad ibn al-‘Alā’ narrated:ⁱ Abu Usāmah narrated [H]. Also, Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: he said: I found in my book from Abu Usāmah; from Hishām; from his father; from ‘Ā’ishah. She said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) married me when I was six years old and consummated the marriage when I was nine’.

She added: ‘We migrated to Madinah where I was sick for a month, then my hair grew again until it was a small bunch. Umm Rūmān came to me when I was playing with my friends on a seesaw. She called out to me, and I went to her, not knowing what she wanted. She took me by the hand and then stopped me at the door. I was gasping hah, hah, until my breathing settled down. She took me inside a home where there were some women from the Anṣār. They said: “We wish you all goodness and blessings. Let it be the best you wish”. She gave me up to them, and they washed my head and improved my appearance. I was then surprised to see God's Messenger (peace be upon him) come in mid-morning. They gave me up to him'.

Text Explanation

This chapter is based on the hadith narrated by ‘Ā’ishah stating that the Prophet married her when she was six years of age and the wedding took place when she was nine. In hadith No. 3062 she was seven when the marriage contract was made. These hadiths are clear in stating the permissibility of a father arranging his young daughter’s marriage without her consent, because she is not qualified to give such consent. According to our school, a grandfather is in the same position as a father. In the previous chapter, we discussed in detail the disagreement among scholars concerning the presence of the woman’s guardian and whether it is a condition for the validity of the marriage. Muslims agree that a father may give his young virgin daughter in marriage, relying on this hadith. The question is whether she has the option to annul the marriage when she attains puberty. Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and all scholars of Hijaz say that she does not have such a right. Scholars of Iraq, on the other hand, said that she has this option of annulment. Guardians other than the girl's father and grandfather may not give a young girl, below the age of puberty, in marriage according to al-Shāfi'ī, al-Thawrī, Mālik, Ibn Abi Laylā, Ahmad, Abu Thawr, Abu 'Ubayd and the majority of scholars. They say that if the guardian gives such a young girl in marriage, the contract is not valid. Al-Awzā'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah and other early scholars say that such a marriage may be done by any guardian, and it is valid, but she has the option to annul it when she attains puberty. The only exception is Abu Yūsuf who said that she has no such option. The great majority of scholars agree that an appointed guardian, who is not a relative of the girl, may not give her in marriage. However, Shurayḥ, 'Urwah and Ḥammād said that he may do so before her puberty. This is also reported from Mālik by al-Khaṭṭābī, but God knows best.

Al-Shāfi'ī and scholars of his school said that it is preferable that a father or grandfather should not give a young girl in marriage, until she has reached puberty and given her consent, so as not to impose on her a husband she may not like. This view is not contrary to the hadith mentioning 'Ā'ishah's marriage because what they mean is that a father should not contract the marriage of his young daughter before she attains puberty unless there is an obvious interest that may be lost if he delays the marriage. A father's duty is to ensure and promote the interests of his children, but God knows best.

A question arises: if a young girl's marriage is contracted, when should the wedding be arranged? In other words, when can the marriage be consummated? If the husband and the guardian agree on something that causes the young girl no harm, it is acceptable. If they disagree, then Ahmad and Abu 'Ubayd said she is compelled to accept if she has completed nine years of age, but not other girls. Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and Abu Ḥanīfah said that the limit is that she can tolerate intercourse. This is subject to the individual girl and cannot be tied to a particular age. This is the correct view. The hadith concerning 'Ā'ishah's case does not refer to any age. It neither prevents consummation if the girl can tolerate intercourse before she is nine, nor does it permit it if the girl is nine but cannot tolerate it. Al-Dāwūdī said 'Ā'ishah was maturing well at the time.

In hadith No. 3062 'Ā'ishah mentions her age at her marriage as seven years, while in the other hadiths it is six. These reports can be reconciled by saying that she was six and a few months. In one report, she counted the completed years and in the other she rounded up the few months into a full year, but God knows best.

'Ā'ishah reports on the time of her arrival in Madinah. She says: 'I was sick for a month, then my hair grew again until it was a small bunch'. This means that she lost her hair during her illness, and it started to grow after her recovery. The word jumaymah which describes her hair means that it was down to her ears. Umm Rūmān, her mother, came to her as she was playing with her friends and took her to a house. 'I was gasping hah, hah, until my breathing settled down'. Apparently, her mother hurried her after she was playing, and that was the reason for her gasping for breath.

Inside the house there were some women from the Anṣār. They said: 'We wish you all goodness and blessings.

Let it be the best you wish'. This shows that it is desirable to supplicate for blessings and goodness to each of the two spouses, as mentioned in the hadith referring to the marriage of 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn 'Awf. The Prophet said to him: 'May God bless your marriage'.

'Ā'ishah adds that the Anṣārī women 'washed my head and improved my appearance'. This implies the desirability of giving the bride a bath and doing her makeup for her wedding, and that a number of women attend this because this adds to the publicity of the marriage and they have a chance of teaching her the appropriate manners to observe at the wedding.

'I was then surprised to see God's Messenger (peace be upon him) come in mid-morning. They gave me up to him'. This was the only surprise she had at the time. The hadith shows that it is perfectly permissible to have the wedding and the consummation of the marriage during the day, as it is during the night. Al-Bukhari adds a special chapter about the preferability of holding the wedding during the day.

Hadith No. 3062 mentions that 'Ā'ishah had 'her dolls with her' at the time of her wedding. This confirms that she was young. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This confirms the permissibility of having dolls and that girls may play with them. A hadith mentions that the Prophet saw this and did not object to it. Scholars said that such play serves as early training of looking after children and taking care of a family home'. On the other hand, it is possible that dolls are a special case that is excepted from the hadiths that prohibit shaped images, as these are useful. On the other hand, such dolls may be included in the prohibition, but the case of 'Ā'ishah's marriage and her dolls took place in the early days after migration to Madinah, before shaped images were forbidden, but God knows best.

Clarification: Marriage of Young Girls

The hadiths in this chapter and the commentary by Imam al-Nawawī as well as the views of other eminent scholars raise the problematic question of the marriage of young girls. From the Islamic point of view, there should be no problem in this because the Prophet made it clear that no woman may be given away in marriage without her consent. Needless to say, a young girl is not qualified to consent or object to a marriage because she does not understand the change that marriage brings into a woman's life. Nevertheless, the question persists due to these hadiths and the views expressed by scholars on their basis. Hence a proper clarification is needed, which should address the following points: 1) Can a marriage of a young girl be made, and who can act on her behalf? 2) If such a marriage is made, when does it become effective? 3) Can this be properly regulated through law? 4) How authentic are these hadiths, and how old was 'Ā'ishah when the Prophet married her?

From the Islamic point of view, marriage occurs when the marital contract is made and agreed by the two parties. A woman should have a guardian who acts on her behalf, with her consent and instructions. This is a gesture of honour to the woman as it shows her belonging to a family and a clan. The person officiating the marriage must make sure that the woman agrees to the marriage and has instructed her guardian to act for her. If her father is alive, he is the guardian and no one else can act for her, unless he deputizes someone else to take over for a valid reason, such as his being incapacitated or abroad. Although the marriage contract and the wedding can be arranged on the same day, it is the practice in many Muslim communities that they are separate, with the wedding taking place at a later date.

Scholars agree that the marriage of a young girl may be contracted, but only her father, or her grandfather if her father is not alive, can be her guardian. No one else can act on her behalf for any reason. However, they say that her father should keep her in his home and not give her over to her husband until she is able to undertake her duty as a wife. When she attains this state, he should obtain her consent to the marriage. Scholars of old, like Imam al-Nawawī, did not specify an age when this could be done. They spoke about her ability to have sexual intercourse. This is something that no one can determine for certain. Many contemporary scholars have expressed the view that it means that the girl attains puberty, and many have mentioned 15 years as the time when a girl whose marriage was agreed to early on should be asked to give her consent to the marriage. It is clearly implied that if the girl does not consent to the marriage at this time, the marriage cannot be put into effect.

Needless to say, marriage means the establishment of a life bond between a man and a woman, leading to the formation of a family. As such, it is much more than a relationship for the legitimate satisfaction of sexual desires. Therefore, Shaykh Ahmad al-Tayyib, the Rector of al-Azhar,^{iv} said in a television interview that neither a girl nor a boy of 15 are well aware of what marriage really involves, and he thereby considered 18 to be the age when such awareness begins and as such, it is the proper minimum age for marriage. Dar al-Ifta of Egypt, which is the official body that issues religious fatwas, or rulings, has declared that to give an underage girl in marriage is forbidden in Islam. It also declares that the minimum age for marriage is 18.

Can such rulings become laws? Certainly, yes. Islam allows a ruler of a Muslim community to promulgate laws that serve the interests of individuals and the community, provided that they do not contradict an Islamic principle. There is no principle or Islamic text that defines the minimum age for marriage. This means that this is an area that people determine according to normal and societal conditions. Therefore, if a parliament, or a legislative authority, in a Muslim country determines that the minimum age of marriage is 18, or 20, this becomes binding on all Muslims in that community.

The last question pertains to how authentic the hadiths in this chapter are. To start with, we know that Muslim's anthology includes hadiths that Muslim considered to be authentic. He was certainly a leader in this area of Islamic scholarship. Scholars in subsequent generations confirmed such authenticity. However, all hadiths in all six authentic anthologies are of the category of āḥād, which means 'singly-reported'. This refers to a hadith transmitted by one or two narrators from one or two others at every stage of the chain of transmission. As such they are considered as 'probably authentic', which is a degree below mutawātir, which is 'certainly authentic'. The hadiths in this chapter are of this category.

When we look at their chains of transmission, we find that hadith No. 3060 is narrated by 'Abu Usāmah; from Hishām; from his father; from 'Ā'ishah', while hadith No. 3061 is narrated by Abu Mu'āwiyah from Hishām ibn 'Urwah in one chain and by 'Abdah ibn Sulaymān from Hishām from his father; from 'Ā'ishah in the other chain. So, in all three chains of transmission we have Hishām from his father 'Urwah from 'Ā'ishah. 'Urwah is most reliable in reporting from 'Ā'ishah, who was his maternal aunt. His son, Hishām, is classified by Hadith masters as 'reliable'. However, scholars add a question mark about his narrations, saying that 'He was lax in his narrations in Iraq when he reported from his father from 'Ā'ishah'. Therefore, we need to look at who reported from Hishām and where they lived.

Abu Usāmah is the narrator from Hishām in the first chain. His name is Ḥammād ibn Usāmah ibn Zayd and he belonged to Kufah. Abu Mu'āwiyah is featured in the second chain as reporting from Hishām. His name is Muhammad ibn Khāzim and he was also from Kufah. The third chain features 'Abdah ibn Sulaymān who also belonged to Kufah which was one of the major cities of Iraq at the time. This means that these hadiths are in this category where the accuracy of the narrator is considered somewhat questionable.

Finally, can we determine 'Ā'ishah's age at the time of her marriage? I wrote a 10-page appendix about this in my book Muhammad: Man and Prophet, showing that she must have been considerably older than what is circulated. Here, I can only give a brief outline of the relevant events and reports confirming this:

1. Prior to her engagement to the Prophet, ‘Ā’ishah was engaged to Jubayr ibn Muṭ‘im. When her father heard that the Prophet was willing to marry her, he said he must first terminate that engagement, and he did so.
2. ‘Ā’ishah was suggested to the Prophet as a wife to fill the vacuum in his life left by the death of his first wife Khadījah. The woman making the suggestion recognized his need and proposed an immediate marriage. Could she have suggested a 6-year-old girl to replace a wife who shared his life for 25 years?
3. Al-Bukhari relates a hadith which mentions that ‘Ā’ishah attended the Battle of Uḥud and she tended the wounded. This battle took place two years after her wedding. As the Prophet marched to Uḥud, he inspected the army. He found a number of young boys with the army. He ordered every boy below the age of 15 to return home. These included ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Umar, Zayd ibn Thābit and Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī. Could he, then, have allowed an 11-year-old girl to remain with the army?
4. According to the best reports we have, Asmā’ bint Abu Bakr, was 10 years older than her sister, ‘Ā’ishah. Asmā’ was 100 years when she died in Year 73 AH, a few months after the battle in which her son, ‘Abdullāh, was killed. The times of the battle and her death are known for certain. Had ‘Ā’ishah been alive then, she would have been 90 years old. As she was married in the first year of the Islamic calendar, she would then have been an 18-year-old woman.

Transmission

The second chain of transmission of hadith No. 3060 says: 'Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: he said: I found in my book from Abu Usāmah'. This means that Abu Bakr saw the hadith written in his manuscript. He does not state that he heard it from the Abu Usāmah. Such hadiths may be narrated and transmitted according to the right view upheld by the majority of scholars. We note, however, that Muslim does not confine himself to this hadith. In fact, he adds it as an endorsement of the other hadiths he narrates in this chapter.

[3065-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3313) Ibn Numayr narrated; my father narrated; Sufyān narrated; with the same chain of transmission: the same text, but did not mention ‘Ā’ishah’s preferred action.

Text Explanation

The hadith shows that it is desirable to make a marriage contract in the month of Shawwāl and also to hold the wedding so that the marriage is completed and consummated in Shawwāl. Our scholars mentioned that this is desirable, relying on this hadith. ‘Ā’ishah’s purpose in stating this is to refute the pre-Islamic practice in Arabia when people disliked holding a marriage or making a marriage contract during this month. Unfortunately, this is still held to by some ignorant people. Such a notion is false and goes back to the days of ignorance when people saw bad omens in certain things. Because the word Shawwāl is derived from a root that means lifting, people in pre-Islamic days felt that this was a bad omen. Islam ignores all such false notions.

TO LOOK AT THE WOMAN ONE WANTS TO MARRY

[3066-74]. (Dar al-Salam 3314) Ibn Abi ‘Umar narrated:ⁱ Sufyān narrated; from Yazīd ibn Kaysān; from Abu Hāzim; from Abu Hurayrah. He said: ‘I was at the Prophet’s when a man came and told him that he married a woman from the Anṣār. The Prophet said to him: “Have you seen her? The man said: “No”. The Prophet said: “Go and look at her. There is something in the eyes of the Anṣār”.’

حَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ أَبِي عُمَرَ، حَدَّثَنَا سُفْيَانُ، عَنْ يَزِيدَ بْنِ كَيْسَانَ، عَنْ أَبِي حَازِمٍ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ قَالَ: كُنْتُ عِنْدَ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَأَتَاهُ رَجُلٌ فَأَخْبَرَهُ أَنَّهُ تَزَوَّجَ امْرَأَةً مِنَ الْأَنْصَارِ. فَقَالَ لَهُ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «أَنْظُرْتُ إِلَيْهَا؟» قَالَ لَا. قَالَ: «فَاذْهَبْ فَانْظُرْ إِلَيْهَا فَإِنَّ فِي أَعْيُنِ الْأَنْصَارِ شَيْئًا».

[3067-75]. (Dar al-Salam 3315) Yaḥyā ibn Ma‘īn narrated to me: Marwān ibn Mu‘āwiyah al-Fazārī narrated; Yazīd ibn Kaysān narrated; from Abu Hāzim; from Abu Hurayrah. He said: ‘A man came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said: “I have married a woman from the Anṣār”. The Prophet said to him: “Have you seen her? There is something in the eyes of the Anṣār”. The man said: “I have seen her”. The Prophet asked him: “How much dowry have you paid?” The man said: “Four ūqiyyahs”. The Prophet said: “Four ūqiyyahs! As if you, people, are extracting silver from this mountain side. We do not have anything to give you, but we may send you on an expedition and you may get some gains”. The Prophet then sent an expedition to the ‘Abs tribe, and he sent that man with them’.

قَالَ: فَبَعَثْتُ بَعْثًا إِلَى بَنِي عَبْسٍ بَعَثَ ذَلِكَ الرَّجُلَ فِيهِمْ .

Text Explanation

In these two hadiths the Prophet tells the man who wanted to marry an Anṣārī woman that there is something in the eyes of the Anṣār. It is said that he meant smallness or bluish colour. This shows that such mention is permissible as a piece of advice. The hadith also shows that it is desirable for a man who wants to marry a certain woman to look at her face. This is the view of our school as well as the Mālikī, Ḥanbalī and Ḥanafī schools, all Kūfī scholars and the great majority of scholars. Qadi 'Iyāḍ mentions that some scholars disapprove of it, but this is wrong and contrary to the clear meaning of this hadith. It is also contrary to the unanimity of the Muslim community that considers looking as permissible, when needed, such as in situations of shopping, giving testimony, etc.

Moreover, what is permissible is to look at the woman's face and hands only because these are not part of what a woman must conceal of her body. The face indicates beauty or otherwise, and the hands indicate the state of the body. This is our view and the view of the majority of scholars. Al-Awzā'ī said that the man may look at the points of flesh. Dāwūd said he may look at all her body. This is clearly wrong and contrary to the sunnah and the unanimous view.

Our Shāfi'ī School, the Mālikī and Ḥanbalī schools as well as the majority of scholars are of the opinion that it is not necessary that the man should obtain the woman's consent. Indeed, he may look at her when she is unaware, and without prior notice. However, Mālik said that he dislikes a man looking at a woman when she is unaware, lest he may see of her what is not permissible. Another report, which is rather weak, suggests that Mālik said that the man should obtain her consent before he looks at her.

This is weak because the Prophet permitted such looking generally, without requiring her permission, because most women feel shy to give permission to look at them. Moreover, it is not quite right, as the man may feel disinclined to go ahead with the marriage after looking at her, and she may then feel hurt. Hence, our scholars say that it is preferable that he looks at her before proposing marriage, so that if he withdraws, no one is hurt. But God knows best. Further, our scholars said that if a man is unable to look at the woman himself, it is recommended that he sends a woman he trusts to look at her and report to him. This should take place before a proposal is made, as we have mentioned.

The Prophet said to the man who told him that he agreed a dowry of four ūqiyyahs of silver: ‘As if you people are extracting silver from this mountain side’. This means that you seem to find the silver easy to obtain. This implies discouragement of offering a high dowry, but this depends on the man’s circumstances.

THE DOWRY AND OF WHAT SORTS IT MAY BE

[3068-76]. (Dar al-Salam 3316) Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd al-Thaqafī narrated:ⁱ Ya'qūb (meaning ibn 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Qāriy) narrated; from Abu Ḥāzim; from Sahl ibn Sa'd [H]. Also, Qutaybah narrated; 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Abi Ḥāzim narrated; from his father, from Sahl ibn Sa'd al-Sā'idī. He said: 'A woman came to God's Messenger (peace be upon him) and said: "Messenger of God, I offer myself freely to you". The Prophet looked up and down at her, then he lowered his head. When the woman realized that he did not take a decision concerning her, she sat down. One of his companions stood up and said: "Messenger of God, if you have no need for her, marry her to me". The Prophet asked him: "Do you have something to offer her? The man said: "No, by God". The Prophet said: "Go to your family and look for something [to offer]". The man went away and came back and said: "No, by God I could not find anything". The Prophet said: "Look for even an iron ring". The man went away again and came back. He said: "Messenger of God, no, by God I could not find even an iron ring, but I have this my lower garment. She may have half of it". (Sahl said: the man did not have an upper garment.) God's Messenger said to him: "What use is your garment to her? If you wear it, she will have nothing of it, and if she wears it, you can have nothing of it". The man sat down. When he felt he stayed too long he stood up. God's Messenger (peace be upon him) saw him departing, and he gave instructions to call him back. When he came, the Prophet asked him: "Which parts of the Qur'an do you have? The man said: "I have this surah and that surah (mentioning what he had learnt). The Prophet asked: "Have you memorized these?" The man said: "Yes". The Prophet said: "You may go. You have her in return for what you have of the Qur'an".'

This is Ibn Abi Hāzim's narration, and Ya'qūb's narration is largely similar in wording.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3068 mentions the woman who said to the Prophet that she gives herself up to him, and the Prophet remained silent. The Arabic word used for 'offer myself' is wahabt, which means 'give a gift'. In other words, she made a gift of herself to him. This is evidence that a woman could gift the Prophet her marriage, as God says in the Qur'an: 'And any believing woman who offers herself freely to the Prophet and whom the Prophet might be willing to wed: [this latter] applies to you alone and not to other believers'. (33: 50) This verse and hadith are two clear evidences confirming this. If a woman offered herself to the Prophet freely, and he married her without a dowry, then this was lawful to him. No dowry would be subsequently due from him by reason of the consummation of the marriage, or death, or any other reason. This ruling applied to him alone, not to any other believer whose marriage incurs the duty of a dowry, which is either fixed or equal to the dowries of the woman's peers.

So, was the Prophet's marriage complete by the wording of such an offer? Our scholars hold two views. The first is that it was, as indicated by the apparent meaning of this verse and this hadith. The other view is that it was not. It would only occur when the marriage word was stated, in the same way as the marriage of other people. No marriage took place except by the pronouncement of marrying. This is the view of our Shāfi'ī School, and there is no disagreement concerning it. Abu Ḥanīfah, however, says that the marriage of any person is solemnized by any wording that indicates permanent possession. Our view is shared by al-Thawrī, Abu Thawr and many Mālikī scholars and others. There is also one report quoting Mālik. The other report mentions that Mālik considered that marriage is confirmed by words like offer, gift, ṣadaqah, or sale, if marriage is meant by any of these words, whether a dowry is mentioned or not. It is not valid if words like pawn, lease or trust are used. Some Mālikī scholars also consider the marriage to be valid if the wording used means 'make lawful' or 'make permissible'. This is mentioned by Qadi 'Iyāḍ.

The hadith mentions that when the woman offered herself to the Prophet, he 'looked up and down at her, then he lowered his head'. This provides evidence that it is permissible for a man who wants to marry a woman to look carefully at her. The hadith also makes clear that it is perfectly acceptable for a woman to suggest to a virtuous man that he marry her. It is also desirable for a person who has been requested something and he feels unable to give to remain silent so as to imply his apology. He should not give a blunt refusal that embarrasses the other. Only if the one making the request could not understand without a clear response should the requested person state his refusal.

Al-Khaṭṭābī said: 'The hadith shows that it is permissible to make a marriage contract without asking the woman whether she is in a waiting period, as this appears to be the case. However, judges normally check this as a precaution'. Al-Shāfi'ī said that a judge may not marry a woman^v who comes seeking to be married until two witnesses of known integrity testify that she does not have a guardian and that she is neither married nor observing a waiting period. Some of our Shāfi'ī scholars say that this is an essential condition, but the more correct view of our scholars is that this is desirable as a precaution.

The Prophet tells the man to find something to offer as a dowry, 'even if an iron ring'. This means that it is recommended that the marriage is not contracted without a dowry because an agreed dowry prevents dispute and benefits the woman. Suppose that the couple are divorced before the consummation of the marriage, half the dowry is due to the woman. If the dowry is not stated, then only a mut'ah becomes due, and this is a gift according to the man's means. If the marriage is contracted without a dowry, it is valid. God says: 'You will incur no sin if you divorce women before having touched them or settled a dowry for them'. (2: 236) This is a clear statement of the validity of marriage and divorce without an agreed dowry. A dowry then becomes due as a duty to be paid to the wife. The question is when does it become due to her: at the time the contract is made or when the marriage is consummated? There is a well-known difference of opinion on this point. Both views have been stated by al-Shāfi'ī and the more correct one is that it falls due upon the consummation of the marriage, as indicated in the apparent meaning of the above-quoted verse.

Hadith No. 3068 makes it clear that the dowry could be much or little of what people normally own, provided that the two partners agree to it. This is indicated by the reference to an 'iron ring', which is of very little value. This is the view of al-Shāfi'ī and the great majority of scholars of the earlier and later generations. It is expressed by Rabī'ah, Abu al-Zinād, Ibn Abi Dhi'b, Yaḥyā ibn Sa'īd, al-Layth ibn Sa'd, al-Thawrī, al-Awzā'ī, Muslim ibn Khālid al-Zanjī, Ibn Abi Laylā, Dāwūd, scholars who combine the Fiqh and Hadith specialisations and Ibn Wahb of the Mālikī School. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'It is the view shared by all scholars of Hijaz, Basrah, Kufah, Syria and other areas confirming that whatever the two partners agree as a dowry is fine, no matter how little or much, including a whip, a pair of sandals, an iron ring, etc'. Mālik, however, said that the minimum amount is one quarter of one dīnār, which is equal to the minimum amount to incur the punishment of theft, if stolen. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that this is one of the issues on which Mālik takes a different view of his own. Abu Ḥanīfah and his disciples said that the minimum is ten dirhams, while Ibn Shibrimah said that the minimum is five dirhams, and these figures are equal to the minimum amount which, if stolen, require the enforcement of the mandatory punishment for theft. Al-Nukha'ī disliked a man marrying without paying a minimum dowry of forty dirhams, yet on one occasion he said ten dirhams. All these views that are not in agreement with the view of the majority are contrary to the Sunnah, and their argument is rendered invalid by the present clear hadith. The hadith also includes that it is permissible to have an iron ring. Early scholars held different views on this point, and our Shāfi‘ī scholars express two views on it, the more correct one being that it is not discouraged. There is a hadith that discourages it, but this hadith is poor in authenticity. I explain the point in Sharḥ al-Muhadhdhab. The hadith further shows the desirability of early payment of the agreed dowry.

The man said to the Prophet: ‘No, by God, not even an iron ring’. This shows that it is permissible to state an oath without being asked, even if there is no need. Our scholars said that to swear without a need is discouraged, while this man needed to swear so as to confirm what he said. The hadith further shows that it is permissible for a poor man who is in straitened circumstances to get married.

In the same hadith, the man offers half of his lower garment. The Prophet says to him that the woman has no use for it: ‘If you wear it, she has nothing of it, and if she wears it, you will have nothing of it’. This indicates that the chief of a community should look after his community, care for their interests and show them what is more appropriate for them. It also indicates that a man may wear a garment belonging to his wife, if she accepts or if he feels that she most probably accepts.

This hadith also makes it clear that it is permissible for the dowry to be in the form of teaching the Qur’an. It also makes it permissible to hire someone to teach the Qur’an. Both are considered permissible by al-Shāfi‘ī and this is agreed by ‘Aṭā’, al-Ḥasan ibn Ṣāliḥ, Mālik, Ishāq and others. Some scholars including al-Zuhrī and Abu Ḥanīfah disapprove. Their argument is refuted by this hadith and the authentic hadith quoting the Prophet: 'The best that you may take wages for is God's Book'. Qadi 'Iyād reports that all scholars other than Abu Ḥanīfah approve of hiring a person to teach the Qur'an.

In hadith No. 3070, 'Ā'ishah mentions that the Prophet (peace be upon him) gave his wives a dowry amounting to twelve ūqiyyahs and one nashsh, making this equal to five hundred dirhams, as this is based on the Hijazi ūqiyyah, which is equal to forty dirhams. Our scholars take this hadith as indicating that it is desirable that the dowry is this amount for a person who can afford it. It may be said that the dowry given to Umm Ḥabībah,^{vi} the Prophet's wife, was four thousand dirhams and four hundred dīnārs. This amount was given to her by Negus, the king of Abyssinia, in honour of the Prophet. It was not stated in the contract by the Prophet nor paid by the Prophet, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3071 says: 'The Prophet saw 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn 'Awf with traces of saffron on him. He asked: "What is this?"' A ruler or a chief of a community is encouraged to enquire about his companions and ask about changes in their circumstances. The Prophet noted that there were traces of saffron on 'Abd al-Raḥmān, which means that some of the perfume used by his bride had left some traces on him. He did not intend to apply saffron, as it is discouraged for men, like any perfume or makeup that is normally worn by women. The Prophet prohibited men from putting on an appearance similar to that of women. Qadi 'Iyād mentions that some said that a relaxation is given to a bridegroom. A hadith mentioned by Abu 'Ubayd says that the restriction is relaxed for a young man in the early days of his wedding. It is also said that these traces of saffron might have been little, deserving no censure. It is further said that in the early days of Islam anyone who got married wore a coloured robe indicating his delight at being married. Yet this is not a common practice. It is further said that the traces of saffron might have been on his clothing, not on his body. According to Mālik and his disciples, it is permissible for men to wear clothes dyed with saffron. Mālik attributes this view to the scholars of Madinah, and it is the view of Ibn ‘Umar and others. Al-Shāfi‘ī and Abu Ḥanīfah said that it is not permissible for men.

‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf answers the Prophet saying: ‘Messenger of God, I married a woman for [a dowry of] the weight of a fruit stone in gold’. Qadi ‘Iyād said: ‘According to al-Khaṭṭābī, a fruit-stone refers to a measure known to them, and they explain it as five dirhams of gold. This is how most scholars understand it’. However, Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal said that it is three and one-third dirhams. It is also said that what is meant here is a date fruit stone, which means its weight in gold. The correct view is the first one. Some Mālikī scholars said that a fruit stone equals one-quarter of a dīnār according to the people of Madinah, and that the apparent meaning of Abu ‘Ubayd’s words is that he paid five dirhams. He added: ‘No gold was involved, but they amounted to five dirhams, and these were called a fruit stone, or nawāh, as the forty dirhams are called ūqiyyah.’

The Prophet said to ‘Abd al-Raḥmān: ‘May God bless it for you’. This confirms that it is recommended to say some supplication to a person who has just got married, and to say to him or her ‘May God bless it for you’, or some similar words.

The Prophet instructs ‘Abd al-Raḥmān: ‘Hold a wedding feast, even if only with one sheep’. Scholars hold different views on whether the wedding feast is a duty or a sunnah. The more correct view according to our Shāfi‘ī scholars is that it is a desirable sunnah. They understand the Prophet’s order to ‘Abd al-Raḥmān as a recommendation. Mālik and other scholars share the same view, but Dāwūd and others say that it is a duty. Scholars also differ on its timing. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ reports that Mālik and others consider it recommended after the consummation of the marriage, but some Mālikī scholars say that it is better after the marriage contract is made. Ibn Ḥabīb al-Mālikī says that it is desirable after the contract and after consummation.

The Prophet said to ‘Abd al-Raḥmān regarding the wedding dinner: ‘even if only with one sheep’. This makes it desirable that a person who has the means should not go for less than one sheep. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ reports that scholars are unanimous that there is no minimum limit for it. Whatever he gives in this dinner, the requirement is fulfilled. Muslim mentions later that on the occasion of the Prophet’s marriage with Ṣafīyyah, the wedding feast was vegetarian, while on his marriage with Zaynab, the Prophet ‘gave us our fill of bread and meat’. All this is permissible and sufficient for a wedding dinner, but it is desirable that it should be according to the bridegroom’s means. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said that early scholars differed about repeating it for more than two days, with some disliking it and others liking it. He added that Mālik’s disciples said that it is preferable for a well-off person to hold it over a week.

TO SET A SLAVE WOMAN FREE AND MARRY HERⁱ

[3077-84]. (Dar al-Salam 3325) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated:ⁱⁱ Ismā‘īl (meaning ibn ‘Ulayyah) narrated; from ‘Abd al-‘Azīz; from Anas; that ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) went on an expedition to Khaybar. We prayed the Fajr Prayer near it when it was still dark. The Prophet then rode and Abu Ṭalḥah rode, and I was riding behind Abu Ṭalḥah. The Prophet went fast through a narrow passage in Khaybar. My knee would touch the Prophet’s thigh. His lower garment lifted and exposed the Prophet’s thigh, and I saw the whiteness of his thigh. When he went into the village, he said: “God is supreme. Khaybar is ruined. When we strike in the midst of some people, terrible will be the morning of those who have been warned”. He repeated this three times. The people of Khaybar had already gone out to attend to their work. They said: “[Here is] Muhammad, by God”.’

‘Abd al-‘Azīz said: some of our colleagues said: Muham-mad and the army.

He said: ‘We took it over by force, and the captives were assembled. Diḥyah came to the Prophet and said: “Messenger of God, give me a woman from the captives”. The Prophet said: “Go and pick one for yourself”. He took Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyay. A man came to the Prophet and said: “Messenger of God, you gave Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyay to Diḥyah. She suits none other than you”. The Prophet said: “Call him with her”. He brought her, and when the Prophet saw her, he said to him: “Take a different woman captive”. The Prophet set her free and married her’.

Thābit asked him: ‘Abu Ḥamzah, what did he [i.e., the Prophet] give her as dowry?’ He said: ‘He gave her herself. He set her free and married her’. At one point on his return journey, Umm Sulaym prepared her and brought her to him during the night. In the morning, the Prophet was a newly-wedded bridegroom. He said: ‘Whoever has something [of food], let him bring it’. He spread a hide. People brought dried milk, dates and clarified butter. They cooked ḥays, and this was God’s Messenger’s wedding dinner.

[3080-87]. (Dar al-Salam 3328) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: ‘Affān narrated; Ḥammād ibn Salamah narrated; Thābit narrated; from Anas. He said: ‘I was riding behind Abu Ṭalḥah on the Day of Khaybar, and my foot would touch God’s Messenger’s foot. We reached them when the sun had risen. They had brought out their cattle and came out with their axes, baskets and mattocks. They said: “Muhammad and the army”. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “Khaybar is ruined. When we strike in the midst of some people, terrible will be the morning of those who have been warned”. God, Mighty and Exalted, defeated them. A pretty maid was in Diḥyah’s share [of war gains]. The Prophet bought her for seven heads. He then handed her to Umm Sulaym to prepare her and get her ready. (He said: I think he said) And so that she observes her waiting period in her home. She was Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyay. God’s Messenger made her wedding feast dates, dried milk and clarified butter. The earth was dug a little and hides were brought and placed in the dug areas. Then the [food made of the] milk and butter was brought, and people ate their fill.

People said: “We are unsure, has the Prophet married her or has he taken her as a slave woman". Then [some] people said: "If he screens her, she is his wife, and if he does not, she is a slave". When he was about to ride, he screened her. She sat at the back end of the camel, and they realized that he had married her.

When they were close to Madinah, God's Messenger sped up and we sped. The she-camel, al-'Adbā', tripped and God's Messenger fell down and she also fell down. He stood up and covered her. Women were looking from the tops [of their homes] and they said: "May God keep away the Jewess".'

He said: I said: 'Abu Ḥamzah, did God's Messenger (peace be upon him) fall down?' He said: 'Yes, by God. He fell down'.

قَالَ قُلْتُ: يَا أَبَا حَمْرَةَ، أَوْفَعَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ؟ قَالَ: إِي وَاللَّهِ لَقَدْ وَفَعَ.

[3081-78][R].^v Anas said: 'I was present at Zaynab's wedding feast when [the Prophet] gave people bread and meat and they ate to their hearts' content. When it was over, he stood up and I followed him. Two men remained behind engaged in their conversation. They did not depart. [The Prophet] called on his wives, greeting each one of them, saying: "Peace be to you, how are you people of this house?" They would say: "We are well. How have you found your wife?" He would say: "She is fine". When he passed by them all, he went back, and I went with him. When he reached the door, he found the two men still engaged in their conversation. When they saw him coming back, they stood up and went away. By God, I am not sure whether it was I who told him or it was revealed to him that they had left. He went back and I went with him. When he placed his foot inside the door, he put down the screen between himself and me. God then revealed this verse: "Believers! Do not enter the Prophet's homes, unless you are given leave". (33: 53)'

[3082-88]. (Dar al-Salam 3329) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah nar-rated: Shabābah narrated; Sulaymān narrated; from Thābit; from Anas [H]. Also, ‘Abdullāh ibn Hāshim ibn Ḥayyān narrated it to me (his text); Bahz narrated; Sulaymān ibn al-Mughīrah narrated; from Thābit; Anas narrated. He said: ‘Ṣafiyyah was part of Diḥyah’s share of war gains. People spoke highly of her when they were with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him), and they said: “We have not seen her like among the captives”. He called for Diḥyah and gave him whatever he wished to release her. He then gave her to my mother and said: “Get her ready”. God’s Messenger then left Khaybar. When it was well behind him, he dismounted. He then erected a small tent for her. In the morning, God’s Messenger said: “Will anyone who has some extra food bring it to us”. People brought what they had surplus dates and dried grains, and they made the dish known as ḥays. They ate of that ḥays and they drank from close by ponds filled with rainwater. Anas said: “That was God’s Messenger wedding feast for Ṣafiyyah”.

We went ahead and when we saw the walls of Madinah, we were so delighted and drove our mounts fast. The Prophet drove his mount fast, having Ṣafiyyah behind him. His mount tripped and both he and she fell down. No one looked at him or her, until God's Messenger (peace be upon him) rose and covered her. We went to him, and he said: "No harm done". We entered Madinah. The maids of his wives came out to look at her, feeling pleased at her fall'.

Text Explanation

In hadith No. 3077, Anas the narrator says: ‘I was riding behind Abu Ṭalḥah’. This makes it clear that for more than one person to be on the same mount is permissible if the mount is able to take the load. Several hadiths mention this. Anas then mentions that ‘the Prophet went fast through a narrow passage in Khaybar’. This is again permissible, and it does not detract from a person’s status, particularly if it is needed for a useful purpose, such as fighting, training the mount or increasing one’s skills.

Anas adds: ‘My knee would touch the Prophet’s thigh. His lower garment lifted and exposed the Prophet’s thigh, and I saw the whiteness of his thigh’. This statement is used by Mālikī scholars and others as evidence in support of their view that the thigh is not included in the part of a man’s body that may not be exposed. The view of our Shāfi‘ī School is that it must not be exposed. Our scholars understand this hadith as meaning that the Prophet’s lower garment was lifted unintentionally because of the crowding and the speed. Anas looked at him suddenly, not deliberately. Likewise, his knee touched the Prophet’s thigh because of the crowding, without intention. He did not say that he did it deliberately, nor that he lifted the garment, but the garment was lifted by itself.

The hadith mentions that when the Prophet went into the village, he said Allah-u akbar i.e., 'God is supreme'. This confirms that glorifying God at the time of battle is desirable. It is consistent with the Qur'anic verse: 'Believers, when you meet an enemy force, be firm, and remember God often, so that you may be successful'. (8: 45) This gives us the understanding that a glorification repeated three times meets the requirement indicated by the word 'often'.

The Prophet also said: 'Khaybar is ruined'. Scholars understand this in two ways. The first is that it is a supplication that God may cause it to be ruined, while the second is that it is a statement informing the believers that it will be ruined for unbelievers and taken over by the Muslims.

The hadith mentions: 'We took it over by force'. Some of the forts of Khaybar were taken over peacefully. We will discuss this in full in its place, God willing.

Anas, the narrator of this hadith, continues: 'Diḥyah came to the Prophet and said: "Messenger of God, give me a woman from the captives". The Prophet said: "Go and pick one for yourself". He took Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyay'. According to correct reports, this was her name before she fell captive. Some suggest that her original name was Zaynab, but she was called Ṣafiyyah [which means 'chosen'] after the Prophet chose her.

The hadith mentions that a man came to the Prophet and said: 'Messenger of God, you gave Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyay to Diḥyah. She suits none other than you'. The Prophet said: 'Call him with her'. He brought her, and when the Prophet saw her, he said to him: 'Take a different woman captive'. Al-Māzarī and other scholars said that what happened with Diḥyah was one of two things. The first is that the Prophet permitted him to take an ordinary woman from those taken captive, not the best one. Then when the Prophet realized that he took the one who belonged to their best family, having the highest status in her community and the prettiest one, the Prophet told him to return her because he did not permit him that. The Prophet might have felt that it was wrong to leave it to Diḥyah because that would have given him a privileged status in the army and might lower her status as she was the daughter of the Jewish chief. Moreover, she might behave arrogantly to Diḥyah because of her status, and this might lead to problems. By taking her himself, the Prophet put an end to all these likely problems. He compensated Diḥyah well for her.

In hadith No. 3080, Ṣafīyyah 'was in Diḥyah's share [of war gains]. The Prophet bought her for seven heads'. This may mean that she was in his share when the Prophet gave him permission to take a woman from among the captives. This understanding is necessary so that it is consistent with the other hadiths. That the Prophet 'bought her' means that he gave him seven captives in return for her, so that Diḥyah would be well satisfied. There was no actual purchase deal. Thus, all the reports are reconciled.

Giving this to Diḥyah is understood to be a gift. For scholars who say that giving such gifts from the original war gains is permissible, the case involves no problem. For those who say that it must be from [the Prophet's own share], which is one-fifth of the one-fifth share that goes to the state,^{vi} giving a gift from this share is permissible before or after it is assigned. If it is before assignment, it must be calculated when the assignment is done. This is what is correct.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said something of this, then added:

My own view is that Ṣafiyyah was part of fay', which is gains taken without fighting. She was the wife of Kinānah ibn al-Rabī'. He and his family belonged to the Abu al-Ḥaḳīq clan who made a peaceful agreement with the Prophet. He stipulated a condition that they would not withhold any secret treasure from him. He asked them about the treasure which belonged to Ḥuyay ibn Akḥṭab, and they withheld the information, telling the Prophet that 'it was consumed by expenses'. He then found it in their place. Thus, their agreement was violated, and he imposed slavery on them. This is mentioned by Abu 'Ubayd and other scholars. Therefore, Ṣafiyyah is fay', and fay' is not subject to be divided into five-fifths. It is subject to the ruler's discretion.

What Qadi 'Iyāḍ says here is an application of the view of his Mālikī School, which considers that fay' is not subject to division. The view of our school is that it is divided in the same way as other war gains, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3077 mentions: 'Thābit asked him: "Abu Ḥamzah, what did he [i.e., the Prophet] give her as dowry?" He said: "He gave her herself. He set her free and married her".' This confirms that it is recommended that a person sets a slave woman free and marries her. This earns him double reward, as mentioned in hadith No. 3079.

Anas replies to the question about Ṣafīyyah's dowry: 'He gave her herself'. Scholars differ concerning its meaning. The view chosen by the best versed scholars is that the Prophet set her free as a gesture of good will, without any condition or return. He subsequently married her, by her free will and without a dowry. This is one of the special privileges he had, i.e., that he could marry without giving a dowry, either immediate or deferred. Other Muslims do not have this privilege. Some of our scholars say that he offered her a condition to set her free and marry him. She accepted and she had to honour her commitment. Other scholars of our school said he set her free and married her for the dowry of her value, which was unknown. Neither this nor the explanation before it are permissible to anyone else. Both are special privileges for him.

Scholars differ regarding the situation of a person who sets his slave free on condition that she will marry him, making her freedom her dowry. The majority say that she is not bound to marry him, and this condition is invalid. Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, Muhammad ibn al-Ḥasan and Zufar subscribe to this view. Al-Shāfi'ī said: 'If he sets her free on this condition and she agrees, she is free and she is not bound to marry him. She owes him her value because he did not accept setting her free for nothing. If she accepts and he marries her for a dowry agreed between them, she owes him her value and he owes her the agreed dowry, whether much or little. If he marries her for a dowry equal to her value, then if her value is known to both of them the dowry is fine and she owes him no value and he owes her no dowry.’ If her value is unknown, then our scholars have two views: the first view is that the dowry is valid as though it is known because such a contract involves some relaxation and generosity. The more correct view, which is shared by the majority of our Shāfi‘ī scholars, is that the dowry is invalid. The marriage is valid, and he owes her a dowry equal to women who are her peers.

However, Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib, al-Ḥasan, al-Nakha‘ī, al-Zuhri, al-Thawri, al-Awzā‘ī, Abu Yūsuf, Ahmad and Ishāq said that it is permissible that he sets her free on condition that she marries him. Thus, her freedom is her dowry, and she is bound to honour that. The dowry is valid on the basis of the apparent meaning of the wording of this hadith. Other scholars understood it as we have outlined.

The same hadith, No. 3077, mentions: ‘At one point on his return journey, Umm Sulaym prepared her and brought her to him during the night. In the morning, the Prophet was a newly-wedded bridegroom’. And in hadith No. 3080: ‘He then handed her to Umm Sulaym to prepare her and get her ready. (He said: I think he said) And so that she observes her waiting period in her home’. The phrase, ‘she observes her waiting time’, means that she had to ensure that she was not pregnant. As a captive woman, she needed to do that. The Prophet placed her with Umm Sulaym during this period. When it was over, and she made clear that she was not pregnant, Umm Sulaym prepared her and applied her makeup as normally done at weddings. She then brought her to the Prophet during the night. The wording of the hadith shows that certain things are placed before others. What it means is that she stayed with Umm Sulaym until she made certain of not being pregnant, then Umm Sulaym prepared her and then brought her to the Prophet. The hadith makes clear that a wedding is permissible at night. We mentioned earlier, in the hadith concerning the Prophet's marriage to 'Ā'ishah, that the wedding then took place during the day, and we stated that both situations are permissible, and God knows best.

In the same hadith, No. 3077, the Prophet said to his companions: 'Whoever has something [of food], let him bring it'. This provides evidence concerning the timing of the wedding dinner, and that it is after the consummation of the marriage. We mentioned earlier that it may be held before or after consummation. It also shows that it is permissible for one in high position to seek his people's help in such a matter, and that a bridegroom's neighbours and companions are recommended to help him by providing some food.

'People brought dried milk, dates and clarified butter. They cooked ḥays, and this was God's Messenger's wedding dinner'. Hays is a dish made of these three items which are mixed and made into a dough ready for eating.

Hadith No. 3079 mentions that a person who sets his slave woman free and marries her 'earns double reward'. We commented on this hadith earlier, in the Book of Faith. Muslim mentions it again here confirming that the Prophet did this with Ṣafīyyah, to highlight this commendable action.

Hadith No. 3080 mentions that when the Prophet wanted to give his wedding dinner, the earth was dug a little. This means that the place where the hide was put was made a little lower so that when the butter was poured, it would remain in the middle.

Hadith No. 3081 mentions the Prophet's marriage with Zaynab, and includes: 'The Prophet called on his wives, greeting each one of them, saying: "Peace be to you, how are you people of this house?" They would say: "We are well. How have you found your wife?" He would say: "She is fine".' This piece of the hadith includes a few interesting points. The first is that when a person returns home, it is recommended that he greet his wife and family. Some ignorant and arrogant men feel that they are above doing this. Another point is that when one greets a single person, he should say al-salām 'alaykum, using the plural form, so that his greeting is addressed to the individual person and to the two angels accompanying him or her. Moreover, it is recommended that a man should ask his wife and family how they are. A woman may have something to request of her husband, but she may be too shy to start with putting a request. If the man starts by asking how she is, she will find it easier to state what she needs. Yet another point is that it is desirable to ask the man when he comes home: 'How are you', or something similar.

In hadith No. 3080, people were unaware whether the Prophet married Ṣafīyyah or kept her as a slave. Then they said: 'If he screens her, she is his wife'. Mālikī scholars and others cite this as evidence that marriage is valid without witnesses to the contract, if it is publicized. Had the Prophet called witnesses to his marriage with Ṣafīyyah, they would not have wondered. This is the view of some scholars of the Prophet's Companions and the following generation, and it is shared by al-Zuhrī and Mālik. The people of Madinah stipulate the publicity, rather than witnesses for the validity of the marriage. A number of the Prophet's Companions and scholars in following generations said: the presence of witnesses is a condition for the validity of the marriage, rather than the publicity. This is the view of al-Awzā'ī, al-Thawrī, al-Shāfi'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, Ahmad and others. All these stipulate that the witnesses must be men of integrity. Only Abu Ḥanīfah says that it is valid if the witnesses are transgressors.

Muslims are unanimous that if a marriage contract is made secretly without witnesses, it is invalid. If it is made secretly with two witnesses of integrity, it is valid according to the great majority of scholars. Mālik, however, said it is invalid, but God knows best.

- i. An explanation of the attitude of Islam to slavery is included at the beginning of Book 20, which deals with freeing slaves, which is included in this volume. What is discussed here is the particular case of a slave woman being set free by her master who then marries her. This is an act of benevolence for which God grants rich reward.

THE PROPHET'S MARRIAGE TO ZAYNAB BINT JAḤSH

[3083-89]. (Dar al-Salam 3330) Muhammad ibn Ḥātim ibn Maymūn narrated:ⁱ Bahz narrated [H]. Also, Muhammad ibn Rāfi' narrated to me; Abu al-Naḍr Hāshim ibn al-Qāsim narrated; both said: Sulaymān ibn al-Mughīrah narrated; from Thābit; from Anas. This is Bahz's narration; he said: 'When Zaynab finished her waiting period, God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said to Zayd: "Go and propose to her on my behalf". Zayd went to her as she was making her dough. He said: "When I saw her, I was so filled with awe that I could not look at her because God's Messenger was proposing to her. Therefore, I turned my back to her and moved a little away from her. I said: 'Zaynab, God's Messenger (peace be upon him) has sent me with his proposal'. She said: 'I shall do nothing until I have consulted [God] my Lord'. She then rose and went to her place of prayer. The Qur'an was revealed. God's Messenger then came over and entered her home without seeking permission".'

He said: ‘I can see us as God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) offered us a feast of bread and meat when the day was in full splendour. People then left and some men stayed inside the home after the dinner. The Prophet went out stopping at his wives’ apartments and greeting them. They asked him: “How have you found your wife, Messenger of God?”’ He said: ‘I am not sure whether I told him, or he told me, that the men have left. He moved on until he went inside his home. I was about to enter with him, but he dropped the curtain between himself and me. The [commandment of] screening [the Prophet’s wives] was revealed’. He added: ‘The people were given the admonition they received’.

Ibn Rāfi‘ added in his narration [the Qur’anic verse]: ‘Believers! Do not enter the Prophet’s homes unless you are given leave for a meal, without waiting for its proper time. But when you are invited, enter; and when you have eaten, disperse without lingering for the sake of mere talk. Such behaviour might give offence to the Prophet, and yet he might feel too shy to bid you go. God does not shy of stating what is right’. (33: 53)

رَادَ ابْنُ رَافِعٍ فِي حَدِيثِهِ الْآيَةَ: «يَا أَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا لَا تَدْخُلُوا بُيُوتَ النَّبِيِّ إِلَّا أَنْ يُؤْذَنَ لَكُمْ إِلَى طَعَامٍ غَيْرَ نَاطِرِينَ إِنَاهُ» إِلَى قَوْلِهِ: «وَاللَّهُ لَا يَسْتَحْيِي مِنَ الْحَقِّ».

[3084-90]. (Dar al-Salam 3331) Abu al-Rabī' al-Zahrānī, Abu Kāmil Fuḍayl ibn Ḥusayn and Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated:ⁱⁱ they said: Hammād (who is ibn Zayd) narrated; from Thābit; from Anas; (in Abu Kāmil's narration: I heard Anas:) he said: 'I have not seen God's Messenger (peace be upon him) giving a bigger wedding feast for any woman (Abu Kāmil said: for anyone) of his wives, as he did for Zaynab. He slaughtered a sheep'.

[3086-92]. (Dar al-Salam 3333) Yaḥyā ibn Ḥabīb al-Ḥārithī, ‘Āṣim ibn al-Naḍr al-Taymī and Muhammad ibn ‘Abd al-A‘lā narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ all from Mu‘tamir (Ibn Ḥabīb’s text); Mu‘tamir ibn Sulaymān narrated; he said: I heard my father say: Abu Mijlaz narrated; from Anas ibn Mālik. He said: ‘When the Prophet (peace be upon him) married Zaynab bint Jaḥsh, he invited the people, and they had their meal. They then stayed, engaged in conversation. He started to move as if preparing to go, but they did not go. When he realized this, he stood up. Other people also stood’.

‘Āṣim and ‘Abd al-A‘lā added in their narration: ‘Three people stayed on. The Prophet came back and wanted to enter but found the people still seated. They later rose and left. I went and informed the Prophet that they had left’. He said: ‘He came over and entered. I wanted to enter, but he dropped the curtain between himself and me. God, Mighty and Exalted, revealed the verse: “Believers! Do not enter the Prophet’s homes unless you are given leave for a meal, without waiting for its proper time. But when you are invited, enter; and when you have eaten, disperse without lingering for the sake of mere talk. Such behaviour might give offence to the Prophet, and yet he might feel too shy to bid you go. God does not shy of stating what is right. When you ask the Prophet’s wives for something, do so from behind a screen. This makes for greater purity for your hearts and theirs. Moreover, it does not behove you to give offence to God’s Messenger, just as it would not behove you ever to marry his widows after he has passed away. That is certainly an enormity in God’s sight”.’ (33: 53)

He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) got married and he consummated his marriage'. He said: 'My mother, Umm Sulaym, cooked hays and put it in a jug. She said: "Anas, take this to God's Messenger (peace be upon him) and say: 'My mother has sent you this, and she sends her greetings and says that this is very little from us to you, Messenger of God'. took it to God's Messenger and said: "My mother sends you her greetings and says that this is very little from us to you, God's Messenger". He said: "Put it down". He then said: "Go and invite A, B, C and whomever you meet". He named certain people. I went out and invited those he named and whomever I met'.

He said: I said to Anas: 'How many were they?' He said: 'Nearly three hundred'.

'God's Messenger said to me: "Anas, bring the jug".' He said: 'The people came in, and the parlour and room were full. God's Messenger said: "Let every ten people form a circle and let everyone eat what is next to him". They ate their fill. A group went out and another came in, until they all had eaten. He then said to me: "Anas, you may lift [the food]". I took it away. I am not sure whether it was more plentiful when I lifted it or when I put it down'.

He said: 'Some groups remained in the Prophet's home engaged in conversation, and God's Messenger was sitting, while his wife sat down, with her face towards the wall. God's Messenger (peace be upon him) felt embarrassed, and he went out and greeted his wives and came back. When the people saw God's Messenger returning, they thought that they might have embarrassed him, and they were quick to the door and all left. God's Messenger came in, dropped the curtain and went in. I remained in the apartment. He stayed only a little while and came out to me. This verse was revealed. The Prophet went out and recited it to the people: "Believers! Do not enter the Prophet's homes unless you are given leave for a meal, without waiting for its proper time. But when you are invited, enter; and when you have eaten, disperse without lingering for the sake of mere talk. Text Explanation

Note: To put the case into proper perspective, we should give the following background information. Zaynab bint Jaḥsh was the Prophet's cousin, as her mother was his paternal aunt. Zayd ibn Ḥārithah was kidnapped when he was a young boy and sold as a slave. He ended up in Makkah, given to Khadījah as a gift by her uncle. When she married the Prophet, she gave Zayd to him as a gift. His father learnt that he was in Makkah, and he came over and offered to buy him back. The Prophet gave Zayd a choice to go with his father or to remain with him, and Zayd chose to stay. The Prophet then adopted him as his son. All this was long before the prophethood. Later, the Prophet gave him Zaynab, his cousin, as a wife. She did not like the marriage and the couple got divorced. When God prohibited adoption, He instructed the Prophet to marry Zaynab, so that the whole idea of adoption and what it may involve, or entail, is totally removed from people's minds.

Hadith No. 3083 mentions that the Prophet sent Zayd with his proposal to Zaynab. This suggests that there is nothing wrong with sending the former husband of a woman to her with a proposal of marriage, if the sender knows that the former husband does not dislike this, as was the case with Zayd and the Prophet. Zayd reports: 'When I saw her, I was so filled with awe that I could not look at her because God's Messenger was proposing to her. Therefore, I turned my back to her and moved a little away from her'. This means that he felt the awe of the situation because the Prophet wanted to marry her. Therefore, Zayd treated her with all the respect and honour due to the Prophet's wives.

He moved back, after having been near as would have been normal in such cases. Feeling such awe, he spoke turning his back to her, so that he might not look at her, although this was before the commandment to screen the Prophet's wives.

When Zayd told her of the Prophet's proposal, she said: 'I shall do nothing until I have consulted [God] my Lord'. She then rose and went to her place of prayer. This indicates the desirability of offering the Istikhārah Prayer before making a choice, even when something is clearly good and beneficial. Istikhārah is a prayer followed by a supplication for God's guidance in making a choice regarding a particular matter. This is consistent with a hadith narrated by Jābir and related by al-Bukhari. It says: 'When any of you is about to make a decision regarding a certain matter, he should pray two voluntary rak'ahs...' Perhaps Zaynab chose to do the Istikhārah on this occasion because she feared that she might fall short of fulfilling her duties as the Prophet's wife.

Anas continues: 'The Qur'an was revealed. God's Messenger then came over and entered her home without seeking permission'. Anas is referring to the revelation of the Qur'anic verse which includes: 'When Zayd had come to the end of his union with her, We gave her to you in marriage'. (33: 37) The Prophet entered without requesting permission because God Himself gave her to him as his wife, as confirmed in this verse.

The Prophet gave the people a wedding dinner and they ate their fill. Everyone ate as much as they wanted. The Prophet then went to his other wives, when some people lingered in his home, as we explained in the previous chapter.

In hadith No. 3085, Anas says: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) never gave a bigger or a better wedding feast for any of his wives, as he did for Zaynab'. Perhaps the reason was to thank God for His favour as He gave him Zaynab as a wife by revelation, not by a marriage contract that requires a guardian and witnesses, like other marriages. The correct and well-known view of our school is that his marriage without the presence of a guardian and witnesses was valid because these were not required in his case. The difference of views on this point does not apply to Zaynab because her situation is stated in the Qur'anic text. The difference applies to other women, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3088 mentions that Umm Sulaym cooked a dish and sent it to God's Messenger saying that it was too little. This confirms that it is recommended that friends of a bridegroom send him some food to help him with providing his wedding feast. It also shows that it is right that the senders make their excuses to the bridegroom, as Umm Sulaym said that what she sent was too little. She also sent her greeting, which is also recommended if the person sending them has some reason preventing him or her from attending.

The Prophet instructs Anas to invite certain people he named and also whoever Anas met on the way. This shows that the invitation may be sent to certain identified people and to others who are unidentified, as the Prophet said to Anas 'whoever you meet'. This hadith demonstrates a clear miracle from the Prophet through which a limited amount of food was sufficient for all those attending, amounting to ‘nearly three hundred’.

Transmission

In hadith No. 3086, the chain of transmission includes Abu Mijlaz, who narrates from Anas ibn Mālik. Abu Mijlaz’s name is Lāḥiq ibn Ḥumayd. He is the only narrator in all chains of transmission in the two Ṣaḥīḥ anthologies of al-Bukhari and Muslim whose name starts with the combination of Lā, which is often referred to as one letter.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3090 gives the Prophet's order: 'If any of you is invited to a wedding feast, he should go'. There is no difference of opinion regarding whether this is an order or not, but there is difference in whether the order implies a duty or a recommendation. The more correct view in our school is that it is a personal duty applicable to everyone who receives the invitation, but there are excuses that exempt a person from it, and we will mention these, God willing. The second view is that it is a collective duty, which means that if some of those invited attend, the others are exempt. The third view is that it is recommended. This is our view regarding the invitation to a wedding dinner. As for other invitations, our scholars express two views: the first is that it is the same as the wedding dinner and the other considers attendance recommended.

Qadi 'Iyād reports that scholars are agreed on that attending a wedding dinner is a duty when invited, but they differ concerning other occasions. Mālik and the majority of scholars said that attendance is not a duty. Scholars of the Zāhirī School say that accepting an invitation is a duty, whether it is for a wedding dinner or any other. The same is expressed by some early scholars.

Reasons that make the duty or recommendation of attending an invitation inapplicable include that there may be some doubt about the lawfulness of the food; that the invitation is given exclusively to rich people; the presence of someone who is hostile to oneself; that the invitation is meant as an act of appeasement or a way to make some gain for the host or to help him in something unlawful; or that there will be some forbidden thing, such as alcoholic drinks, silk furniture, animal images, gold or silver utensils, etc. All these are valid excuses for not answering an invitation. Another reason is to apologize and the host accepts the apology. If one is invited by a dhimmi, attendance is not a duty according to the more correct view. If the invitation is for something that extends over three days, attendance on the first day is a duty, on the second recommended and on the third discouraged.

Hadith No. 3092 says: 'If any of you is invited to a wedding feast, he should go'. This may be cited as evidence in support of the view that attendance is a duty only in the case of a wedding dinner. Others rely on the hadiths that do not specify a wedding but speak of invitations generally. Moreover, the Prophet says in hadith No. 3094: 'If any of you invites his brother, he should attend, whether it is a wedding or something similar'.

Hadith No. 3099 states: 'When any of you is invited to a meal, he should go. He may eat if he wishes and may not if he so desires'. The next hadith mentions that 'if one is fasting, he should pray, and if not, he should eat'. Scholars differ as to the meaning of 'he should pray'. The majority say that it means he should pray for the hosts that God may forgive their sins and give them blessings, etc. It is also said that it means the normal prayer. Thus, when someone attends an invitation to a dinner and he is fasting, he busies himself with prayer when other guests are eating. Thus, he earns the reward for prayer and the hosts and their guests gain the blessing of the offered prayer. If one is not fasting, hadith No. 3100 instructs him to eat, while in the previous hadith he is given a choice. Scholars who make eating a duty rely on the second hadith and interpret the one offering a choice as related to the guest who is fasting. They consider the order in the later hadith as one of recommendation.

When we speak of a duty to eat, the minimum is one bite, and this redeems the duty because taking one bite is eating. A person who swears not to eat breaks his oath if he eats one bite. Moreover, when a guest refuses to eat, the host may think that he considers the food is unlawful to eat. To eat one bite removes this suspicion. As for a fasting person, there is no disagreement that he need not eat. If his fast is obligatory, eating is not permissible for him because one may not stop an obligation. If it is voluntary fasting, terminating it is permissible. Therefore, if the host finds it difficult that a guest is fasting, it is preferable that the guest ends his voluntary fasting. Otherwise, he may continue his fast, but God knows best.

The hadith No. 3097 mentions that “Abdullāh ibn ‘Umar used to go to invitations, whether a wedding or not. He would go even if he were fasting’. This shows that fasting is not an excuse for not attending when invited. Our scholars said that if one is invited and he is fasting, attendance is necessary in the same way as for one who is not fasting. The purpose is achieved by his attendance, even though he may not share the food. The host and the other guests may find his attendance a blessing. They may benefit by his presence, supplication or indication, and may refrain from unbecoming things they would not have refrained from if he were not present, but God knows best.

The last two hadiths speak of the worst kind of food. Muslim mentions one as reported by Abu Hurayrah and the other attributed to the Prophet. As explained earlier, in such cases, the hadith is deemed to have been said by the Prophet because its attribution to the Prophet is an addition by a reliable narrator. This hadith tells of what was going to happen in the future when people would give particular attention to rich people, inviting them and providing them with the best of food, treating them with much respect. This is the case in many situations these days. Help is to be sought from God alone.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of the last hadith, No. 3104 includes: ‘I heard Thābit al-A‘raj narrating from Abu Hurayrah’. He is Thābit ibn ‘Iyād al-A‘raj al-Aḥnaf al-Qurayshī al-‘Adawī, the mawlā of ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Zayd ibn al-Khaṭṭāb. It is also said that he was the mawlā of ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Zayd ibn al-Khaṭṭāb. Further, it is said that his name was Thābit ibn al-Aḥnaf ibn ‘Iyād, but God knows best.

No way, until you have experienced his sweetness and he experienced yours”.’ She [i.e., ‘Ā’ishah added: ‘Abu Bakr was with him, while Khālīd was at the door awaiting permission to enter. [3106-112]. (Dar al-Salam 3355) Abu al-Ṭāhir and Ḥarmalah ibn Yaḥyā narrated to me (Ḥarmalah's text): Ibn Wahb (Abu al-Ṭāhir said: 'narrated' and Ḥarmalah said: 'reported'); Yūnus reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; 'Urwah ibn al-Zabir narrated to me; that 'Ā'ishah, the Prophet's wife, told him that 'Rifā'ah al-Qurazī divorced his wife, making the divorce irrevocable. She then married 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Zabīr. She came to the Prophet and said: "Messenger of God, I was married to Rifā'ah and he divorced me the last of three divorces. I then married 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Zabīr. By God, what he has is no more than the edge of a robe", and she held a small portion of her robe. God's Messenger smiled and said: "Perhaps you want to be reunited with Rifā'ah? Definitely not, until he has experienced your sweetness and you experienced his". Abu Bakr al-Ṣiddīq was sitting with God's Messenger, while Khālīd ibn Sa‘īd ibn al-‘Āṣ was sitting at the door of the apartment, having had no permission to enter yet. Khālīd called out to Abu Bakr: “Should you not reproach this woman for what she is saying openly at God’s Messenger’s?”

Text Explanation

In hadith No. 3105 the woman mentions that her first husband made her divorce irrevocable. This means that he divorced her three times. She uses the expression ‘the edge of a robe’, meaning the end that has not been sewn. The Prophet tells the woman that she could not go back to her first husband until her second husband ‘has experienced your sweetness and you experienced his’. For sweetness, the Prophet uses a reduced form of the word ‘honey’. This is a figurative expression referring to sexual intercourse, likening the orgasm to the sweetness of honey. Some suggest that he meant the semen, but this is not valid because the man’s ejaculation is not a condition.

This hadith, in its various versions, makes it clear that a woman who has been divorced three times is unlawful to remarry her former husband until she has married another man and the marriage has been consummated. She may remarry her first husband if this second husband divorces her and she observes a full waiting period. A marriage contract with another man, without the consummation of the marriage before the divorce, does not make it permissible for her to remarry her first husband. This is the view of all scholars from the time of the Prophet's Companions and the tābi'īn and subsequent generations. Only Sa'īd ibn al-Musayyib said that if the second man has a marriage contract with her and divorces her, she becomes lawful to remarry the first husband. Consummation of the marriage is not a condition according to him. His evidence is the Qur'anic verse stating, 'until she has married another husband'. Marriage truly applies to the contract. The majority of scholars defend their view by saying that the wording of the hadith limits the general sense of the Qur'anic verse and explains its import.

Scholars said that Sa'īd might not have been aware of this hadith. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'None said the same as Sa'īd except a group of the Khawārij. Scholars are agreed upon the view that the insertion of the tip of the man's penis in the woman's vagina is sufficient, and it is not necessary for an ejaculation to take place. Only al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī makes the ejaculation a condition, considering it the meaning of experiencing the sweetness. The majority of scholars said that the pleasure of intercourse occurs with penetration. If the marriage contract is invalid and intercourse occurs, she remains unlawful to remarry her first husband because the man with whom the invalid marriage contract is made is not her husband.'

The hadiths mention that the Prophet smiled. This was an expression of wonder at the woman who says openly what women are normally too shy to say or because he recognized that she disliked her second husband and wanted to be reunited with the first, but God knows best.

WHAT TO SAY WHEN HAVING INTERCOURSE

[3110-116]. (Dar al-Salam 3361) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā and Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm narrated (Yaḥyā's text): both said: Jarīr reported; from Manṣūr; from Sālim; from Kurayb; from Ibn 'Abbās. He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "If someone says, when he is about to have intercourse with his wife: 'In the name of God, our Lord, keep Satan away from us and keep Satan away from what you give us', then if by God's will they are given a child, it will never be harmed by Satan".'

مَا رَزَقْتَنَا، فَإِنَّهُ إِنْ يُقَدَّرَ بَيْنَهُمَا وَلَدٌ فِي ذَلِكَ لَمْ يَضُرَّهُ شَيْطَانٌ أَبَدًا».

[3111-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3362) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā and Ibn Bashshār narrated: both said:

And 'Abd ibn Hūmayd narrated; 'Abd al-Razzāq reported; all from al-Thawrī; both from Manşūr: the same meaning as Jarīr's narration. However, in Shu'bah's narration, there is no mention of 'in the name of God', and in 'Abd al-Razzāq's narration from al-Thawrī 'in the name of God' is included. In Ibn Numayr's narration: Manşūr said: 'I think he said: "in the name of God".'

وَحَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْمُثَنَّى، وَابْنُ بَشَّارٍ قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ جَعْفَرٍ، حَدَّثَنَا شُعْبَةُ، ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ ثَمِيرٍ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبِي ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ بْنُ حُمَيْدٍ، أَخْبَرَنَا عَبْدُ الرَّزَّاقِ، جَمِيعًا عَنِ الثَّوْرِيِّ. كِلَاهُمَا عَنْ مَنْصُورٍ، بِمَعْنَى حَدِيثِ جَرِيرٍ. غَيْرَ أَنَّ شُعْبَةَ لَيْسَ فِي حَدِيثِهِ ذِكْرُ «بِاسْمِ اللَّهِ». وَفِي رِوَايَةِ عَبْدِ الرَّزَّاقِ عَنِ الثَّوْرِيِّ «بِاسْمِ اللَّهِ». وَفِي رِوَايَةِ ابْنِ ثَمِيرٍ قَالَ مَنْصُورٌ أَرَاهُ قَالَ «بِاسْمِ اللَّهِ»

When explaining the phrase 'it will never be harmed by Satan', Qadi 'Iyād said that it means that Satan will not overpower the child. It is also said that it means that Satan does not cause the child harm at the time of its birth. This is not the same in other cases. Qadi 'Iyād adds that no scholar has taken this hadith as covering all harm, including foul whispering and temptation.

Text Explanation

These hadiths mention that wives are tilth, which is figurative for planting. Therefore, sexual intercourse must occur in the place where the semen is placed in the hope that fertilization occurs leading to childbirth. The hadiths also make clear that intercourse is permissible in the woman's vagina, in whatever position one prefers, from the front, rear or with her face looking down. Needless to say, the anus is no place for tilth. Therefore, all scholars agree that anal intercourse is forbidden, whether the woman is in her menstrual period or not. There are several well-known hadiths confirming this prohibition, such as the hadith that says: ‘Cursed is the one who has anal intercourse with a woman’. Our scholars have said that anal intercourse is not lawful with humans or animals in any situation, but God knows best.

A WOMAN MAY NOT ABANDON HER HUSBAND'S BED

[3115-120]. (Dar al-Salam 3366) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā and Ibn Bashshār narrated (Ibn al-Muthannā's text):ⁱ both said: Muhammad ibn Ja'far narrated; Shu'bah narrated; he said: I heard Qatādah; narrating from Zurārah ibn Awfā; from Abu Hurayrah; from the Prophet (peace be upon him). He said: 'If a woman goes to sleep abandoning her husband's bed, the angels will curse her until the morning'.

The same text was narrated to me by Yahyā ibn Ḥabīb: Khālid (meaning ibn al-Ḥārith) narrated; Shu'bah narrated; with the same chain of transmission, but he said: 'until she goes back'.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3115 says: ‘If a woman goes to sleep abandoning her husband’s bed, the angels will curse her until the morning’. Another version says: ‘until she goes back’. This is clear evidence of the prohibition of a woman’s refusal to be in bed with her husband for no legitimate reason. Being in the menstruation period is not a valid reason because her husband has the right to seek the pleasure of intimacy with her above her lower garment. The hadith means that the curse applies to her until the morning when the time has lapsed, or until she repents and returns to her husband’s bed.

THE PROHIBITION OF PUBLICIZING ONE'S WIFE'S SECRETS

[3118-123]. (Dar al-Salam 3369) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Marwān ibn Mu'āwiyah narrated; from 'Umar ibn Ḥamzah al-'Umarī; 'Abd al-Rahmān ibn Sa'd narrated; he said: I heard Abu Sa'id al-Khudrī say: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "One of the worst positions in God's sight on the Day of Judgement is that of a man who is intimate with his wife and she is intimate with him, then he publicizes her secrets".'

حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، حَدَّثَنَا مَرْوَانُ بْنُ مُعَاوِيَةَ، عَنْ عُمَرَ بْنِ حَمْرَةَ الْعُمَرِيِّ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنُ سَعْدٍ قَالَ: سَمِعْتُ أَبَا سَعِيدٍ الْخُدْرِيَّ يَقُولُ: قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «إِنَّ مِنْ أَشَرِّ النَّاسِ عِنْدَ اللَّهِ مَنْزِلَةً يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ الرَّجُلَ يُفْضِي إِلَى امْرَأَتِهِ، وَتُفْضِي إِلَيْهِ، ثُمَّ يَنْشُرُ سِرَّهَا».

[3119-124]. (Dar al-Salam 3370) Muhammad ibn 'Abdullāh ibn Numayr and Abu Kurayb narrated:

both said: Abu Usāmah narrated; from ‘Umar ibn Hamzah; from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Sa’d; he said: I heard Abu Sa’īd al-Khudrī say: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “One of the most important trusts in God’s sight on the Day of Judgement is that of a man who is intimate with his wife and she is intimate with him, then he publicizes her secrets”.’

Ibn Numayr said: ‘The most important...’.

وَحَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ بْنِ ثُمَيْرٍ، وَأَبُو كُرَيْبٍ قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو أُسَامَةَ، عَنْ عُمَرَ بْنِ حَمْرَةَ، عَنْ عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنِ سَعْدٍ، قَالَ سَمِعْتُ أَبَا سَعِيدٍ الْخُدْرِيَّ يَقُولُ: قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «إِنَّ مِنْ أَعْظَمِ الْأَمَانَةِ عِنْدَ اللَّهِ يَوْمَ الْقِيَامَةِ الرَّجُلَ يُفْضِي إِلَى امْرَأَتِهِ، وَتُفْضِي إِلَيْهِ، ثُمَّ يَنْشُرُ سِرَّهَا». .
وَقَالَ ابْنُ ثُمَيْرٍ: «إِنَّ أَعْظَمَ».

Text Explanation

This hadith makes it clear that it is forbidden for a man to tell of what happens between him and his wife of sexual enjoyment and to describe this or what his wife says or does when they are intimate together. However, mere mention of having intercourse is reprehensible if there is no need or use of speaking about it because it is unbecoming. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ‘Whoever believes in God and the Last Day should either say what is good or keep silent'. If there is need, or if it leads to some benefit, such as criticizing him for abandoning her, or to support her claim that he is impotent, or some similar thing, such mention is permissible, as the Prophet said: 'I do it with this one'. He also asked Abu Ṭalḥah: 'Have you wedded tonight?' He said to Jābir: 'Gently, gently', but God knows best.

THE RULING ON COITUS INTERRUPTUS

[3120-125]. (Dar al-Salam 3371) Yaḥyā ibn Ayyūb, Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd and ‘Alī ibn Ḥujr narrated:ⁱ they said: Ismā‘īl ibn Ja‘far narrated; Rabī‘ah reported to me; from Muhammad ibn Yaḥyā ibn Ḥabbān; from Ibn Muḥayrīz; that he said: ‘Abu Ṣirmah and I visited Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī. Abu Ṣirmah asked him: “Abu Sa‘īd, did you hear God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) mention coitus interruptus?” He said: “Yes, we went with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) when we fought al-Muṣṭalaq people, and we took honourable Arab women as slaves. We were long without our women, but we were still eager to gain their ransom. We thought of seeking our pleasure and resorting to coitus interruptus. Then we thought, are we to do this when God’s Messenger is with us and without asking him! We asked God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and he said: ‘You need not do it. Every soul God has decreed to be created, up to the Day of Judgement, shall inevitably be created’.”’

وَحَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ أَيُّوبَ، وَقُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، وَعَلِيُّ بْنُ حُجْرٍ، قَالُوا: حَدَّثَنَا إِسْمَاعِيلُ بْنُ جَعْفَرٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي رَبِيعَةُ، عَنْ مُحَمَّدِ بْنِ يَحْيَى بْنِ حَبَّانَ، عَنْ ابْنِ مُحَيْرِيزٍ أَنَّهُ قَالَ: دَخَلْتُ أَنَا وَأَبُو صِرْمَةَ عَلَى أَبِي سَعِيدٍ الْخُدْرِيِّ، فَسَأَلَهُ أَبُو صِرْمَةَ فَقَالَ: يَا أَبَا سَعِيدٍ، هَلْ سَمِعْتَ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَذْكُرُ الْعَزَلَ؟ فَقَالَ: نَعَمْ. عَزَوْنَا مَعَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَزْوَةً بَلْمُصْطَلِقٍ، فَسَبَّيْنَا كَرَائِمَ الْعَرَبِ. فَطَالَتْ عَلَيْنَا الْعُرْبَةُ، وَرَغِبْنَا فِي الْفِدَاءِ. فَأَرَدْنَا أَنْ نَسْتَمْتَعَ وَنَعْزِلَ. فَقُلْنَا: تَفْعَلْ وَرَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ بَيْنَ أَظْهُرِنَا لَا نَسْأَلُهُ! فَسَأَلْنَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَقَالَ: «لَا عَلَيْكُمُ أَنْ لَا تَفْعَلُوا. مَا كَتَبَ اللَّهُ خَلْقَ نَسَمَةٍ هِيَ كَائِنَةٌ إِلَى يَوْمِ الْقِيَامَةِ إِلَّا سَتَكُونُ».

Text Explanation

Coitus interruptus is a practice involving sexual intercourse and when the man feels close to ejaculation, he withdraws and ejaculates outside. According to our school, it is reprehensible in every situation and with every woman, whether she agrees or not, because it is one way of preventing conception. Hence, it is called in a different hadith 'subtle burial'. It prevents conception and childbirth just as burial means killing the born child. As for its prohibition, our scholars say that it is not forbidden when it is practised with one's slave woman, or one's wife who is a slave, whether they agree to this or not. This is because begetting a child by either has adverse effects for the man. If the woman is a slave and she gives birth to a child, her status becomes that of 'mother of child' and she cannot be sold.^{vi} If the slave is the man's wife, her child is also considered a slave.

If coitus interruptus is practised with one's free wife and she agrees to it, it is not forbidden. If she does not agree, two views are expressed, and the more correct one is that it is not forbidden either. The hadiths in this chapter are reconciled on the basis that where a negative order is given, it means the practice is only discouraged, and where permission is given, it means that the practice is not forbidden, but does not negate discouragement.

This is a brief summary of the rulings pertaining to this chapter and how its hadiths are reconciled. Early scholars held different views along the same lines as we have outlined regarding the views of our school. Those who prohibit coitus interruptus if a free wife does not agree to it said that it has an adverse effect on the woman. Therefore, her agreement is necessary.

In hadith No. 3120, Abu Sa'īd mentions the feelings of the Prophet's Companions when they fought against al-Muṣṭalaq tribe: 'We were long without our women, but we were still eager to gain their ransom'. He meant that they felt the sexual urge but they feared that the slaves they had might become pregnant. Thus, the woman would become 'mother of child' and could not be sold or bring about a ransom. This means that this was a well-known practice.

As they thought of coitus interruptus as a way out, the Prophet said to them: 'You need not do it. Every soul God has decreed to be created, up to the Day of Judgement, shall inevitably be created'. What he meant is that they would not be affected either way. If God wills to create a child, His will is done whether they used this method or not. If He has not willed to create a child, it will not happen. This means that the method itself would be rendered ineffective.

This hadith provides evidence in support of the view of the great majority of scholars that Arabs may be enslaved when they are taken captive in war, in the same way as non-Arabs. In other words, if they were unbelievers, their enslavement was permissible. The al-Muṣṭalaq tribe was an Arab tribe, a branch of the major tribe of Khuzā'ah. The Muslims took them captive, consorted with their women who were taken slaves and whereby their sale was considered permissible. This is agreed by Mālik and al-Shāfi‘ī in his later and correct ruling, as well as the majority of scholars. Abu Ḥanīfah and al-Shāfi‘ī in his earlier ruling said that Arabs might not be enslaved because of their honourable descent, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3131 mentions the case of the man who mentioned his slave woman and his resort to coitus interruptus. The Prophet told him that he could do so if he wished but it would not prevent the creation of what God wills to create. The man later told the Prophet that she was pregnant. This shows that the child would be affiliated to his father despite the practice of contraception. The hadith makes it clear that when a man admits sleeping with his slave woman, her children are attributed to him, unless he claims to have ensured that she was not pregnant after he had sex with her. This is the view of our school and Mālik.

When the man tells the Prophet that his slave woman had fallen pregnant, the Prophet said: ‘I am God’s servant and Messenger’. This means that what I tell you is the truth. So, take it as such, because it will certainly prove to be correct.

NO INTERCOURSE WITH A PREGNANT SLAVE

[3135-139]. (Dar al-Salam 3389-3390) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated to me: Muhammad ibn Ja'far narrated; Shu'bah narrated; from Yazīd ibn Khumayr; he said: I heard 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Jubayr narrating from his father; from Abu al-Dardā'; from the Prophet (peace be upon him) that 'He saw a heavily pregnant woman at the entrance of a tent. He said: "Maybe the man wants to have intercourse with her?" They said: "Yes". The Prophet said: "I was about to curse him in a way that the curse goes with him to his grave. How can he give him inheritance when it is unlawful to him? How can he put him to service when it is unlawful to him?"'

Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Yazīd ibn Hārūn nar-rated [H]. Also, Muhammad ibn Bashshār narrated; Abu Dāwūd narrated; both from Shu‘bah; with the same chain of transmission: the same text.

وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، حَدَّثَنَا يَزِيدُ بْنُ هَارُونَ، ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ بَشَّارٍ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو دَاوُدَ، جَمِيعًا عَنْ شُعْبَةَ، فِي هَذَا الْإِسْنَادِ.

Text Explanation

The woman in this hadith was a pregnant slave, and the rule applicable to her is that she is unlawful to have sex with until she has given birth. The Prophet says: ‘How can he give him inheritance when it is unlawful to him? How can he put him to service when it is unlawful to him?’ This means that the birth may be delayed for six months, if her pregnancy was by the man who took her captive, but it may also be by the man preceding him. Thus, if the pregnancy was by the soldier who took her captive, the child, when born, would be his child and both father and son inherit each other. On the other hand, if the pregnancy was by the other man, the soldier and the child are unrelated and would not inherit each other. To consider the child an heir means that it takes a share from the other heirs, and this is unlawful. On the other hand, the soldier may make the child a slave he owns, but this is not open to him if the child was his own. This confused case is possible if the woman gives birth at a time when either man might have been the father. Hence, the soldier who took her captive must not have intercourse with her until she has given birth. This is the obvious meaning of the hadith.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This may be a reference to the notion that the embryo may grow by the soldier's semen, and thus the soldier becomes a partner in its parenthood, thereby he cannot put the child into his service. This is similar to the other hadith which says: "Whoever believes in God and the Last Day must not give someone else's child his own fluid".' What Qadi 'Iyāḍ says in this instance is flimsy or false. How could inheritance be fitted with such an interpretation? The right explanation is what we have said, but God knows best.

God’s Messenger asked him: “Why do you do that?” He said: “I fear for her child, or children”. God’s Messenger said: “Had that been harmful, it would have harmed the Byzantines and the Persians”.’

Zuhayr said in his narration: ‘If for this reason, then do not. It did not harm either the Byzantines or the Persians’.

Text Explanation

These hadiths speak of ghīlah and that the Prophet intended to prohibit it, but then considered that other communities did it with no adverse effects. Scholars differ as to the meaning of this word. In his al-Muwaṭṭaʿ, Mālik said it means having intercourse with one's wife during the time she is breastfeeding. This explanation is also stated by al-Aṣmaʿī and other linguists. Ibn al-Sukayt said that it means that a woman continues to breastfeed when she is pregnant.

Scholars have said that the reason for the Prophet's earlier intention to prohibit such intercourse was that he feared that it might harm the suckling baby. Medical men used to say that the milk became harmful, and the Arabs disliked this. The hadiths show that having intercourse with one's wife during any breastfeeding period is permissible because the Prophet did not prohibit it, and he explained why he did not. The hadith also shows that ijtihād was open to the Prophet (peace be upon him), and this is agreed upon by the majority of scholars of legal theory. Some say that it was not open to him because he was supported by revelations, but the first view is the correct one.

In hadith No. 3137, the Prophet was asked about coitus interruptus, and he described it as 'subtle burial'. The narrator adds by way of explanation the verse: 'When the girl, buried alive, is asked'. (81: 8) [The next verse, not mentioned in the hadith, is 'for what offence was she killed'.] In his answer the Prophet used the word wa'd, which was the practice of the Arabs before Islam, when they buried their young girls alive. They did so for fear of poverty as a girl could not earn her own living. They might also have done it for fear that she might bring shame on her family and tribe. We explained in the previous chapter why this is called wa'd, stating that it has a similar effect, i.e., preventing the continuity of life.

Transmission

The chains of transmission of these hadiths include Judāmah bint Wahb. In hadith No. 3136, Muslim mentions the disagreement among narrators about her name and that Khalaf said that it was Judhāmah. [The difference in the written form in these names is that the 'dh' is written in the same way as 'd' with a dot above it.] The majority of scholars agree with Muslim that it is Judāmah.

Her name occurs as Judāmah bint Wahb, and in one version as Judāmah bint Wahb, 'Ukkāshah's sister. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'Some scholars said that she was 'Ukkāshah's sister, stating that she was Judāmah bint Wahb ibn Miḥṣan. Others said that she was the sister of a different man called 'Ukkāshah ibn Wahb, who was different from the well-known 'Ukkāshah ibn Miḥṣan. Al-Ṭabarī said that she was Judāmah bint Jandal, one of the Muhājirīn, but scholars of Hadith called her Judāmah bint Wahb'.

This is what Qadi 'Iyād mentioned about her, but the preferred view is that she was Judāmah bint Wahb al-Asadiyyah, sister of 'Ukkāshah ibn Miḥṣan al-Asadī. As such, she was his half-sister, both having the same mother. The name 'Ukkāshah is also pronounced with one 'k', but it is better known with the double variant, 'kk'.

Hadith No. 3139 includes the narrator 'Ayyāsh ibn 'Abbās. He is known as al-Qatbānī, and Qatbān was a branch of the tribe known as Ru'ayn.

MARRIAGES BLOCKED BY BREASTFEEDING

I said: “Messenger of God, there is a man seeking entry to your home”. God’s Messenger said: “I think he is so-and-so”, (mentioning Ḥafṣah’s uncle through breastfeeding). ‘Ā’ishah said: “Had such-and-such (mentioning her own uncle through breastfeeding) been alive, would he enter my home?” He said: “Yes, breastfeeding blocks marriages in the same way as birth”.’

[3143-5]. (Dar al-Salam 3399) Ḥarmalah ibn Yahyā narrated to me: Ibn Wahb narrated; Yūnus reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; from 'Urwah; that 'Ā'ishah told him that Aflah, Abu al-Qu'ays' brother, sought permission to enter her home, after the decree of screening was revealed. Abu al-Qu'ays was 'Ā'ishah's father through breastfeeding. 'Ā'ishah said: 'I thought that I must not admit Aflah until I had obtained God's Messenger's permission. It was not Abu al-Qu'ays who breastfed me, but his wife did'. 'Ā'ishah said: 'When God's Messenger (peace be upon him) came in, I said: "Messenger of God, Aflah, Abu al-Qu'ays' brother came and wished to enter, but I did not like to admit him until I have sought your permission". The Prophet said: "Admit him".'

marriages as you block through blood relations”.’

Text Explanation

These hadiths are consistent, confirming the prohibition of marriages when there is a relationship of breastfeeding. The Muslim community is unanimous that marriage between a woman and a man she breastfed when he was a baby, born to someone else, is absolutely and permanently forbidden. He may see her, be alone with her and travel with her. However, not all rulings of motherhood apply to such a person. They do not inherit each other, nor is either of them responsible for looking after the other financially. Similarly, his testimony in her favour is accepted, and he is not responsible for paying any blood money she incurs. If she kills him, she is liable to be punished by retaliation (i.e., the death penalty) unlike the case of her own children. In all such matters, they are in the same position as unrelated people.

The Muslim community is also unanimous that the prohibition of marriages applies between the breastfeeding woman and the children of the breastfed child, and between that child and the children of the breastfeeding woman. The child she breastfeeds is like her own children according to these hadiths. As for the man who shares ownership of the milk because he is the woman's husband or master, the view of all scholars, including our own Shāfi'ī School, is that the prohibition of marriages through breastfeeding applies to him in relation to the breastfed child. The child is his own son or daughter. The man's children are brothers and sisters of the breastfed child. As such, the man's siblings are the child's uncles and aunts, and the child's children are the man's grandchildren. None disagrees with this view except the Zāhirī scholars and Ibn 'Ulayyah. They say that the prohibition through breastfeeding does not apply between the man [the woman's husband] and the breastfed child.

Al-Māzarī says that the same view was expressed by Ibn 'Umar and 'Ā'ishah, citing in evidence that God says in the verse detailing prohibited marriages: 'Your mothers who have given suck to you and your suckling sisters'. (4: 23) Daughters and aunts are not mentioned here as they were mentioned among blood relatives. In support of their argument, the majority of scholars give these authentic hadiths clearly stating the cases of the uncles of 'Ā'ishah and Ḥafṣah. In addition to the permission of admitting such uncles, the Prophet said: 'Breastfeeding blocks marriages in the same way as childbirth'. In response to the argument concerning daughters and aunts through breastfeeding and that they are not mentioned in the Qur'anic verse, they say that no verse in the Qur'an mentions that they are lawful to marry. To specify something in connection with a particular ruling does not imply that the ruling is limited to what is mentioned and does not apply to other things, unless this is specified by counter evidence. In this case, however, we have these authentic hadiths to confirm the applicability of that ruling, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 3141 'Ā'ishah mentions to the Prophet 'that Aflaḥ, Abu al-Qu'ays' brother, who was her uncle through breastfeeding, sought permission to enter her home, and that she refused to let him in'. The first hadith in the chapter, No. 3139, mentions that she asked the Prophet: 'Had such-and-such (mentioning her own uncle through breastfeeding) been alive, would he enter my home?' He said: 'Yes, breastfeeding blocks marriages in the same way as birth'.

Scholars differ concerning 'Ā'ishah's uncle. Abu al-Ḥasan al-Qābisī said: 'They were two uncles of 'Ā'ishah through suckling. The first was Abu Bakr's suckling brother, as they were both breastfed by the same woman. The other was the brother of Abu al-Qu'ays who was her father through breastfeeding, and his brother Aflaḥ was her uncle.’ Some said that they are one uncle, but this is wrong. The uncle she refers to in the first hadith was dead, while the other was alive, and he came to her seeking admission. Therefore, al-Qābisī’s explanation is the correct one.

Qadi ‘Iyāḍ mentions the two views and adds that al-Qābisī’s explanation is more likely. Had there been only one uncle, she would have understood the ruling the first time and she would not refuse him permission to enter. A question though may be raised: if there were two uncles, how come she asked about the deceased one and the Prophet told her that as her uncle, he could be admitted into her home, and she still refused admission to her other uncle, Abu al-Qu‘ays’ brother, until the Prophet told her that he was her uncle and he might visit her? Should she not have known with one question? The answer is that one of them was her uncle through one parent, and the other through both, or one was an uncle of a higher degree and the other of a lesser degree. Or there might have been some other difference in their relation to her. She might have feared that the permission was applicable only to the one she asked about first, but God knows best.

The name of ‘Ā’ishah’s uncle is given differently in some of these hadiths. He is first mentioned as Aflaḥ Abu al-Qu‘ays’ brother; then his name is given as Aflaḥ ibn Abi Qu‘ays, or Aflaḥ ibn Qu‘ays, and in one hadith as Abu al-Ja’d, with the addition that he is Abu al-Qu‘ays. The correct name is the first one, which Muslim repeats in the hadiths included in this chapter. It is the one known in books of Hadith and other works. Her uncle through breastfeeding was Aflah, Abu al-Qu'ays' brother. His appellation is Abu al-Ja'd.

Text Explanation

As these hadiths are self-explanatory, Imam al-Nawawī only enters here the meaning and pronunciation of a couple of unfamiliar words, but he has more to say about the transmission.

Transmission

Hadith No. 3152 ends with: ‘and in Bishr ibn ‘Umar’s narration: I heard Jābir ibn Zayd’. This means that in the version narrated by Bishr, Qatādah said: ‘I heard Jābir ibn Zayd’. This needs to be clarified because Qatādah is graded as ‘misleading’. In the first chain of transmission of this hadith, we have ‘from Qatādah from Jābir’. It is well known that a narration by a misleading narrator is unacceptable when it occurs in the form of ‘from so-and-so’ until his hearing the hadith from the narrator above him is ascertained. As it is ascertained in Bishr’s version, it is accepted, and Muslim highlights this.

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3153 includes: ‘Makhramah ibn Bukayr reported to me; from his father; he said: I heard ‘Abdullāh ibn Muslim say: I heard Muhammad ibn Muslim say: I heard Ḥumayd ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān say: I heard Umm Salamah’. This chain includes four narrators from the tābi‘īn generation: (1) Bukayr ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Ashajj, who narrates from several of the Prophet’s Companions; (2) ‘Abdullāh ibn Muslim al-Zuhrī, who is the brother of the famous al-Zuhrī. He is a tābi‘ī who heard from Ibn ‘Umar and other Companions of the Prophet. He is older than his famous brother; (3) Muhammad ibn Muslim the famous al-Zuhrī; and 4) Ḥumayd ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf, also a famous tābi‘ī. There are three interesting points in this chain of transmission: a) that it has four tābi‘īn narrators; b) that the senior narrator reports from the junior because ‘Abdullāh was older than his brother Muhammad as we mentioned; and c) that one brother narrates from another brother.

THE PROHIBITION OF MARRYING ONE'S STEPDAUGHTER AND SISTER-IN-LAW

[3154-15]. (Dar al-Salam 3412) Abu Kurayb Muhammad ibn al-‘Alā’ narrated:ⁱ Abu Usāmah narrated; Hishām reported; my father reported; from Zaynab bint Umm Salamah; from Umm Ḥabībah bint Abi Sufyān. She said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) entered my place. I said to him: “Would you like to have my sister, Abu Sufyān’s daughter?” He said: “To do what?” I said: “Marry her”. He said: “Would you like that?” I said: “I am not your only wife, and the one I would love most to be my partner in all that is good is my sister”. He said: “But she is unlawful to me”. I said: “I am told that you have proposed to Durrah bint Abu Salamah”. He said: “Umm Salamah’s daughter?” I said: “Yes”. He said: “Had she not been my stepdaughter and foster child, she would still be unlawful to me. She is the daughter of my suckling brother. Her father and I were suckled by Thuwaybah.

Therefore, do not propose to me your daughters or sisters”.

[3155-16]. (Dar al-Salam 3413) Muhammad ibn Rumh ibn al-Muhājir narrated: al-Layth reported; from Yazīd ibn Abi Ḥabīb; that Muhammad ibn Shihāb wrote mentioning that ‘Urwah narrated to him; that Zaynab bint Abi Salamah narrated; that Umm Ḥabībah, the Prophet’s wife, narrated to her that she ‘said to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him): “Messenger of God, marry ‘Azzah my sister”. God’s Messenger said: “Would you like that?” I said: “I am not your only wife, and the one I would love most to be my partner in whatever is good is my sister”. He said: “But that is unlawful to me”. I said: “Yet we are talking that you wish to marry Durrah bint Abu Salamah”. He said: “Abu Salamah’s daughter?” I said: “Yes”. He said: “Had she not been my stepdaughter and foster child, she would still be unlawful to me. She is the daughter of my suckling brother. Thuwaybah breastfed me and Abu Salamah. Text Explanation

In hadith No. 3154, Umm Ḥabībah, the Prophet's wife, suggests to him marrying her sister because she felt that to be married to God's Messenger was the best thing that could happen to a woman, and she wanted her sister to have that. Needless to say, marrying two sisters at the same time is forbidden in Islam. When the Prophet told Umm Ḥabībah that this was unlawful, she said that she was told that he wanted to marry Durrah bint Abu Salamah. Yet the Prophet was married to Durrah's mother, Umm Salamah. The Prophet makes sure that she meant that daughter, and when this is confirmed, he says: 'Had she not been my stepdaughter and foster child, she would still be unlawful to me. She is the daughter of my suckling brother. Her father and I were suckled by Thuwaybah. Therefore, do not propose to me your daughters or sisters'. This means that Durrah was forbidden to him to marry by two reasons: that she was his stepdaughter and that she was his niece. If one of the two reasons is lost the other is sufficient to block such a marriage.

The Prophet describes Durrah as his 'stepdaughter and foster child'. This is cited as evidence in support of Dāwūd al-Zāhirī's view that a stepdaughter is not forbidden to marry unless she is also a foster child. [A foster child means one that is looked after by her mother's husband who undertakes her upbringing.] Dāwūd says that if one's stepdaughter is not under one's care, she is lawful for him to marry. This is consistent with the Qur'anic verse that lists the blocked marriages. It says: 'Your stepdaughters who are your foster children'. (4: 23)

The view of all other scholars is that a stepdaughter is forbidden to marry, whether she is a foster child or not. If a limitation is stated for a reason which is the main condition, it is of no effect. Therefore, the ruling is not attached to it. A similar case is the command: 'Do not kill your children because of your poverty'. (6: 151) Needless to say, it is forbidden to kill one's children for any reason. The statement mentions poverty because it is the main reason for such an offence. Another example is the command: 'Do not force your maids to prostitution when they desire to preserve their chastity'. (24: 33) Further examples are plentiful in the Qur'an.

The Prophet mentions that Thuwaybah had breastfed him and Abu Salamah. Thuwaybah was a maid belonging to Abu Lahab, the Prophet's uncle. She suckled him in the early days after his birth, before he was given to Ḥalimah al-Sa'diyyah, his wet nurse.

The Prophet tells his wife: 'Do not offer me your sisters and your daughters'. This is a reference to Umm Ḥabībah's sister, 'Azzah, who is mentioned by name in the second version, and Umm Salamah's daughter. This is understood to mean that at the time when she made this offer to the Prophet, Umm Ḥabībah did not know that it was forbidden to marry two sisters at the same time. Nor did she know that a stepdaughter is forbidden for one to marry. She also did not know that one cannot marry the daughter of one's suckling brother, or that Ḥamzah was the Prophet's brother through breastfeeding, but God knows best.

FIVE FEEDS TO BLOCK MARRIAGES

Text Explanation

The hadiths in these two chapters mention that the Prophet said on more than one occasion that to breastfeed a child, other than one’s own, once or twice does not lead to the blockage of marriages between that child and the relatives of the breastfeeding woman. Hadith No. 3163 mentions that it was first revealed in the Qur’an that ten feeds were necessary to block marriages. Then this was abrogated to make the number of feeds five. ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) passed away and they were still being recited as part of the Qur'an'. What this means is that the abrogation of this verse mentioning five feeds occurred very late in the Prophet's life and that he passed away when some people were still reciting the relevant verse, thinking that it was part of the Qur'an. They were unaware of its abrogation. When they learnt of the abrogation all Muslims were in agreement that this does not form part of the Qur'an.

Abrogation is of three types: 1) the ruling and the text are both removed, as in the case of the text mentioning ten feeds; 2) what is abrogated as text but its ruling remains in force, such as the five feeds limit; and 3) what is abrogated as a ruling but continues to be recited as part of the Qur'an. This last type is the most frequent, but God knows best.

Scholars differ concerning the amount of breastfeeding that brings the ruling into force. 'Ā'ishah, al-Shāfi'ī and his disciples said that the minimum is five feeds. The majority of scholars said that the ruling applies with one feed. Ibn al-Mundhir reports this view from 'Alī, Ibn Mas'ūd, Ibn 'Umar, Ibn 'Abbās, 'Aṭā', Ṭāwūs, Ibn al-Musayyib, al-Ḥasan, Makhūl, al-Zuhri, Qatādah, al-Ḥakam, Mālik, al-Awzā'ī; al-Thawrī and Abu Ḥanīfah (may God be pleased with them all). Abu Thawr, Abu 'Ubayd, Ibn al-Mundhir and Dāwūd said that the ruling is enforced with three feeds, but not less.

Al-Shāfi'ī and those who share his view rely on the hadith narrated by 'Ā'ishah, which mentions 'five known feeds'. Mālik cites the verse that lists prohibited marriages and includes: 'Your mothers who have given suck to you'. (4: 23) It does not mention any number. Dāwūd considered the meaning of the hadith stating that one or two feeds do not prohibit marriages, saying that it clarifies what is unspecified in the Qur'an.

Shāfi'ī scholars objected to the Mālikī view saying that their argument would have been valid had the Qur'anic verse said, 'and the women who have given suck to you are your mothers'. On the other hand, the Mālikīs objected to the Shāfi'ī view saying that the hadith narrated by 'Ā'ishah is normally discounted by the Shāfi'īs and leading scholars of legal theory [i.e., uṣūl al-fiqh] because the Qur'an is not confirmed when it is singly-reported. As this cannot be confirmed as part of the Qur'an, it cannot be confirmed as having been stated by the Prophet (peace be upon him). This is based on the principle that if a singly-reported statement is subject to questioning of validity, it is discounted. As this is narrated only by single reporters, although it is normally narrated by many, it becomes suspect, but God knows best.

Shāfi'ī scholars objected to the Mālikī view citing the hadith mentioning that one or two feeds do not prohibit marriages. The Mālikīs responded with some invalid arguments that are not worth mentioning, but I am listing them so that people are aware of their invalidity. Some claim that the relevant ruling is abrogated, but this is a false claim and cannot be upheld without evidence. Another claim is that the hadith is mawqūf, i.e., stated by 'Ā'ishah and not attributed to the Prophet. This is a gross mistake. Muslim and other scholars state it with authentic chains of transmission, going up to the Prophet and narrated by 'Ā'ishah and Umm al-Faḍl. Another claim is that the hadith is inconsistent, which is a gross error. Indeed, it is an audacious attempt to reject the sunnah on the basis of personal view, claiming weakness where there is clear authenticity, only to support one's school. Many well-known hadiths do mention a number of feeds for the prohibition of marriages to operate. The correct thing is that such a number is required. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'Some people take an odd view saying that breastfeeding does not cause the prohibition of marriages unless ten feeds are completed. This is certainly false and cannot be considered, but God knows best.

SUCKLING AN ADULT

She said: “How can I suckle him when he is an adult man?” The Prophet smiled and said: “I know that he is an adult”.’

‘Amr added in his narration: ‘He took part in the Battle of Badr’, and in Ibn Abi ‘Umar’s narration: ‘God’s Messenger laughed’.

[3166-27]. (Dar al-Salam 3425) Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm al-Ḥanzalī and Muhammad ibn Abi ‘Umar narrated:ⁱⁱ both from al-Thaqafī. Ibn Abi ‘Umar said: ‘Abd al-Wahhāb al-Thaqafī narrated; from Ayyūb; from Ibn Abi Mulaykah; from al-Qāsim; from ‘Ā’ishah; that ‘Sālim, Abu Ḥudhayfah’s mawlā, lived with Abu Ḥudhayfah and his family in their home. She (meaning [Sahlah] bint Suhayl) came to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and said: “Sālim has attained adulthood and understands what men understand. He comes into our home, and I believe that Abu Ḥudhayfah has some misgivings about this”. The Prophet said to her: “Suckle him and you will be prohibited for him [to marry], and Abu Ḥudhayfah’s misgivings will disappear”. She came back later and said: “I have suckled him and what was in Abu Ḥudhayfah’s mind has gone”.

Text Explanation

In this chapter, Muslim enters the hadiths concerning the case of Sahlah, Abu Hudhayfah's wife, and her suckling of Sālim when he was an adult.^v Scholars differ concerning this issue, with 'Ā'ishah and Dāwūd saying that suckling a man leads to blocking marriages in the same way as suckling a baby. They cite this hadith in support of this view. All other scholars of the Prophet's Companions, the following generation of the tābi'in, and successive generations up to the present hold the view that only suckling a child below two years of age blocks marriages. The exceptions are: Abu Ḥanīfah, who sets the date at two and a half years, while Zufar said three years, and one report from Mālik gives the maximum as two years and a few days. The majority of scholars rely in their ruling on the Qur'anic verse: 'Mothers may breastfeed their children for two whole years; that is for those who wish to complete the suckling'. (2: 233) They also cite the hadith entered in the next chapter stating that breastfeeding is what settles hunger, as well as other well-known hadiths. They consider the hadith related to Sahlah as dealing with her own special case with Sālim. Muslim relates from Umm Salamah and all the other wives of the Prophet that they disagreed with ‘Ā’ishah on this matter, but God knows best.

The Prophet told Sahlah to suckle Sālim. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘Perhaps she expressed her milk and Sālim drank it without touching her breast, and there was no skin-to-skin contact’. This statement by Qadi ‘Iyāḍ is fine, but it is also possible that he was exempted from touching it as this was needed, in the same way as he was given this special dispensation of suckling when he was an adult, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 3168, Umm Salamah says to ‘Ā’ishah: ‘You admit a boy who is a youth’. She uses the word ayfa‘, which means ‘one who is approaching puberty, but has not attained it yet’.

All three: Sālim, Sahlah and her husband were among the very early Muslims, and they migrated with the Prophet to Madinah. Sālim was a fine reciter and memorizer of the Qur’an and a devoted Companion of the Prophet.

SUCKLING AND HUNGER

[3171-32]. (Dar al-Salam 3430-3431) Hannād ibn al-Sariy narrated:ⁱ Abu al-Aḥwaṣ narrated; from Ash'ath ibn Abu al-Sha'thā'; from his father; from Masrūq. 'Ā'ishah said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) entered my home when I had a man sitting. He found this difficult, and I saw anger in his face. I said: "Messenger of God, he is my suckling brother". He said: "Be careful whom you consider your suckling brothers. Breastfeeding is what satisfies hunger".'

Text Explanation

Imam al-Nawawī does not include any explanation of this hadith, considering that what has been said in the earlier chapters to be sufficient.

We may say that this hadith confirms the other hadith in which the Prophet describes breastfeeding to be ‘only what strengthens the bones and causes flesh to grow’. Needless to say, this applies only to babies who have not completed two years of age.

[3172-33]. (Dar al-Salam 3432) ‘Ubaydullāh ibn ‘Umar ibn Maysarah al-Qawārīrī narrated:ⁱ Yazīd ibn Zuray‘ narrated; Sa‘īd ibn Abi ‘Arūbah narrated; from Qatādah; from Ṣāliḥ Abi al-Khalīl; from Abu ‘Alqamah al-Hāshimī; from Abu Sa‘īd al-Khudrī; that ‘At the time of Ḥunayn, God’s Messenger dispatched an army to Awṭās, and they encountered an enemy. They fought and defeated them, taking some of their women captive. Some of the Prophet’s companions felt reluctant to consort with them as they had husbands who were unbelievers. God then revealed: “And [forbidden to you are] all married women, other than those whom your right hands possess”. (4: 24) This means that they are lawful to you when they have completed their waiting periods’.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3171 mentions the case of Muslims taking some women as captives of war. They were reluctant to consort with them because they were married to unbelievers. Needless to say, a married woman is lawful only to her husband. God then revealed the verse making a captive woman who is enslaved lawful because her marriage to her unbelieving husband is terminated by the fact that she has become a slave. She is lawful to her master after finishing her waiting period. The waiting period of such a woman is completed when she delivers her child if she is pregnant, or when she completes one menstruation if she is not pregnant. This is clear in authentic hadiths.

It should be noted that al-Shāfiʿī and other scholars consider that if the slave woman is an idolater or pagan, following no Divine religion, she does not become lawful to a Muslim by being in his possession unless she converts to Islam. As long as she retains her own religion, she remains unlawful. The captive women in the case referred to in these hadiths were Arab idolaters. Therefore, this hadith and similar ones are understood as implying that these women embraced Islam. This understanding is necessary, but God knows best.

Scholars differ with regard to the situation of a slave woman who is married to a Muslim but subsequently is sold: is her marriage terminated? Does she become lawful to her new master? Ibn 'Abbās said that her marriage is terminated because of the general meaning of the verse that says: 'And [forbidden to you are] all married women, other than those whom your right hands possess'. (4: 24) All other scholars said that her marriage is not so terminated. They consider that the said Qur'anic verse applies only to a woman who is enslaved by virtue of being a captive of war.

Al-Māzarī said:

This difference of views is based on whether a cause is included in a general statement; is the general statement then limited to its cause or not? Those who say that it is limited to its cause cannot use this verse to apply to a slave woman who is owned by purchase because the meaning of the verse is deemed to be 'other than those whom your right hands possess through taking them captive in war'. Scholars who maintain that a general statement is not limited to its cause but taken in its generality say that the marriage of a sold slave woman is terminated once she is bought. However, it is confirmed in the case of Barīrah, a slave woman who was bought by 'Āishah, that the Prophet (peace be upon him) gave her the choice of staying with her husband or releasing her from her marriage. This proves that her marriage was not terminated when she was bought. However, this is a case of limiting a general Qur'anic statement on the basis of a singly-reported case. Scholars differ on whether this acceptable, but God knows best.

Transmission

Hadith No. 3172 includes in its chain of transmission: 'Yazīd ibn Zuray' narrated; Sa'īd ibn Abi 'Arūbah narrated; from Qatādah; from Ṣāliḥ Abi al-Khalīl; from Abu 'Alqamah al-Hāshimī; from Abu Sa'īd al-Khudrī'. However, the other hadith, No. 3174, includes: Shu'bah narrated; from Qatādah; from Abu al-Khalīl; from Abu Sa'īd. The difference is that the second chain omits Abu 'Alqamah al-Hāshimī. This is how it occurs in all manuscripts in our areas. It is related in this way by Abu 'Alī al-Ghassānī, as narrated by al-Julūdī and Ibn Māhān. Abu Mas'ūd al-Dimashqī mentions it in the same way and adds that in Ibn al-Ḥadhdhā's copy, Abu 'Alqamah is added in between Abu al-Khalīl and Abu Sa'īd. Al-Ghassānī said: 'I do not know which is correct'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that other scholars said that adding Abu 'Alqamah is the correct way. My own view is that both including and omitting him may be right. This suggests that Abu al-Khalīl heard it in both ways and narrated it in one way on some occasion and in the other on a different occasion. We mentioned similar cases earlier.

A CHILD BELONGS TO THE BED OWNER

[3175-36]. (Dar al-Salam 3435) Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated:ⁱ Layth narrated [H]. Muhammad ibn Rumḥ narrated; al-Layth reported; from Ibn Shihāb; from 'Urwah; from 'Ā'ishah; that she said: 'Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqāṣ and 'Abd ibn Zam'ah were in dispute about a boy. Sa'd said: "Messenger of God, this is the child of my brother 'Utbah ibn Abi Waqqāṣ. He asked me to look after him as he is his son. Look at his resemblance". 'Abd ibn Zam'ah said: "Messenger of God, this is my brother. He was born to my father by his slave girl". God's Messenger (peace be upon him) looked at the boy and he saw clear resemblance to 'Utbah. He then said: "The boy belongs to you, 'Abd. A child belongs to the bed and the adulterer bites the dust. Sawdah bint Zam'ah, do not let him see you". She said: "He never saw Sawdah".'

Muhammad ibn Rumḥ did not mention [the Prophet's] saying: "'Abd'.

Text Explanation

These hadiths mention that ‘the adulterer bites the dust’. The original Arabic expression is ‘the adulterer gets the stone’. What this expression means is that ‘he ends up with failure, or with nothing’. Some said that it means that he is punished by stoning. This has little validity because the punishment of stoning does not apply to every adulterer. Only a married adulterer may incur it. Moreover, if such punishment is enforced on him, it does not deprive him of the parenthood of the child. The import of this hadith is to say that the adulterer cannot claim parenthood of the child.

The Prophet says: ‘A child belongs to the bed’. This means that if a man has a wife or a slave woman, the woman is figuratively considered as a bed for him. If she begets a child after a feasible period of pregnancy, the child belongs to him and all rulings, including mutual inheritance, apply to father and child, whether there is resemblance in features between them or not. The minimum possible period of pregnancy is six months from the date of the man and the woman being together.

When does a woman qualify as a bed partner? If she is a wife, she qualifies once the marriage contract is made. There is unanimity on this point, but scholars add the condition that having sexual intercourse is possible for them. If it is not possible, as in the case of their living in different countries and neither of them leaves their places of residence, and then the woman begets a child after six months, the child is not attributed to her husband because it cannot be his. This is the view of Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and all scholars, other than Abu Ḥanīfah. He does not apply this condition of possibility but considers only the time of the marriage contract. He even said: 'Even if the man divorces his wife after the marriage contract is concluded, without any possibility of having had intercourse with his wife, then she begets a child after six months of the contract, the child belongs to him.' This is weak and clearly invalid. There is no evidence in support of his argument that the applicability is general because this is a question of the clear possibility of pregnancy after the contract. This applies in the case of a wife.

According to Mālik and al-Shāfi'ī, a slave woman becomes a 'bed partner' only if her master has intercourse with her. She does not become a bed partner merely by becoming his slave. Even if she remains in his possession for years and gives birth to several children, none of her children belongs to him if he has not had intercourse with her and does not admit having intercourse with her. If her master has intercourse with her, she becomes a 'bed partner' and then if she begets a child or children in a reasonable time of pregnancy, such children are his. Abu Ḥanīfah said that she does not become a 'bed partner' unless she gives birth to a child and her master claims the child. Any child she subsequently gives birth to is his own, unless he disclaims it. Abu Ḥanīfah adds: 'If she becomes a bed partner when intercourse takes place, her ownership makes her like a wife.'

Our scholars say that the difference is that a man gets married primarily for sexual fulfilment. Therefore, the Shariah gives the marriage contract the status of sexual intercourse. A slave is taken for a variety of benefits other than sex. Hence, it is permissible for a man to own two sisters as slaves, or to have a mother and daughter in his possession, but such relatives cannot be combined by marriage contracts. Therefore, ownership of a slave woman does not make her a bed partner. If her master has sexual intercourse with her, she becomes a bed partner, like a free woman.

It should be noted that the hadith mentioning the case of 'Abd ibn Zam'ah is understood to mean that it was confirmed that his father's slave woman was his bed partner. Hence, the Prophet ruled that the child belonged to him. The mother was confirmed as a bed partner by clear evidence that he acknowledged this during his lifetime, or because the Prophet knew this.

This hadith provides evidence for al-Shāfi'ī and Mālik against Abu Ḥanīfah. Zam'ah did not have another child by this slave woman before the one the hadith mentions. This means having other children is not a condition, and this is contrary to what Abu Ḥanīfah said. On the other hand, the hadith gives evidence to al-Shāfi'ī and those who agree with him against Mālik and scholars who share his view concerning the claim of parenthood. Al-Shāfi‘ī says that an heir may claim parenthood by the person he is inheriting, provided that he himself is in possession of the inheritance, or that all heirs agree to the claim of parenthood by the deceased. Other conditions must apply, which are: that the person being claimed to belong to the deceased can reasonably be a child of his; and that he is not known to belong to anyone else; and that the child confirms the parenthood if the child is a sane adult. All these conditions were met by this child the Prophet attributed to Zam‘ah when ‘Abd ibn Zam‘ah claimed him to belong to his father. Our scholars interpret this in two ways: the first is that Sawdah bint Zam‘ah, ‘Abd’s sister, agreed with ‘Abd in claiming the child, so that all the heirs confirmed the claim. The other interpretation is that Zam‘ah died an unbeliever, and Sawdah did not inherit him because she was a Muslim. He was inherited by his son ‘Abd ibn Zam‘ah.

The Prophet told Sawdah, his wife, not to let the child see her. This was an order of recommendation and of taking precautions. On the surface, the child was her brother, as it was attributed to her father. However, when the Prophet saw the clear resemblance between the child and ‘Utbah ibn Abi Waqqās, he thought that ‘Utbah was the boy’s biological father, and as such, the boy would be a stranger to her. Hence, the Prophet took the precaution of telling his wife not to let the boy see her.

Al-Māzarī said that some Ḥanafīs claimed that he ordered Sawdah to remain behind a screen so that the boy would not see her because one version of this hadith says: ‘Do not let him see you, because he is not your brother’.

The addition, 'he is not your brother', is unknown in this hadith. It is false and discounted, but God knows best.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said:

It was the practice in pre-Islamic days that a child would be claimed by and attributed to the adulterer. They also hired slave girls for sex. When a mother admitted that the child belonged to a particular person, they would attribute it to that person. Islam put an end to all this and attributed the child to the legitimate bed. Therefore, when 'Abd ibn Zam'ah and Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqāṣ disputed the child, Sa'd claimed what his brother 'Utbah asked him to do following the pre-Islamic practice. Sa'd was unaware that Islam did not approve of it. The boy was not attributed to any father before Islam, either because no one claimed him, or because the mother did not acknowledge his belonging to 'Utbah. 'Abd ibn Zam'ah argued that he was born on his father's bed and, therefore, the Prophet ruled in 'Abd's favour.

The hadith mentions that the Prophet 'saw clear resemblance to 'Utbah', but he then ruled that the child belonged to the bed. This makes clear that resemblance and judgement based on physical features are applicable when there is no stronger evidence. The resemblance was not taken as evidence in the case of the swearing, although the resemblance was clear in certain features.

Some Ḥanafī scholars and others sharing their view take this hadith as evidence that adulterous intercourse blocks marriages in the same way as legitimate intercourse through marriage. This is agreed by Abu Ḥanīfah, al-Awzā'ī, al-Thawrī and Ahmad. On the other hand, Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī, Abu Thawr and others said that adulterous intercourse has no effect. The adulterer can marry the mother or daughter of the woman with whom he commits adultery. Al-Shāfi‘ī goes further making it lawful for the adulterer to marry his own biological daughter through adultery. They argue that Sawdah was told to be screened from the boy. The argument is invalid. Indeed, it is strange to cite. Assuming that the boy in this case was born through adultery and, as such, a stranger to Sawdah, she could not let him see her, whether he was attributed to the adulterer, i.e., his biological father, or not. As such it is not related to the matter in question.

This hadith makes it clear that a ruling by a judge does not change the essential status. This means if the judge rules on the basis of the testimony of false witnesses, or some other evidence, what is given by the ruling does not become lawful to the one who is given it. The point here is that the Prophet ruled the boy to belong to ‘Abd ibn Zam‘ah, Sawdah’s brother. Yet, because of the resemblance, he might have belonged to ‘Utbah. Had the ruling affected the status, the Prophet would not have ordered Sawdah not to let the boy see her, but God knows best.

Text Explanation

The hadith in this chapter, in its several versions, mentions the Prophet’s delight with the remark of Mujazziz as he recognized the close relationship between Zayd ibn Hārithah and his son Usāmah from looking at their feet. Mujazziz belonged to the tribe of Mudlij, and this tribe was famous in Arabia for their skill in tracing similarities. All the Arabs recognized their skill, which also belonged to the Asad tribe. The Prophet was delighted with what Mujazziz said and 'Ā'ishah describes him as 'his face was beaming'.

We need to give some background in order to explain the Prophet's delight before we continue with Imam al-Nawawī's commentary. Zayd was an adolescent slave when Khadījah gave him to the Prophet as a gift at the time of their marriage. The Prophet loved him and treated him as a son. He later married him to Umm Ayman, his nurse who looked after him when his mother died. Zayd was white in colour, while Umm Ayman was black, as she was Abyssinian. Usāmah, their son took his mother's colour and was black. Therefore, some people expressed doubt about Usāmah's parenthood, and said that he could not belong to his father, Zayd. The Prophet was hurt by such rumours because he loved Zayd and his son.

Imam al-Māzarī said: 'In pre-Islamic days people expressed doubt about Zayd's parenthood of Usāmah, because Usāmah was dark black in colour while Zayd was white. This was stated by Abu Dāwūd reporting from Ahmad ibn Ṣāliḥ. When this tracer judged that Usāmah belonged to his father, despite the difference in their colour and the Arabs acknowledged the verdict of any qā'if, i.e., one skilled in tracing similarities, the Prophet showed his delight. This was sufficient to stop them questioning parenthood on the basis of different features.'

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that scholars other than Ahmad ibn Ṣāliḥ said that Zayd was white with a tinge of pink, and Usāmah's mother was Umm Ayman. She was a black Abyssinian woman named Barakah. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'She was Barakah bint Miḥṣan ibn Tha'labah ibn 'Amr ibn

Ḥuṣayn ibn Mālīk ibn Salamah ibn ‘Amr ibn al-Nu‘mān, but God knows best.’

Scholars differ as to the implementation of the verdict of a qā’if, with Abu Ḥanīfah, his disciples, al-Thawrī and Ishāq rejecting it. Al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars confirm it. The best-known view of Mālīk is that he confirmed it with regard to female slaves, but did not implement it in the case of free women. Yet a report from him suggests that he accepted it in both. The basis of al-Shāfi‘ī’s view is this hadith mentioning Mujazziz because the Prophet was delighted to have in his community an expert who could distinguish parenthood when it was disputed. Had the tracing of similarities provided no evidence, the Prophet would not have been delighted with Mujazziz’s comment. However, scholars who uphold the verdict of the tracing expert stipulate a condition that he must be known to be a person of unblemished integrity.

Scholars also differ on whether one qā’if is sufficient. According to our Shāfi‘ī scholars, the more correct view is that only one is necessary. This view is shared by Ibn al-Qāsim, a Mālīkī scholar. Mālīk, however, said that two are necessary, and some of our Shāfi‘ī scholars agree. This hadith indicates that one is sufficient. Our scholars also differ on whether this expertise belonged to the Mudlij tribe in particular, and the more correct view is that it did not. Scholars also agree that when a qā’if is needed, he must be a well-proven expert.

Scholars who implement the verdict of a qā’if agree that it should be resorted to in problematic cases, where a woman has had intercourse with two men and her pregnancy could be by either. They give the example of a slave woman who is sold, and both seller and buyer have sexual intercourse with her, without the buyer first making sure that she is not pregnant. If she gives birth to a child after six months or more of the second man's intercourse and less than four years of the first^{iv}, then a qā'if may be employed to trace similarity. If he attributes the child to one of the two men, the child is ruled to belong to that parent. If the qā'if cannot give a clear verdict or says that there is not sufficient similarity, the child is left until he is an adult when he may choose either one. If the qā'if says that the child belongs to both, the view of 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, Mālik and al-Shāfi'ī is to leave the child until he is an adult when he chooses the one he favours. Abu Thawr and Suḥnūn said that the child belongs to both. Al-Mājishūn and Muhammad ibn Maslamah, both Mālikī scholars, said the child is attributed to whoever he resembles more. Ibn Maslamah adds: 'unless the first man knows it belongs to him'. Scholars who reject using a qā'if also differ with regard to a case of disputed parenthood. Abu Ḥanīfah said it is attributed to both men. If two women claim the child, it is attributed to both. Abu Yūsuf and Muhammad of the Ḥanafī school said it is attributed to the two men, but to one woman only. Ishāq said that the case is settled by drawing lots.

Note: We may add here that all this no longer applies as we now have the DNA test which determines parenthood very accurately.

A MAN'S STAY WITH HIS NEW WIFE AFTER THE WEDDING

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3181 mentions what the Prophet said to his new wife, Umm Salamah, after he had stayed with her for three nights after their wedding: 'There is no question of disregard to you by me'. This means that she would suffer no disregard and her right would be given to her in full. He then explains to her what her right as a newlywed wife is. She had the choice that he stay with her three nights and then resume his normal round with his other wives. [At the time, the Prophet was married to Sawdah, 'Ā'ishah and Ḥafṣah.] The alternative was to stay with her for seven consecutive nights. However, in this case, he explains: 'If I stay seven with you, I will stay seven nights with my other wives'.

As is clear in hadith No. 3182 Umm Salamah chose that the Prophet stays with her for three nights and then resume his round. This alternative has the advantage of not giving the other wives any compensation because the three nights are allowed for the new bride. The other alternative gives the new wife a longer period to get used to her husband and her new life. Umm Salamah made her choice, preferring that the Prophet come back to her sooner, as he would spend one night with each of his other three wives and then it would be her turn. Had she chosen the seven nights, he would have had to stay seven nights with each of his other wives. His absence would thus be prolonged.

This hadith shows the desirability of gentle and kind conversation with one's wife, family and other people, as well as explaining the rights of the addressee. The hadith also confirms the importance of fairness to one's wives. It also explains that a new bride has a special right to be given to her ahead of the rights of other wives. If she is a virgin, she has the privilege of having her husband for herself for seven nights and days, without any compensation due to other wives. If she is a previously married woman, she has the choice of seven nights that will be similarly given to other wives, or three without any compensation due to others.

This is the view of al-Shāfi'ī and others, as stated in confirmed and authentic hadiths. Others who share this view include Mālik, Ahmad, Ishāq, Abu Thawr, Ibn Jarīr and the majority of scholars. Abu Ḥanīfah, al-Ḥakam and Ḥammād said that compensation is due for all, in cases of virgin and previously married women, citing in support the clear statements requiring fairness between one's wives. Al-Shāfi'ī argues that these hadiths add special provisions that limit that generality.

Scholars hold further different views on who has this right: the husband or the new wife? The view of our school and the majority of scholars is that it is the right of the new wife. Some Mālikī scholars say that it is his right against his other wives. Scholars also differ concerning its applicability to a husband who has other wives than his new bride. Ibn 'Abd al-Barr said: 'The majority of scholars say that this is a right of the woman because of her wedding, whether he has another wife or not'. They cite in support the general meaning of the hadith that says: 'If a man marries a virgin, he stays with her for seven nights, and if he marries a previously married woman, he stays with her three nights'. The hadith does not specify an already married person. Some scholars said that the hadith refers to a man who has one wife or more other than the new bride. The one who has no other wife stays with his wife for life, with both enjoying the uninterrupted company of the other. It is a different case when the man has other wives. These special nights are given to the new wife so that she gets used to her new life, settles in, sheds her shyness, and the new couple enjoy each other's company without the interruption of going to the other wives.

Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that this last view is the preferable one. Al-Baghawī, a leading Shāfi'ī scholar, states it categorically in his fatwas, adding: 'This right is confirmed for a new wife if the man has another wife with whom he stays. If he has no other wife, or if he has one but he does not stay any nights with her, the new wife does not have this wedding right, in the same way as he does not have to stay nights with his wives.' The first view is the stronger one and the preferred one because the hadith is general in its significance.

Another point of difference among scholars regarding the husband's stay with his virgin or previously married wife, if he has another wife, is whether it is a duty or sunnah. Al-Shāfi'ī, his disciples and other scholars say that it is a duty. Ibn al-Qāsim reports the same from Mālik. However, Ibn 'Abd al-Ḥakam says that Mālik's view is that it is a sunnah.

In hadith No. 3186, Anas says: 'It is part of the sunnah that a husband stays with his virgin wife for seven nights'. Putting it in this way means that this is attributed to the Prophet. If a Companion of the Prophet says: 'the Sunnah is such-and-such', or 'it is part of the Sunnah', his expression has the same status as 'God's Messenger said this or that'. This is the view of our school, scholars of Hadith and the great majority of earlier and later scholars. Some say that it is mawqūf, which means 'stated by a Companion of the Prophet', but this is incorrect.

In hadith No. 3185: 'Khālīd said: "If I say that he attributed it to the Prophet, I would be telling the truth".' In the other narration: 'If I wished, I would say he attributed it to the Prophet'. This expression, i.e., 'such is the Sunnah', is a clear statement that what is being said is attributed to the Prophet. I could say it on the basis of narration by meaning. Had I done so, I would be stating what is true, but God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of the first hadith in this chapter, No. 3181 includes: ‘from Sufyān; from Muhammad ibn Abi Bakr; from ‘Abd al-Malik ibn Abi Bakr ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Ḥārith ibn Hishām; from his father; from Umm Salamah; that ‘When God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) married Umm Salamah, he stayed with her for three nights’. And the next hadith, No. 3182 which is Mālik’s version: ‘from ‘Abdullāh ibn Abi Bakr; from ‘Abd al-Malik ibn Abi Bakr ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān; that “When God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) married Umm Salamah...”’. The hadith is then narrated by Sulaymān ibn Bilāl in the same way as Mālik’s version, i.e., mursal or an incomplete chain of transmission. Yet Muslim adds another version narrated by Ḥafṣ ibn Ghiyāth with a complete chain of transmission, similar to Sufyān’s narration.

Al-Dāraqūṭnī said: ‘Both ‘Abdullāh ibn Abi Bakr and ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Ḥumayd narrated the hadith as mursal, as Muslim entered it’. This question-mark raised by al-Dāraqūṭnī against Muslim is invalid because Muslim has shown the difference between narrators, with some keeping its chain of transmission incomplete while others make it complete. His view, shared by scholars of Fiqh, methodology and Hadith masters, is that if a hadith is narrated in two ways, with a complete chain of transmission and an incomplete one, it is considered to have the complete chain of transmission. This is due to the fact that its continuity is an addition by a reliable narrator, and such an addition is accepted by the great majority of scholars. Hence, al-Dāraqūṭnī's questioning is incorrect, but God knows best.

FAIRNESS TO ONE'S WIVES: ONE NIGHT AND DAY FOR EACH

[3187-46]. (Dar al-Salam 3450) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Shabābah ibn Sawwār narrated; Sulaymān ibn al-Mughīrah narrated; from Thābit; from Anas. He said: ‘The Prophet (peace be upon him) had nine wives. When he divided his nights between them, he would return to the first one on the ninth night. They would meet every evening in the home of the one where the Prophet would stay that night. Once he was in ‘Ā’ishah’s home. Zaynab came in and he stretched his hand to her. She [meaning ‘Ā’ishah] said: “This is Zaynab”. The Prophet withdrew his hand. They exchanged harsh words and raised their voices. Abu Bakr passed by when this was taking place and he heard their voices. He said: “Come, Messenger of God, to the prayer and put dust in their mouths”. The Prophet went out. ‘Ā’ishah said: “Now the Prophet will finish his prayer, and Abu Bakr will come in and do this and that to me”. When the Prophet finished his prayer, Abu Bakr came over to her and rebuked her strongly. He said:

“How can you do this?”

Text Explanation

The view of our school is that a husband need not divide his nights between his wives. He may, if he so wishes, stay away from all of them, but it is reprehensible to abandon them as this may lead to some harm or to their falling to temptation. If a husband wants to divide his nights between his wives, he cannot start with any of them except by drawing lots. It is open to him to make a division on the basis of one, two or three nights each. It is not permissible to make the division for less than one night or more than three nights each unless the husband obtains their agreement. This is the correct view of our school. There are some other opinions on these points, but they are weak.

Scholars agree that a husband may go to all his wives and have sex with them, one after the other, if they agree, but he cannot do this without their agreement.

If a husband makes such a division between his wives, each one has the day that follows her night. He should stick to the division, giving their due nights to the one who is ill, or in her menstrual period or having postnatal discharge. That he cannot have sexual intercourse with one in this state is no reason for denying her right because she still prefers his company, and they may have some pleasure together. Our scholars say that a husband is not required to have sexual intercourse with his wives, or to maintain fairness in this respect. He may stay his nights with them without having intercourse with any of them, or with one but not the other. However, it is recommended that he does not abandon any of them. Fairness in such matters is also recommended, but God knows best.

The hadith mentions that the Prophet had nine wives. These were the ones who survived him. They are: ‘Āishah, Ḥafṣah, Sawdah, Zaynab, Umm Salamah, Umm Ḥabībah, Maymūnah, Juwayriyyah and Ṣafīyyah (may God be pleased with them all). The hadith mentions that each one would have her night with the Prophet after he completed the round of the nine. This suggests that it is desirable when dividing one’s nights to make it one night each, so as not to risk any non-fulfilment of their rights.

The hadith mentions that the Prophet's wives met every day in the home of the one where the Prophet was staying that night. This shows that it is desirable that a husband goes to each one of his wives in her home, rather than asking them to come to him in his home. However, he is free to invite each one, on her night, to come to him, but this is the lesser option. If he invites one of his wives to come to him in the home of another wife, she is not obliged to comply. Unlike refusing to go to him in his home, her refusal to see him in his other wife's home does not constitute disobedience. The meeting of the Prophet's wives in the home of each one of them was by their consent. The hadith shows that a husband may not go at night to the home of any of his wives other than that of the one whose turn it is. In fact, to go to anyone else at night is forbidden according to our school, except for some urgent necessity.

The hadith mentions that the Prophet stretched his hand to one of his wives and 'Ā'ishah said to him: 'This is Zaynab'. Some scholars said that this was not deliberate, but that the Prophet thought that she was 'Ā'ishah, whose turn it was that night. The meeting was at night and there were no lights inside homes. It is also said that such gestures were agreed by them.

That the voices of the Prophet's wives were raised over this matter shows that they were jealous of each other, which is normal in such situations. The hadith reflects the Prophet's fine manners and how he was keen to please everyone. The Ḥanafis may cite this hadith in support of their view that touching a woman does not invalidate ablution, as the hadith mentions that the Prophet stretched his hand then went out to prayer without having a fresh wudu. There is no evidence in this for them because the hadith does not mention that the Prophet touched his wife without cover. Their purpose can only be met if the case is one of a skin-to-skin touch then praying without performing a fresh wudu. This hadith gives no such information.

Abu Bakr said to the Prophet to put dust into their mouths. This is an exaggerated form of stopping their dispute. It tells of Abu Bakr's care and looking for what best serves the community. It also shows that one can offer advice to someone who is better or higher than oneself, but God knows best.

GIFTING A WIFE'S SHARE

(Dar al-Salam 3454) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah nar-rated:^{iv} ‘Abdah ibn Sulaymān narrated; from Hishām; from his father; from ‘Ā’ishah; that: ‘I used to say: “Would a woman have no sense of shame as to offer herself to a man?” Then when God, Mighty and Exalted revealed: “You may defer any of them you please and take to yourself any of them you please. No blame will attach to you if you invite one whose turn you have previously set aside”, I said: “Your Lord certainly gives you all that you desire”.’

[3192-51]. (Dar al-Salam 3455) Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm and Muhammad ibn Hātim narrated:^v Muhammad ibn Hātim said: Muhammad ibn Bakr narrated; Ibn Jurayj reported; ‘Aṭā’ reported to me. He said: ‘We attended Maymūnah’s funeral with Ibn ‘Abbās at Sarif. Ibn ‘Abbās said: “This [lady] was the Prophet’s wife. When you lift her bier, do not disturb or shake it, but be gentle. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) had nine wives, and he divided his nights between eight of them and did not give a share to one of them”.’

حَدَّثَنَا إِسْحَاقُ بْنُ إِبْرَاهِيمَ، وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ حَاتِمٍ، قَالَ مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ حَاتِمٍ: حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ بَكْرٍ، أَخْبَرَنَا ابْنُ جُرَيْجٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي عَطَاءٌ، قَالَ: حَضَرْنَا مَعَ ابْنِ عَبَّاسٍ جَنَازَةَ مَيْمُونَةَ رَوْحِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ بِسَرِفَ. فَقَالَ ابْنُ عَبَّاسٍ: هَذِهِ رَوْحُ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَإِذَا رَفَعْتُمْ نَعَشَهَا فَلَا تُزْعِرُوهَا، وَلَا تُزْلِزُوهَا، وَارْفُقُوا. فَإِنَّهُ كَانَ عِنْدَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ تِسْعُ فَكَانَ يَفْسِمُ لِثَمَانٍ، وَلَا يَفْسِمُ لِوَاحِدَةٍ .

[3193-52]. (Dar al-Salam 3456) Muhammad ibn Rāfi‘ and ‘Abd ibn Ḥumayd narrated: both from ‘Abd al-Razzāq; from Ibn Jurayj; with the same chain of transmission: the same text, but added: ‘‘Atā’ said: ‘‘She was the last one to die; she died in Madinah’’.’

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3188 quotes ‘Ā’ishah speaking of Sawdah, another of the Prophet’s wives, and saying that she was the one woman she would prefer to be like. In fact, the Arabic text literally means ‘the woman I would like to be’. She describes Sawdah as a ‘sharp woman’, which means ‘strong-willed and intelligent’. The hadith mentions that when Sawdah grew old, she gifted her turn to ‘Ā’ishah. This makes clear that a woman who shares her husband with other wives may give her turn to another wife, but this requires the husband’s agreement because he has a right to the giver, and his right may not be dispensed with without his consent. She may not seek to have some recompense for making such a gift. On the other hand, she may make her turn a gift to her husband, and he then gives it to anyone he wishes of his wives. Some scholars said that he should divide this share between his other wives, thus making the giver as absent. The first view is the more correct one. The giver may reclaim her gift whenever she wishes, but this affects the future turns, not the past ones.

Only the portion that has not been used of a gift may be reclaimed.

Sawdah said to the Prophet: 'I give my day with you to 'Ā'ishah'. The words 'my day' means in this instance 'my share', which is a day and a night. When Sawdah said this 'God's Messenger used to assign two days to 'Ā'ishah: her own day and Sawdah's day'. This means that he would be with 'Ā'ishah on her own turn and also on the day which was Sawdah's turn. It does not mean that he gave 'Ā'ishah two consecutive days. The more correct view of our scholars is that giving the recipient of such a gift two consecutive days is only permissible if the other wives agree. Some of our scholars, however, consider it permissible without their consent, but this is a weak view.

In hadith No. 3189, 'Ā'ishah says that Sawdah 'was the first woman he married after me'. This is how Muslim mentions it in Yūnus' narration from Sharīk, meaning that the Prophet married 'Ā'ishah before Sawdah. The same is mentioned by Yūnus from al-Zuhrī and 'Abdullāh ibn Muhammad ibn 'Uqayl. However, 'Uqayl ibn Khālīd reports from al-Zuhrī that the Prophet married Sawdah before 'Ā'ishah. Ibn 'Abd al-Barr said that it is stated by Qatādah and Abu 'Ubaydah. I may add that it is mentioned by Muhammad ibn Ishāq, Muhammad ibn Sa'd, al-Wāqidī's scribe, Ibn Qutaybah and others.

'Ā'ishah says to the Prophet in hadith No. 3191: 'Your Lord certainly gives you all that you desire'. She meant that God makes things easier for the Prophet, giving him permission to do what he desires, making his choices as he wishes.

In hadith No. 3190, ‘Ā’ishah says: ‘I used to disapprove of the women who offered themselves freely to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). I thought: “Would a woman gift herself?” Then when God, Mighty and Exalted, revealed: “You may defer any of them you please, and take to yourself any of them you please...”’. This is one of the special privileges God has given to the Prophet (peace be upon him). It is to marry any woman who offers herself to him, without paying her a dowry. God says in the same verse: ‘This applies to you alone and not to other believers’. (33: 50)

Scholars have different views concerning the verse that says: ‘You may defer any of them you please, and take to yourself any of them you please’. (33: 51) Some said that it abrogates the next verse that says: ‘You [Muhammad] are not permitted to take any further wives, nor to exchange these for other wives’. (33: 52) It permits him to marry as he pleased. It is also expressed that the abrogation of the said verse was by the Sunnah, as the Prophet married Maymūnah, Mulaykah, Ṣafīyyah and Juwayriyyah after the revelation of the said verse. ‘Ā’ishah also said: ‘God permitted the Prophet to marry before his death’. The opposite was also said, meaning that the verse that says, ‘You are not permitted to take any further wives...’ (33: 52) abrogated the previous verse: ‘You may defer any of them you please’ (33: 51), but the first view is more correct. Our scholars said: ‘The more correct statement is that the Prophet was permitted further wives before he passed away’.

In hadith No. 3192 ‘Aṭā’ mentions attending Maymūnah’s funeral at Sarif. Scholars are in agreement that she passed away at Sarif, a place close to Makkah, at six miles distance from Makkah, but the distance is also variously put at seven, nine and twelve miles from Makkah. The same hadith mentions that the Prophet had nine wives but divided his nights among eight of them. ‘Aṭā’ adds that the one he did not give a share to was Ṣafiyyah. That the Prophet had nine wives is correct, and we mentioned their names earlier. Also, that he divided his nights between eight of them is also well-known. As for Ṣafiyyah being the one without a share, scholars say that this is an error by Ibn Jurayj, the narrator from ‘Aṭā’. The correct wife who was not given a share was Sawdah, who had gifted her night to ‘Ā’ishah, as explained earlier. As for the woman who offered herself freely to the Prophet, al-Zuhrī said that she was Maymūnah. It is also said that she was Umm Sharīk, and also Zaynab bint Khuzaymah.

Hadith No. 3193 mentions ‘Aṭā’'s statement: ‘She was the last one to die; she died in Madinah’. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘The apparent meaning of ‘Aṭā’'s statement is that he meant Maymūnah. It is mentioned in the hadith that she died at Sarif, which is close to Makkah. Therefore, to suggest that she died in Madinah is a mistake. As for the last of the Prophet's wives to die, it is said that Maymūnah died in year 63 AH, but it is also mentioned that her death was in 66 AH. Another suggestion is that she died in year 51 before ‘Ā’ishah who died in 57 or 58 AH. Ṣafiyyah, on the other hand, died in year 50 AH, in Madinah’. This is what Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said on this point. It is probable that the statement ‘she died in Madinah’ refers to Ṣafiyyah. The way it is expressed is clear and allows this meaning, but God knows best.

THE DESIRABILITY OF MARRYING A RELIGIOUS WOMAN

[3194-53]. (Dar al-Salam 3457) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb, Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā and ‘Ubaydullāh ibn Sa‘īd narrated: they said: Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd narrated; from ‘Ubaydullāh; Sa‘īd ibn Abi Sa‘īd reported to me; from his father; from Abu Hurayrah; from the Prophet (peace be upon him). He said: ‘A woman is sought in marriage for four things: her wealth, family lineage, beauty and faith. Make sure to have the religious one, [for if you do not] you end up the poorer’.

حَدَّثَنَا زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ، وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْمُثَنَّى، وَعُبَيْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ،
قَالُوا: حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، عَنْ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ، أَخْبَرَنِي سَعِيدُ بْنُ أَبِي
سَعِيدٍ، عَنْ أَبِيهِ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ، عَنِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ
قَالَ: «تُكْحَنُ الْمَرْأَةُ لَأَرْبَعٍ: لِمَالِهَا، وَلِحَسَبِهَا، وَلِجَمَالِهَا، وَلِدِينِهَا.
فَاطْفَرُ بِذَاتِ الدِّينِ تَرِبَتْ يَدَاكَ».

[3195-54]. (Dar al-Salam 3458) Muhammad ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Numayr narrated: my father narrated; ‘Abd al-Malik ibn Abi Sulaymān narrated; from ‘Aṭā’;

Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh told me: ‘I married a woman during God’s Messenger’s lifetime. I met the Prophet (peace be upon him), and he said: “Jābir, have you got married?” I said: “Yes”. He said: “A virgin or a previously married woman? I said: “Previously married”. He said: “Should you have not married a virgin with whom to have fun?” I said: “Messenger of God, I have sisters, and I feared that she might disturb relations between them and myself”. He said: “That is it, then. A woman is sought in marriage for her faith, wealth and beauty. Choose the religious one, [for if you do not] you end up the poorer”.’

وَحَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ بْنِ ثُمَيْرٍ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبِي، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ الْمَلِكِ بْنُ أَبِي سُلَيْمَانَ، عَنْ عَطَاءٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي جَابِرُ بْنُ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ قَالَ: تَزَوَّجْتُ امْرَأَةً فِي عَهْدِ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَلَقِيتُ النَّبِيَّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَقَالَ: «يَا جَابِرُ، تَزَوَّجْتَ؟» قُلْتُ نَعَمْ . قَالَ: «يَكُرُّ أَمْ تَيْبٌ؟» قُلْتُ تَيْبٌ . قَالَ: «فَهَلَّا يَكُرُّا ثَلَاثَهَا» . قُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ إِنَّ لِي أَخَوَاتٍ، فَخَشِيتُ أَنْ تَدْخُلَ بَيْنِي وَبَيْنَهُنَّ . قَالَ: «فَذَاكَ إِذَنْ . إِنَّ الْمَرْأَةَ تُنْكَحُ عَلَى دِينِهَا، وَمَالِهَا، وَجَمَالِهَا. فَعَلَيْكَ بِذَاتِ الدِّينِ تَرِبْتُ يَدَاكَ» .

Text Explanation

In the first hadith, the Prophet says: 'A woman is sought in marriage for four things: her wealth, family lineage, beauty and faith. Make sure to have the religious one, [for if you do not] you end up the poorer'. The correct thing to say as to the meaning of this hadith is that the Prophet speaks about what people normally do. They have one of these four objectives in mind when they get married. The last they consider is the religion of the woman they seek. The Prophet then gives this advice to anyone who seeks sincere counsel; that he should choose a religious woman for his wife. This is not an order, rather a piece of advice.

This hadith urges people to seek religious people for their companions in all situations because one benefits by their manners, propriety, blessings, etc. and fears no harm will come to him from them.

The last sentence in the hadith says: 'For if you do not, you end up the poorer'. This is a linguistic meaning of the expression used in the hadith, taribat yadāk. Its literal meaning is 'your hands will catch dust'. It is agreed that it means ending up the poorer for doing what one should not do. It is unanimously agreed that the expression has lost its meaning, and that people may use it merely to urge a certain way of action or encourage a particular choice.

THE DESIRABILITY OF MARRYING A VIRGIN

[3196-55]. (Dar al-Salam 3459) ‘Ubaydullāh ibn Mu‘ādh nar-rated:ⁱ my father narrated; Shu‘bah narrated; from Muḥārib; from Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh. He said: ‘I married a woman. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) asked me: “Have you got married?” I said: “Yes”. He asked: “A virgin or a previously married woman?” I said: “Previously married”. He said: “How could you miss out on a virgin and her play?”’

Shu‘bah said: I mentioned this to ‘Amr ibn Dīnār and he said: I heard it from Jābir, but he said: ‘Should you not have married a young one to play with’.

قَالَ شُعْبَةُ: فَذَكَرْتُهُ لِعَمْرِو بْنِ دِينَارٍ فَقَالَ: قَدْ سَمِعْتُهُ مِنْ جَابِرٍ، وَإِنَّمَا قَالَ: «فَهَلَّا جَارِيَةً تُلَاعِبُهَا وَتُلَاعِبُكَ».

[3197-56]. (Dar al-Salam 3460) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā and Abu al-Rabī' al-Zahrānī narrated:ⁱⁱ Yaḥyā said: Ḥammād ibn Zayd reported; from 'Amr ibn Dīnār; from Jābir ibn 'Abdullāh; that “Abdullāh died leaving behind nine (or he might have said: seven) daughters. I married a woman who was married previously. God's Messenger said to me: “Jābir, have you got married?” I said: “Yes”. He asked: “A virgin or a previously married woman?” I said: “Previously married”. He said: “Should you not have married a maid to play with (or he said: to have fun with). I said to him: “Abdullāh has died leaving behind nine (or seven) daughters, and I did not like to bring them one like them. I preferred to bring a mature woman to look after them and put them on the right course”. He said: “May God bless it for you”, or he said something good’.

In Abu al-Rabī'’s narration: ‘to play and have fun with’.

حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى، وَأَبُو الرَّبِيعِ الزَّهْرَانِيُّ، قَالَ يَحْيَى: أَخْبَرَنَا حَمَّادُ بْنُ زَيْدٍ، عَنْ عَمْرِو بْنِ دِينَارٍ، عَنْ جَابِرِ بْنِ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ، أَنَّ عَبْدَ اللَّهِ هَلَكَ وَتَرَكَ تِسْعَ بَنَاتٍ - أَوْ قَالَ سَبْعَ. فَتَزَوَّجْتُ امْرَأَةً ثَيِّبًا، فَقَالَ لِي رَسُولُ

اللَّهُ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «يَا جَابِرُ، تَزَوَّجْتَ؟» قَالَ قُلْتُ نَعَمْ .
 قَالَ: «فَبِكْرٌ أَمْ تَيْبٌ؟» قَالَ: قُلْتُ بَلْ تَيْبٌ يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ . قَالَ:
 «فَهَلَّا جَارِيَّةٌ ثَلَاثُهَا وَثَلَاثُهَا؟» أَوْ قَالَ: «تُصَاحِبُهَا وَتُصَاحِبُكَ». قَالَ:
 قُلْتُ لَهُ إِنَّ عَبْدَ اللَّهِ هَلَكَ وَتَرَكَ تِسْعَ بَنَاتٍ - أَوْ سَبْعَ . وَإِنِّي كَرِهْتُ أَنْ
 أَتِيَهُنَّ أَوْ أَجِيَهُنَّ بِمِثْلِهِنَّ، فَأَحْبَبْتُ أَنْ أَجِيءَ بِامْرَأَةٍ تَقُومُ عَلَيْهِنَّ
 وَتُصْلِحُهُنَّ . قَالَ: «فَبَارَكَ اللَّهُ لَكَ». أَوْ قَالَ لِي خَيْرًا.

وَفِي رِوَايَةِ أَبِي الرَّبِيعِ: «ثَلَاثُهَا وَثَلَاثُهَا، وَتُصَاحِبُهَا وَتُصَاحِبُكَ».

[3198-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3461) Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ Sufyān narrated; from 'Amr; from Jābir ibn 'Abdullāh. He said: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said to me: "Have you got married, Jābir?"' He added the same hadith up to 'mature woman to look after them and put them right'. He said: 'You have done well' but did not mention the rest.

وَحَدَّثَنَاهُ قُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، حَدَّثَنَا سُفْيَانُ، عَنْ عَمْرِو، عَنْ جَابِرِ بْنِ عَبْدِ
 اللَّهِ قَالَ: قَالَ لِي رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «هَلْ تَكَحَّتْ يَا
 جَابِرُ؟» وَسَاقَ الْحَدِيثَ إِلَى قَوْلِهِ امْرَأَةً تَقُومُ عَلَيْهِنَّ وَتَمْشُطُهُنَّ.
 قَالَ: «أَصَبْتُ». وَلَمْ يَذْكُرْ مَا بَعْدَهُ.

When we were on the way back, I tried to get my slow camel to speed up. A rider behind me caught up with me and poked my camel with a stick he had. My camel ran like the best camels you can see. I turned back and saw God's Messenger (peace be upon him). He said: "Jābir, why are you in a hurry?" I said: "Messenger of God, I am newly married". He asked: "Is your wife a virgin or a previously married woman?" I said: "Previously married". He said: "Should you not have married a young woman to play with?"

He said: 'When we were close to Madinah, we wanted to enter. He said: "Wait here and we will enter at night, so that the one who needs to have her hair done may do it and the one who has been without her husband may clean herself". He added: "When you come back [from a journey], take it gently".'

قَالَ: فَلَمَّا قَدِمْنَا الْمَدِينَةَ ذَهَبْنَا لِنَدْخُلَ، فَقَالَ: «أَمْهَلُوا، حَتَّى نَدْخُلَ لَيْلًا - أَيْ عِشَاءً - كَيْ تَمْتَشِطَ الشَّعِثَةُ، وَتَسْتَجِدَّ الْمُغِيبَةُ». قَالَ: وَقَالَ: «إِذَا قَدِمْتَ، فَالْكَيْسَ الْكَيْسَ».

[3200-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3463) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated: ‘Abd al-Wahhāb (meaning Ibn ‘Abd al-Majīd al-Thaqafī) narrated; ‘Ubaydullāh narrated; from Wahb ibn Kaysān; from Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh. He said: ‘I travelled with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) on a military expedition. My camel slowed down. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) came to me. He said: “Jābir!” I said: “Yes”. He said: “What is the matter with you?” I said: “My camel has slowed down. It is suffering from fatigue and causing me to lag behind”. He dismounted and poked the camel with his bent-head stick. He then said: “Mount”. I mounted. I could see it [the camel] as I would move it away from God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). He then asked: “Have you got married?” I said: “Yes”. He said: “A virgin or a previously married woman?” I said: “She was previously married”. He said: “Would it not have been better to marry a young one to play with?” I said: “I have sisters and I preferred to marry a woman who could keep them together, mend their ways and look after them". He said: "Now that you are returning, when you come [from a journey] take it gently". He then asked me: "Would you sell your camel?" I said: "Yes". He bought it from me for an ūqiyyah.

Then God's Messenger arrived, and I came the following morning. I went to the mosque, and I found him by the gate of the mosque. He said: "Have you just arrived?" I said: "Yes". He said: "Leave your camel and go in to pray two rak'ahs". I went in, prayed and came back. He ordered Bilāl to weigh me an ūqiyyah. Bilāl weighed it for me allowing more weight. I left. When I moved away, he said: "Call Jābir back for me". I was called back. I thought that now he will return the camel to me, and nothing was more unpleasant to me than this. He said: "Take your camel and keep its price".'

الْتَّقْفِيِّ)، حَدَّثَنَا عُيَيْدُ اللَّهِ، عَنْ وَهْبِ بْنِ كَيْسَانَ، عَنْ جَابِرِ بْنِ عَبْدِ
اللَّهِ، قَالَ: خَرَجْتُ مَعَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فِي غَزَاةٍ،
فَأَبْطَأَ بِي جَمَلِي. فَأَتَى عَلَيَّ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَقَالَ
لِي: «يَا جَابِرُ». قُلْتُ نَعَمْ. قَالَ: «مَا شَأْنُكَ؟» قُلْتُ: أَبْطَأَ بِي جَمَلِي

[3201-58]. (Dar al-Salam 3464) Muhammad ibn ‘Abd al-A‘lā narrated:^v al-Mu‘tamir narrated; he said: I heard my father; Abu Naḍrah narrated; from Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh. He said: ‘We were on a journey with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him), and I was riding a camel used for irrigation. He was in the rear of people. God’s Messenger hit it - or he said - he poked it (I think he said) with something he had. After that, the camel was in the front of people, pulling ahead and I was trying to control it. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “Will you sell it to me for such-and-such? And may God forgive you” I said: “It is yours, Prophet”. He said: “Will you sell it to me for such-and-such? And may God forgive you” I said: “It is yours, Prophet”. He also said to me: “Have you got married after your father passed away?” I said: “Yes”. He asked: “A previously married or a virgin?” I said: “Previously married”. He said: “Would it not have been better that you marry a virgin to have fun and play with?””

Abu Nadrah said: ‘This became a word Muslims say to each other: “Do such-and-such and may God forgive you”.’

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ عَبْدِ الْأَعْلَى، حَدَّثَنَا الْمُعْتَمِرُ، قَالَ سَمِعْتُ أَبِي، حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو نَضْرَةَ، عَنْ جَابِرِ بْنِ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ قَالَ: كُنَّا فِي مَسِيرٍ مَعَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، وَأَنَا عَلَى تَاصِحٍ إِنَّمَا هُوَ فِي أُخْرِيَاتِ النَّاسِ. قَالَ: فَصَرَبَهُ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، أَوْ قَالَ تَحَسَّهُ - أَرَاهُ قَالَ - بِشَيْءٍ كَانَ مَعَهُ. قَالَ: فَجَعَلَ بَعْدَ ذَلِكَ يَتَقَدَّمُ النَّاسَ، يُتَارِعُنِي حَتَّى إِنِّي لَأَكْفُهُ. قَالَ: فَقَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «أَتَبِيعُنِي بِكَذَا وَكَذَا، وَاللَّهُ يَغْفِرُ لَكَ؟» قَالَ: قُلْتُ هُوَ لَكَ يَا نَبِيَّ اللَّهِ. قَالَ: «أَتَبِيعُنِي بِكَذَا وَكَذَا وَاللَّهُ يَغْفِرُ لَكَ». قَالَ: قُلْتُ هُوَ لَكَ يَا نَبِيَّ اللَّهِ. قَالَ: وَقَالَ لِي: «أَتَزَوَّجْتَ بَعْدَ أَبِيكَ؟» قُلْتُ نَعَمْ. قَالَ: «تَبِيًّا أَمْ بَكْرًا؟» قَالَ: قُلْتُ تَبِيًّا. قَالَ: «فَهَلَّا تَزَوَّجْتَ بَكْرًا تُصَاحِبُكَ وَتُصَاحِبُكَهَا، وَتُلَاعِبُكَ وَتُلَاعِبُهَا».

قَالَ أَبُو نَضْرَةَ فَكَانَتْ كَلِمَةً يَقُولُهَا الْمُسْلِمُونَ: افْعَلْ كَذَا وَكَذَا وَاللَّهُ

Text Explanation

In these hadiths, the Prophet enquires about Jābir's marital status. Jābir was, at the time, a young man, perhaps around twenty years of age. His father was killed in the Battle of Uhud. Hence, the Prophet's suggestion that he should have married a young woman who was a virgin so that they might play and have fun together. The hadith highlights the preference of marrying virgins and that it carries a greater reward. It also recommends that one should treat one's wife gently and kindly, play with her and have fun. It also shows that a leader or a chief of a community should enquire after his people and companions, ask about their affairs and advise them, pointing the way that serves their interests and improves their situations.

In hadith No. 3197, Jābir says: 'I said to him: "Abdullāh has died leaving behind nine (or seven) daughters, and I did not like to bring them one like them. I preferred to bring a mature woman to look after them and put them on the right course". He said: "May God bless it for you", or he said something good'. This shows Jābir's good character and how he thought of his sisters' interest ahead of his own. The hadith also recommends supplicating for those who do a good deed and blessing them, whether it benefits the supplicant or not. It also shows that it is perfectly permissible to expect a woman to take care of her husband and his dependants, if she is willing to do so. If she is unwilling, she may not be asked to do it.

Hadith No. 3199 mentions that Jābir was trying to get his camel to speed up, but it was slow. The Prophet poked the camel with a stick he had. The stick mentioned here is 'anazah, which is about half the length of a spear with a piece of iron or metal at the end. The camel ran faster after that. This is one of the clear miracles of the Prophet showing the effect of his blessing.

When they were at the outskirts of Madinah, the Prophet tells his Companions not to go straight home but to wait until the evening so as to give their women time to get ready to receive them. He says: 'so that the one who needs to have her hair done may do it and the one who has been without her husband may clean herself'. He gives two examples: the first is self-explanatory while the second refers to shaving her pubic hair.

This is another example of the need to always observe the best of manners. It reflects the Prophet's care for Muslims, encourages overlooking faults, doing what strengthens ties and promoting whatever consolidates bonds. There is no conflict between this hadith and other authentic hadiths that discourages arriving at night when one has been on a journey. Those hadiths relate to one who arrives unexpectedly. In the case referred to by the hadiths in this chapter, the news of their imminent arrival would already have been given to the people, and the residents of Madinah were aware that they would be coming in at night. This would have allowed time for the women to do what was necessary to give their husbands and men a fine welcome, but God knows best.

In hadith No. 3200, the Prophet tells Jābir to offer two rak'ahs in the mosque. It is recommended for one who is returning from a journey to start by offering such prayer. The hadith also mentions that Bilāl gave Jābir more than an ūqiyyah [which was equivalent to 40 dirhams] when he weighed him the price of his camel. This is again recommended when giving the price of goods, repaying a debt, etc. We will discuss the case of Jābir's sale of his camel to the Prophet in the Book of Sales, God willing.

Text Explanation

The hadiths mention that a woman is created from a rib. This supports what some Fiqh scholars say that Eve was created from Adam’s rib. God says in the Qur’an: ‘He created you all from a single soul, and from it created its mate’. (4: 1) The Prophet explains that women were originally created from a rib.

These hadiths urge kind treatment of women and to be patient with them, tolerating any waywardness that they may show. They emphasize that they must not be divorced without clear and valid reason. Men are told that they must not expect total consistency from their women, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3205 quotes the Prophet: ‘Whoever believes in God and the Last Day, let him, if he witnesses something, say what is good or remain silent. Take good care of women'. Again, the Prophet urges gentle and kind treatment of women. It also makes clear that one should always say what is good. Speech that is of no or little use need not be said, as a precaution against being dragged into saying what is reprehensible or even forbidden.

Hadith No. 3206 says: 'Let no believing man hate a believing woman. If he dislikes one of her traits, he may be pleased with another'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This is not an order, but a statement of fact meaning that a believing man does not hate a believing woman. Its significance is that total hate does not occur. It should be noted that men's hate of women is different from women's hate of men'. Hence, the Prophet said: 'If he dislikes one of her traits, he may be pleased with another'.

This is what Qadi 'Iyāḍ said, but it is weak or rather wrong. The hadith does not give a statement but provides an order of prohibition. It means that a man should not hate his wife because he is bound to find in her some gratifying trait or quality. For example, she may be ill-mannered, but she may also be devout, pretty, compassionate, etc. That the hadith states a prohibition is supported by the grammatical structure and the fact that life shows that the opposite occurs. Hence, the need for the order.

THE ORIGIN OF FALSE TRAIT

[3207-62]. (Dar al-Salam 3471) Ḥārūn ibn Ma'rūf narrated: 'Abdullāh ibn Wahb narrated: 'Amr ibn al-Ḥārith reported to me; that Abu Yūnus, Abu Hurayrah's mawlā narrated to him; from Abu Hurayrah; from God's Messenger (peace be upon him). He said: 'Had it not been for Eve, no woman would have been untrue to her husband for the rest of time'.

حَدَّثَنَا هَارُونُ بْنُ مَعْرُوفٍ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ وَهْبٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي عَمْرُو بْنُ الْحَارِثِ، أَنَّ أَبَا يُونُسَ مَوْلَى أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ حَدَّثَهُ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ، عَنْ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ قَالَ: «لَوْلَا حَوَاءُ لَمْ تَخُنْ أَتَى رَوْجَهَا الدَّهْرُ».

[3208-63]. (Dar al-Salam 3472) Muhammad ibn Rāfi' narrated:ⁱ 'Abd al-Razzāq narrated; Ma'mar reported; from Hammām ibn Munabbih; he said: this is what Abu Hurayrah narrated to us from God's Messenger (peace be upon him). He mentioned a number of hadiths including: 'And God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Had it not been for the Children of Israel, food would not have rotted, and meat would not have gone bad. Had it not been for Eve, no woman would have been untrue to her husband for the rest of time”.’

وَحَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ رَافِعٍ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ الرَّزَّاقِ، أَخْبَرَنَا مَعْمَرٌ، عَنْ هَمَّامِ بْنِ مُنَبِّهٍ قَالَ: هَذَا مَا حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو هُرَيْرَةَ، عَنْ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَذَكَرَ أَحَادِيثَ مِنْهَا: وَقَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «لَوْلَا بَنُو إِسْرَائِيلَ لَمْ يَخْبَثِ الطَّعَامُ، وَلَمْ يَخْتَرِ اللَّحْمُ. وَلَوْلَا حَوَاءُ لَمْ تَخُنْ أَشَى رَوْجَهَا الدَّهْرُ».

Text Explanation

In Arabic, Eve is called Ḥawwā’, a name derived from a root meaning ‘life’. She is given this name because she is the mother of every living person. It is said that she gave Adam forty children in twenty pregnancies. Each pregnancy gave them a son and a daughter.

Scholars differ about the time she was created from Adam’s rib. Some said it was before entering Heaven, and they entered together. Others said that she was created in Heaven.ⁱⁱ Qadi ‘Iyād said that the hadith means that she is the mother of all women, and hence they are like her. They inherit her trait demonstrated in the story of the tree and Satan when he persuaded her to eat of that tree. She told Adam about the tree, and he also ate of it.

In hadith No. 3208, the Prophet says: 'Had it not been for the Children of Israel, food would not have rotted, and meat would not have gone bad'. Scholars have said that this means that when God gave the Children of Israel manna and quails to eat, they were prohibited from storing them. Nevertheless, they did store them and so they rotted. This process has continued ever since, but God knows best.

THE PROHIBITION OF DIVORCE DURING MENSTRUATION

[3209-1]. (Dar al-Salam 3473) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā al-Tamīmī narrated:ⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik ibn Anas; from Nāfi'; from Ibn 'Umar; that 'he divorced his wife when she was in her menstruation period, during the Prophet's lifetime. 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb asked God's Messenger (peace be upon him) about that. God's Messenger said to him: "Order him to take her back, then to leave her until she is cleansed [from menses], then goes through another menstruation period, and is then cleansed, then he may keep her after that or divorce her before touching her. This is the start of the waiting period at which God, Mighty and Exalted, ordered that women may be divorced".'

[3210-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3474) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā, Qutaybah and Ibn Rumḥ narrated (Yaḥyā's text):ⁱⁱ Qutaybah said: Layth narrated and the other two said al-Layth ibn Sa'd reported; from Nāfi'; from 'Abdullāh; that 'he divorced a wife of his once only when she was in her menstruation period. God's Messenger (peace be upon him) ordered him to take her back and keep her until she was cleansed, then went through another menstruation period in his home, and he was to wait until she was cleansed from menses. If he still wished to divorce her, he could do so when she was cleansed but before having intercourse with her. Such is the start of the waiting period at which God ordered that women may be divorced'.

Ibn Rumḥ added in his narration: 'When 'Abdullāh was asked about this, he would say to the questioner: "If you are divorcing your wife the first or second time, well, God's Messenger (peace be upon him) commanded me to do this. If you are divorcing the third time, she is no longer lawful for you until she has married another husband. Moreover, you have disobeyed

God in what He has ordered you regarding divorcing your wife”.’

Muslim said: ‘Al-Layth has done well in clearly saying: “once only”.’

‘Abdullāh had divorced her only one divorce and it was counted. ‘Abdullāh returned her as God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) ordered him to do.

Text Explanation

The Muslim community is unanimous that it is forbidden to divorce a woman who is menstruating without her consent. If a man divorces his wife in such a condition, he commits a sin, and whilst his divorce is valid, he is nonetheless commanded to take his wife back, as stated in the hadith concerning Ibn ‘Umar. Some scholars of the Zāhirī School have taken the odd position of saying that his divorce is invalid because it is not permitted. As such, it is similar to divorcing someone who is not one’s wife. The first view is the correct one.^{xii} It is the view of all scholars, and they base their opinion on the Prophet’s order that Ibn ‘Umar was to take his wife back. Had the divorce been invalid, there would be no taking back.

It may be argued that this is meant in the linguistic sense, which would mean going back to the original status, and not that it would count as one divorce. We respond by saying that this is wrong in two ways: (1) understanding words in their religious sense takes precedence over their linguistic sense, as is clearly established in uṣūl al-fiqh, or Islamic legal theory, and (2) Ibn ‘Umar clearly states in the versions of the hadith related by Muslim that he counted it as one divorce, but God knows best.

It is unanimously agreed upon that if a person divorces his wife when she is menstruating, he is told to take her back. This is recommended, not obligatory. This is the view of our Shāfi'ī School, and it is the view of al-Awzā'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, all Kufi scholars, Ahmad, Hadith scholars who are well versed in Fiqh and others. Mālik and his disciples say that it is a duty.

A point may be raised: Ibn 'Umar is ordered in this hadith to take his wife back, and also ordered to delay his divorce to the second period of purity from menses. So, what is the purpose of this delay? The answer provides four reasons: (1) To demonstrate that taking her back is not affected whereby such a divorce is concluded. Therefore, he has to retain her for some time during which divorce is lawful for him. This means he retains her so that the purpose of taking her back is clearly demonstrated. This is the answer given by our scholars; (2) It is a sort of punishment for him and a sort of repentance after an act of disobedience, so as to wipe the offence away; (3) The first period of cleansing together with the period of menstruation in which he divorced his wife count as one qur', [which is one third of the waiting period a divorced woman is required to observe. It is defined as a period of menstruation or a period of cleanliness from menstruation]. Therefore, if he divorces his wife during this first cleanliness, he is in the same position as one who divorces during menstruation and 4) He is ordered not to divorce her in the first period of cleanliness so that he stays for a reasonable while with his wife during which he may have intercourse with her. This may lead to reconciliation between them such that he no longer desires to divorce her, but God knows best.

The first hadith in this chapter, No. 3209, states the Prophet's ruling on the case of divorce during the woman's menstruation: 'Order him to take her back, then to leave her until she is cleansed [from menses], then goes through another menstruation period, and is then cleansed, then he may keep her after that or divorce her before touching her. This is the start of the waiting period at which God, Mighty and Exalted, ordered that women may be divorced'. The words, 'before touching her,' mean before having sexual intercourse with her. The hadith thus includes the prohibition of divorce during a period of cleanliness from menstruation in which sexual intercourse between man and wife has taken place. Our scholars say that divorce during cleanliness in which they had intercourse is forbidden until it is clear whether the wife is pregnant or not. The husband may regret having divorced his wife once he realizes that she is pregnant. When the pregnancy is clear and he wishes to divorce, his awareness of the pregnancy leaves no room for such regret. Therefore, it is not forbidden to divorce a pregnant wife. If a woman is in menstruation during pregnancy,^{xiii} divorcing her is not forbidden according to the correct view of our school. This is stated by al-Shāfi'ī. The prohibition of divorce during menstruation aims to lengthen the waiting period, while the waiting period of a pregnant woman ends when she gives birth. There can be no lengthening of her waiting period.

The Prophet then said: 'Then he may keep her after that or divorce her'. This is clear evidence that divorce for no particular reason is not sinful. However, it is reprehensible, i.e., makrūh, on the basis of the well-known hadith included in Abu Dāwūd's Sunan and other Hadith anthologies: 'The permissible thing God dislikes most is divorce'. Hence, we say that the hadith mentioning Ibn 'Umar's case shows that it is not forbidden, whilst the hadith related by Abu Dāwūd demonstrates that it is discouraged.

Our scholars say that divorce may have one of four statuses: forbidden, reprehensible, obligatory and recommended. It cannot be permissible with equal options. It is obligatory in two situations: the first is when there is conflict between husband and wife and the judge requests two arbiters from the families of the two partners. If the two arbiters decide that the overall interest is to terminate the marriage, the divorce becomes a duty. The other case is that whereby a man leaves his wife hanging: neither keeping her as a wife nor divorcing her, and this continues for four months. If then the woman claims her right and the man refuses to divorce or to return to a normal marital status, the more correct view in our school is that the judge must enforce a single divorce.

Divorce is reprehensible if the marriage is running smoothly but the man decides to divorce for no valid reason. This is our understanding of the above-quoted hadith: 'The permissible thing God dislikes most is divorce'. Divorce is forbidden in three situations: (1) during the woman's menstruation with neither compensation nor consultation with one's wife; (2) during a period of cleanliness from menses in which sexual intercourse has taken place between the partners and there is no clear indication of pregnancy; and (3) if the man has more than one wife and he divides his nights between them, then divorces one of them before her turn. Finally, divorce is recommended if the woman is of questionable morality, or if both husband and wife or one of them fear that they cannot abide by the bounds set by God, or some similar situation, and God knows best.

Combining all three divorces in one action is not forbidden according to our school, but they are better done separately. This is the view of Ahmad and Abu Thawr. On the other hand, Mālik, al-Awzā'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah and al-Layth said that it is a deviation, i.e., bid'ah.

Abu Sulaymān Ḥamad ibn Muhammad al-Khaṭṭābī said that the Prophet's order 'to take her back' provides evidence that the reinstatement of the marriage does not require agreement by the woman or her guardian, or a new marriage contract, but God knows best.

The Prophet concludes his order by explaining: 'This is the start of the waiting period at which God, Mighty and Exalted, ordered that women may be divorced'. This is construed as evidence in support of the view of al-Shāfi'ī, Mālik and other scholars who say that the three qurū', which constitute the waiting period of a divorced woman, mean three periods of cleanliness from menses, because the Prophet said that he may divorce her during cleanliness as this is the start of the waiting period. It is well-known that God has not ordered divorce to take place during a woman's menstruation period. Indeed, He has forbidden that. It may be said that the pronoun 'this' in 'this is the start of the waiting period' refers to menstruation. This is certainly wrong because divorce during menstruation is forbidden. The pronoun refers to the mentioned status, which is cleanliness, or to the waiting period.

Scholars of Fiqh, methodology and language unanimously agree that from a linguistic point of view, the word qur' [which is the singular form of qurū'] refers to both periods of menstruation and cleanliness. However, they differ as to what this word refers to in the Qur'anic verse that says: 'Divorced women shall wait, by themselves, for three monthly courses [i.e., qurū']. (2: 228) and at what point the waiting period is deemed completed. Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and others said: these are the periods of cleanliness from menstruation. Abu Ḥanīfah, al-Awzā'ī and others said: these are the periods of menstruation. This is reported from 'Umar, 'Alī, Ibn Mas'ūd, al-Thawrī, Zufar, Ishāq and other early scholars. It is the more correct one of two reports from Ahmad. They said that the scholars who rely on periods of cleanliness make it two and a portion of the third periods of cleanliness. The apparent meaning of the Qur'anic statement is three. Those who consider periods of menstruation require three complete periods. Therefore, they are closer to the Qur'an.

Because of this objection, Ibn Shihāb al-Zuhrī says that the qurū' are periods of cleanliness from menses, but the waiting period is not over until three complete such periods have passed. It is incomplete with two and a part of the third. However, all those who opt for periods of cleanliness say that the waiting period is complete with two and a portion of the third of such periods, even if the divorce takes place when only a few minutes remain of the cleanliness period. Two complete periods of cleanliness after that portion are sufficient. These scholars say that two and a portion of a third of anything are treated as a plural. God says: 'The hajj takes place in the months appointed for it'. (2: 198) It is well known that 'months' refer here to two months and a portion of the third. Likewise, he says: 'Those who hasten their departure after two days incur no sin'. (2: 204) They are in fact one day and a portion of the second.

Scholars who rely on the periods of cleanliness differ as to the time when the waiting period is considered complete. The more correct view of our Shāfi'ī School is immediately when she sees the blood discharge after the third period of cleanliness. The other view is that it is completed only after one day and night have lapsed after the commencement of bleeding. The same difference of views exists in the Mālikī School. Likewise, those who opt for three menstruation periods differ. Abu Ḥanīfah and his disciples say that the waiting period is completed when the woman has taken a bath after the third period, or when the time range for one prayer has lapsed. 'Umar, 'Alī, Ibn Mas'ūd, al-Thawrī, Ishāq and Abu 'Ubayd said until she has taken a bath after the third menstruation period. Al-Awzā'ī and others said the waiting period is complete when the discharge has stopped. One report from Ishāq says when the blood discharge has stopped, reinstatement of the marriage cannot take place, but she is not lawful to marry another person until she has taken a bath. This is a matter of precaution and avoiding the controversy, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3210, narrated by al-Layth, mentions that Ibn 'Umar 'divorced a wife of his once only when she was in her menstruation period'. Muslim comments at the end of the hadith: 'Al-Layth has done well in clearly saying: "once only”.’ This means that he has memorized the case perfectly while others did not, or ignored the number, or made a mistake considering it three divorces. The hadiths related by Muslim consistently confirm that it was one divorce.

Hadith No. 3216 quotes the Prophet (peace be upon him): ‘then he can divorce her when she is clean or pregnant’. This confirms that it is permissible to divorce a woman who is certainly pregnant. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī. Ibn al-Mundhir said that most scholars say the same, including Ṭāwūs, al-Ḥasan, Ibn Sīrīn, Rabī‘ah, Ḥammād ibn Abi Sulaymān, Mālik, Ahmad, Ishāq, Abu Thawr and Abu ‘Ubayd. Ibn al-Mundhir adds: ‘I say the same, and it is shared by some Mālikī scholars while some others say that it is forbidden’. Ibn al-Mundhir mentions another report saying that al-Ḥasan said that divorcing a pregnant woman is reprehensible, i.e., makrūh. According to al-Shāfi‘ī and others, it is permissible for a husband to divorce his pregnant wife all three divorces together, in consecutive pronouncements or at different times. All this is permissible and implies no deviation or bid‘ah. Abu Ḥanīfah and Abu Yūsuf said that the man should allow a month before he pronounces the next divorce. Mālik, Zufar and Muhammad ibn al-Ḥasan said that a husband must not divorce his pregnant wife more than once until she has given birth.

In hadith No. 3210, Ibn ‘Umar says to the person who asked him about divorce during menstruation: ‘If you are divorcing your wife the first or second time, well, God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) commanded me to do this. If you are divorcing the third time, she is no longer lawful for you'. His words 'commanded me to do this' mean that the Prophet ordered him to take his wife back because he divorced her during menstruation.

In several of these hadiths the question is asked whether the divorce Ibn 'Umar expressed during his wife's menstruation was counted as one of the three a husband can state. The answer is: 'What then, are we to suppose he was unable or weak-minded?' This is a rhetorical question which means that it counts. It cannot be discounted because of any inability or lack of intelligence. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'It means if he is unable to take his wife back and if he acts like one who is weak-minded?' The one who says this is Ibn 'Umar himself, although he says it in the third person form. Yet, in hadith No. 3223 he says it in the first person: 'Why would I not count it? Was I unable or weak-minded?'

The expression, 'what then', in his answer about counting the divorce during menstruation is meant by way of emphasis. It says to the addressee, do not doubt that the divorce occurred.

The Prophet emphasizes that the divorce should take place at a time when the divorcee can start her waiting period. This indicates that the qurū' indicate the periods of cleanliness from menstruation. The divorce process must be initiated during a period of cleanliness so that she can start the waiting period immediately. If she is divorced during menstruation, that period cannot be counted as part of the waiting period. This is unanimously agreed upon, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3226 concludes with the following sentence: 'He said: "I did not hear him saying more than this". (He meant his father.)' The one referred to in 'he said' is Ibn Ṭāwūs, referring to what he heard from his father Ṭāwūs. The one who said, ‘he meant his father’, is Ibn Jurayj, explaining the pronoun ‘him’ in Ibn Ṭāwūs’ words, ‘I did not hear him’.

 - xii. The question of the validity of divorce during menstruation, or during a period of cleanliness in which intercourse has taken place, and also the validity of combining all three divorces together is subject to much controversy by Fiqh scholars, particularly in recent times. The argument that such divorces are invalid is very strong, despite the fact that the majority of scholars in previous generations ruled that they were valid. As this book is meant only to render Imam al-Nawawī’s commentary, presenting the counter argument is beyond the scope of this work.
 - xiii. It is well known that a pregnant woman does not go through the menstruation period. However, she may have a discharge which people during the author’s time might have confused with menses. Hence, his statement means that a woman who is confirmed to be pregnant may be divorced if she is having a discharge similar to menses because this does not affect her waiting period, which lasts until birth.

DIVORCE STATED THREE TIMES

He said: 'During the time of God's Messenger (peace be upon him), Abu Bakr and the first two years of 'Umar's reign, three utterances of divorce counted as one divorce. Text Explanation

These hadiths tell us that if a person said to his wife, ‘You are divorced’, repeating it three times, it all counted as one divorce. This was the situation during the Prophet’s lifetime and Abu Bakr’s reign, as well as the early part of ‘Umar’s reign. He then imposed on people the meaning and effect of what they uttered because he felt that it became customary for men to resort to final, three-time divorce, all at once. In his Sunan anthology, Abu Dāwūd relates a similar hadith from Abu al-Ṣahbā’, from Ibn ‘Abbās, but his wording is: ‘When a man divorced his wife before the consummation of marriage, they considered it one divorce’. This is how this hadith reads, and it is considered as a problematic hadith.

Scholars differ concerning the case of a husband saying to his wife: ‘You are divorced, three times’. Al-Shāfi‘ī, Mālik, Abu Ḥanīfah, Ahmad and the great majority of earlier and later scholars said that all three divorces occur.

Ṭāwūs and some Zāhirī scholars said that only one divorce occurs. This is reported to be the view of al-Ḥajjāj ibn Arṭa'ah and Muhammad ibn Ishāq. Yet the well-known view of al-Ḥajjāj ibn Arṭa'ah is that it has no effect. This is the view of Ibn Muqātil and one report from Muhammad ibn Ishāq. These scholars base their argument on this hadith narrated by Ibn 'Abbās and those hadiths speaking of 'Abdullāh ibn 'Umar. One report of his case mentions that he divorced his wife during menstruation three times, but the Prophet ordered him to take her back.

As evidence, the majority of scholars cite a verse in the surah entitled 'Divorce', which warns: 'Whoever transgresses God's bounds wrongs his own soul. You never know, after that, God may bring about some new situation'. (65: 1) They said it means that a husband who divorces his wife may regret his action and wish to retrieve the situation, but he will not be able to do so because the final divorce has occurred. Had this type of divorce been of the type that allows remarriage, no regret would have occurred. They also cite as evidence the hadith that mentions Rukānah's case who divorced his wife absolutely. The Prophet said to him: 'By God, have you intended one only?' He answered: 'By God, I intended nothing more than one'. This is evidence confirming that had he intended three, the three would have occurred. Otherwise, his swearing would have been meaningless.

Another hadith is cited by scholars who take the other view stating that Rukānah divorced his wife three times and the Prophet made them one. This hadith is weak and narrated by unknown narrators. What is authentic here is what we mentioned earlier whereby he divorced her ‘absolutely’. Perhaps those who narrate this weak version thought that the word albattah, meaning ‘absolutely’, refers to three divorces and he narrated the hadith in the sense he understood, which was wrong.

The hadith concerning Ibn ‘Umar’s case confirms, in its authentic versions related by Muslim, that he divorced his wife once only. As for the hadith narrated by Ibn ‘Abbās, scholars hold different views on its meaning. The more correct view is that it means that in the early period, if a husband said to his wife: ‘You are divorced, you are divorced’, intending neither emphasis nor a new initiation, it is ruled as a single divorce because people rarely intend a new divorce. Therefore, the husband’s words are understood to be mere emphasis, and was so in the majority of cases. By ‘Umar’s time, people frequently resorted to this form where they intended a new divorce each time, in effect enforcing three divorces, as this had become readily understood in the majority of cases.

It is also said that the norm in the early period was one divorce, but it changed and people resorted to the three divorces at the same time. Therefore, ‘Umar implemented it. As such, what we have is a statement speaking of the difference in people’s habits, not about a changed ruling on the same question.

Imam al-Māzarī said:

Some of those who are unaware of the truth claimed that there was a case, and it was abrogated. This is a gross mistake because ‘Umar did not abrogate; far be it from him to have done so. Had he attempted such, the Prophet’s Companions would certainly have opposed him. If it is meant that the abrogation took place during the Prophet's lifetime, this is a possibility, but it then disagrees with the apparent meaning of the hadith. Had this been the case, it would not have been right for the narrator to say that the abrogated ruling continued to be applied during Abu Bakr's reign and the early part of 'Umar's reign. It may also be said that the Prophet's Companions might unanimously agree upon some abrogation, and it would be accepted. In response, we say that it is accepted because their unanimity would point to an abrogating text. To suggest that they would initiate their own abrogation is absolutely wrong because it would constitute a unanimous agreement to something wrong, and they were immune to that. It may further be said that the abrogation probably appeared to them during 'Umar's reign. We say in response that this is also untrue because it implies unanimity over a wrong decision. Eminent scholars of methodology agree that the validity of unanimity does not require that a certain period of time is over, but God knows best.

The hadith we referred to as entered in Abu Dāwūd's Sunan saying that three divorces at the same time count as one divorce applies specifically to a woman whose marriage has not been consummated. This is also stated by some of Ibn 'Abbās' disciples. They say that three divorces do not apply to the one whose marriage is not consummated. Her divorce is complete when the phrase, 'you are divorced' is stated once. To say 'three times' after that is meaningless. The majority of scholars say that this is wrong. The three divorces apply to her because the words 'you are divorced' mean that you are in the state of divorcee, and this applies both to once and to several times. To say ‘three times’ after that is to explain it. Moreover, this hadith entered by Abu Dāwūd is poor in authenticity, as it is reported by Ayyūb al-Sakhtiyānī from some unknown people from Ṭāwūs from Ibn ‘Abbās. Therefore, it cannot be accepted as evidence, but God knows best.

SELF-PROHIBITION OF ONE'S WIFE

[3232-18]. (Dar al-Salam 3494) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated:ⁱ Ismā'īl ibn Ibrāhīm narrated; from Hishām (meaning al-Dastawā'ī) he said: Yaḥyā ibn Abi Kathīr wrote to me narrating from Ya'lā ibn Ḥakīm; from Sa'īd ibn Jubayr; from Ibn 'Abbās; that he used to say: 'As for the case of self-prohibition, it is just an oath requiring indemnity'. Ibn 'Abbās added: 'In God's Messenger you have a good model'. (33: 21)

وَحَدَّثَنَا زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ، حَدَّثَنَا إِسْمَاعِيلُ بْنُ إِبْرَاهِيمَ، عَنْ هِشَامٍ (يَعْنِي الدَّسْتَوَائِيَّ) قَالَ: كَتَبَ إِلَيَّ يَحْيَى بْنُ أَبِي كَثِيرٍ، يُحَدِّثُ عَنْ يَعْلَى بْنِ حَكِيمٍ، عَنْ سَعِيدِ بْنِ جُبَيْرٍ، عَنِ ابْنِ عَبَّاسٍ أَنَّهُ كَانَ يَقُولُ فِي الْحَرَامِ: يَمِينٌ يُكْفَرُهَا . وَقَالَ ابْنُ عَبَّاسٍ «لَقَدْ كَانَ لَكُمْ فِي رَسُولِ اللَّهِ أُسْوَةٌ حَسَنَةٌ».

[3233-19]. (Dar al-Salam 3495) Yaḥyā ibn Bishr al-Ḥarīrī narrated: Mu'āwiyah (meaning Ibn Sallām) narrated; from Yaḥyā ibn Abi Kathīr; that Ya'lā ibn Ḥakīm reported to him; that Sa'īd ibn Jubayr mentioned that he heard Ibn ‘Abbās say: ‘If a man prohibits himself [from approaching] his wife, it is merely an oath he needs to atone for’. He added: ‘In God’s Messenger you have a good model’.

[3234-20]. (Dar al-Salam 3496) Muhammad ibn Ḥātim narrated to me:ⁱⁱ Ḥajjāj ibn Muhammad narrated; Ibn Jurayj reported; ‘Aṭā’ reported to me; that he heard ‘Ubayd ibn ‘Umayr narrating; that he heard ‘Ā’ishah narrating that ‘the Prophet (peace be upon him) used to stop at Zaynab bint Jaḥsh where he would have a drink of honey’. She said: ‘I agreed with Ḥafṣah that if the Prophet entered the apartment of either of us, she would say to him: “You have the smell of maghāfir. Have you eaten maghāfir?” The Prophet stopped at one of them and she said that to him. He said: “I only had a drink of honey at Zaynab bint Jaḥsh, and I shall not have it again”. Then it was revealed to him: “Prophet, why do you prohibit yourself something that God has made lawful to you”,

(66: 1) up to “Would that you two turn to God in repentance, for your hearts have swerved”, (66: 4) including “The Prophet told something in confidence to one of his wives”. (66:3) (As he said to them: I only had a drink of honey.)

أَخْبَرَنِي عَطَاءٌ، أَنَّهُ سَمِعَ عُبَيْدَ بْنَ عُمَيْرٍ يُخْبِرُ، أَنَّ اللَّهَ سَمِعَ عَائِشَةَ تُخْبِرُ
أَنَّ النَّبِيَّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ كَانَ يَمْكُثُ عِنْدَ زَيْنَبَ بِنْتِ جَحْشٍ،
فَيَشْرَبُ عِنْدَهَا عَسَلًا. قَالَتْ: فَتَوَاطَأْتُ أَنَا وَحَفْصَةُ، أَنَّ أَيْتَنَا مَا دَخَلَ
عَلَيْهَا النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَلْتَقُلْ: إِنِّي أَجِدُ مِنْكَ رِيحَ مَغَافِيرَ.
أَكَلْتُ مَغَافِيرَ؟ فَدَخَلَ عَلَى إِحْدَاهُمَا، فَقَالَتْ ذَلِكَ لَهُ. فَقَالَ: «بَلْ
شَرِبْتُ عَسَلًا عِنْدَ زَيْنَبَ بِنْتِ جَحْشٍ، وَلَنْ أَعُودَ لَهُ». فَتَزَلَّ: «لِمَ
تُحَرِّمُ مَا أَحَلَّ اللَّهُ لَكَ؟» إِلَى قَوْلِهِ: «إِنْ تَتُوبَا»، لِعَائِشَةَ وَحَفْصَةَ.
«وَإِذْ أَسَرَّ النَّبِيُّ إِلَى بَعْضِ أَرْوَاجِهِ حَدِيثًا» لِقَوْلِهِ: «بَلْ شَرِبْتُ
عَسَلًا».

[3235-21]. (Dar al-Salam 3497) Abu Kurayb Muhammad ibn al-‘Alā’ and Ḥārūn ibn ‘Abdullāh narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ both said: Abu Usāmah narrated; from Hishām; from his father; from ‘Ā’ishah. She said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) used to like sweet things and honey. After he prayed ‘Aṣr, he would go round to his wives, and he would get near them. He entered Ḥafṣah’s place and stayed with her longer than he used to stay.

I asked about that and I was told that a woman from her own people sent her a pot of honey as a gift and she gave God's Messenger a drink of it. I thought, by God, we shall do a trick. I mentioned it to Sawdah and said: "When he enters your place, he will get near you. You say to him then: 'Messenger of God, have you eaten maghāfir?' He will say: 'No'. Then say to him: 'What is this smell, then?' (God's Messenger hated that he might have a bad smell.) He will say to you that Ḥafṣah gave him a drink of honey. Say to him: 'Its bees must have fed on 'urfuṭ'. I will say the same to him. You, Ṣafiyyah say the same".

Then the Prophet entered Sawdah's home. Sawdah said: "By the One other than whom there is no God, I was about to say to him what you told me when he was still at the door because of my fear of you". When God's Messenger came near Sawdah, she said to him: "Messenger of God, have you eaten maghāfir?" He said: "No". She said: "What is this smell, then?" He said: "Ḥafṣah gave me a drink of honey". She said: "Its bees must have fed on 'urfuṭ'." 'Ā'ishah said: 'When he came into my place, I said the same. He then went to Ṣafiyyah and she said the same. When he later went to Hafṣah, she said: “Messenger of God, shall I give you this drink”. He said: “I have no need”.’

She [i.e., ‘Ā’ishah] said: ‘Sawdah was saying: “All glory be to God. We have certainly deprived him”. I said to her: “Be quiet”.’

حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو كُرَيْبٍ مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْعَلَاءِ، وَهَارُونُ بْنُ عَبْدِ اللَّهِ قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو أُسَامَةَ، عَنْ هِشَامٍ، عَنْ أَبِيهِ، عَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ: كَانَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يُحِبُّ الْخُلُوءَ وَالْعَسَلَ. فَكَانَ إِذَا صَلَّى الْعَصْرَ، دَارَ عَلَى نِسَائِهِ، فَيَذْنُو مِنْهُنَّ. فَدَخَلَ عَلَى حَفْصَةَ فَاحْتَبَسَ عِنْدَهَا أَكْثَرَ مِمَّا كَانَ يَحْتَبِسُ. فَسَأَلْتُ عَنْ ذَلِكَ، فَقِيلَ لِي: أَهَدَتْ لَهَا امْرَأَةً مِنْ قَوْمِهَا عُكَّةً مِنْ عَسَلٍ، فَسَقَتْ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ مِنْهُ شَرْبَةً. فَقُلْتُ: أَمَا وَاللَّهِ لَتَحْتَالََنَّ لَهُ. فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ لِسَوْدَةَ، وَقُلْتُ إِذَا دَخَلَ عَلَيْكَ فَإِنَّهُ سَيَذْنُو مِنْكَ، فَقُولِي لَهُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ أَكَلْتَ مَغَافِيرَ؟ فَإِنَّهُ سَيَقُولُ لَكَ لَا. فَقُولِي لَهُ: مَا هَذِهِ الرِّيحُ؟ (وَكَانَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ يَشْتَدُّ عَلَيْهِ أَنْ يُوجَدَ مِنْهُ الرِّيحُ). فَإِنَّهُ سَيَقُولُ لَكَ: سَقَنْتَنِي حَفْصَةُ شَرْبَةً عَسَلٍ. فَقُولِي لَهُ: جَرَسَتْ تَحْلُهُ الْعُرْفُطُ، وَسَأَقُولُ ذَلِكَ لَهُ. وَقُولِيهِ أَنْتِ يَا صَفِيَّةُ.

Text Explanation

This chapter includes the hadith in which Ibn 'Abbās says that if a man prohibits himself approaching his wife, it is only an oath that he needs to give indemnity for. Muslim also enters the hadith narrated by 'Ā'ishah concerning the reason for the revelation of Surah 66, beginning with: 'Prophet, why do you prohibit yourself something that God has made lawful to you?'

Scholars differ about the case of a man saying to his wife: 'You are forbidden to me'. Al-Shāfi'ī's view is that it depends on his intention. If the husband intends it as divorce, it is enforced as such, and if his intention is ḡihār, it has this effect. [ḡihār means treating one's wife like one of his closest relatives such as his mother or sister.] If the husband intends it as prohibiting her, with neither divorce nor ḡihār, he incurs by virtue of that statement the indemnity of an oath, although it is not an oath. If he intends nothing in particular, then al-Shāfi'ī gives two views, the more correct of which is that he must still give the indemnity for an oath, and the other view is that this is idle talk that gives rise to no ruling whatsoever. This is how our Shāfi'ī School considers it.

Qadi 'Iyād mentions that scholars have given fourteen different views on this question:

1. It counts as three divorces, whether the marriage has been consummated or not, unless he intends less than three. This last point particularly applies when the marriage has not been consummated. This is the well-known Mālikī view. This is also the view of 'Alī ibn Abi Ṭālib, Zayd, al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥakam.
2. It counts as three divorces in all cases. The man's intention is discounted whether the marriage has been consummated or not. This is the view of Ibn Abi Laylā and 'Abd al-Malik ibn al-Mājishūn of the Mālikī School.
3. It counts as three divorces if the marriage has been consummated, and one divorce if it has not. This is the view of Abu Muṣ'ab and Muhammad ibn 'Abd al-Ḥakam, both of whom were Mālikīs.

- It counts as one irrevocable divorce, whether the
4. marriage is consummated or not. This is reported from Mālik.
 5. It counts as one ordinary [i.e., revocable] divorce. This is stated by ‘Abd al-‘Azīz ibn Maslamah of the Mālikī School.
 6. It occurs as the man intends, but not less than one divorce. This is al-Zuhrī’s view.
 7. If the man intends it as a single or multiple divorce, or an oath, it counts as he intended. Otherwise, it is idle talk. This is the view of Sufyān al-Thawrī.
 8. The same as the seventh view, except that if the husband did not intend anything in particular, he must give an indemnity for an oath. This is the view of al-Awzā‘ī and Abu Thawr.
 9. The view of al-Shāfi‘ī which has already been explained. This is also the view of Abu Bakr, ‘Umar and other Companions of the Prophet and many of the tābi‘īn.
 10. If the man intends a divorce, it counts as one irrevocable divorce; if he intends three divorces, it counts as three; if two, only one occurs; if he did not intend anything, it counts as an oath; if he intends it as a lie, it is idle talk. This is the view of Abu Ḥanīfah and his disciples.
 11. The same as Number 10, except that if he intends two divorces, both are counted. This is Zufar’s view.
 12. The same indemnity is required as for ḡihār.^{iv} This is Ishāq ibn Rāhawayh’s view.
 13. This is an oath which incurs the normal indemnity of an oath. This is stated by Ibn ‘Abbās and some tābi‘īn scholars.

14. It is like forbidding oneself water or food. It is idle talk that incurs nothing. This is stated by Masrūq, al-Sha'bī, Abu Salamah and Aṣbagh of the Mālikī School.

All this applies if the man is married to a free woman. If he says it to a slave, then according to al-Shāfi'ī and his school, she is set free if his intention is to free her. If he intends that she herself is prohibited to him, he is required to give the indemnity for an oath, but his words are not counted as an oath. If he has not intended anything, he is still required to give the indemnity for an oath, according to the correct view.

Mālik said: 'If such prohibition is addressed to a slave, it is idle talk that has no effect whatsoever.' Qadi 'Iyāḍ says that scholars generally say that the man incurs the indemnity of an oath by the very words of prohibition. Abu Ḥanīfah said that whatever the man has forbidden himself, whether a slave or food, etc. becomes forbidden to him. Nothing is required of him until he has eaten what he forbade himself. When he does, the indemnity of a broken oath becomes due. The view of Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and the majority of scholars is that if a person says I forbid myself this food, drink, entry into this house, speaking to this person, or whatever, other than one's wife or slave, it is all idle talk that requires no indemnity. Whatever he has forbidden himself is not forbidden. If he continues with whatever it is, nothing is incurred, but God knows best.

Hadiths No. 3234 and No. 3235 mention the trick concerning the Prophet's drink of honey when some of his wives said that they could smell maghāfir from him. This is a sticky stuff that grows on a tree called ‘urfut, and it has a sweet taste and a bad smell. The Prophet strongly disliked anyone noting a bad smell about him. When the Prophet told his wives that he only had a drink of honey, they said that it must have come from bees that fed on ‘urfut.

Hadith No. 3234 mentions that the Prophet tells his wives that he only had a drink of honey given to him by his other wife, Zaynab bint Jaḥsh, and that he would not have that drink again. This was the cause of the revelation of ‘Prophet, why do you prohibit yourself something that God has made lawful to you?’ It is clear that the verse relates to the cause of the Prophet’s abandoning honey. In books of Fiqh, it is mentioned that the cause was that the Prophet forbade himself approaching Maria.

Qadi ‘Iyād said: views concerning the cause of revealing this verse vary. ‘Āishah said that it related to the honey, while Zayd ibn Aslam said that it related to the Prophet’s prohibition of his slave, Maria, and his oath never to have intercourse with her. This provides no evidence in support of the view that such prohibition requires an indemnity, citing the verse that says: ‘God has already ordained for you [believers] a way to release you from such oaths’. (66: 2) It is reported that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ‘By God, I shall not have intercourse with her, then said: she is forbidden to me’. A similar report is stated that he swore not to drink honey and that he prohibited himself this drink. This is stated by Ibn al-Mundhir. In a hadith related by al-Bukhari, the Prophet says: ‘I shall not have it again, and I swear that you must not tell anyone of this’. Al-Ṭaḥāwī said about the honey drink: ‘I shall never have it again’ but did not swear. However, the verse speaking of the way to release oneself from an oath means that an oath must have been stated.

My own view is that the verse may be interpreted as meaning that God has made it obligatory on you in cases of prohibition that you give the indemnity of an oath. This is how the verse is understood by al-Shāfi‘ī, his disciples and scholars sharing their view.

Hadith No. 3234 mentions that the Prophet had his drink of honey at Zaynab bint Jaḥsh’s place, while the next hadith, No. 3235, mentions that he had it at Ḥaḥṣah’s apartment. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said:

Muslim mentions in the hadith narrated by Ḥajjāj from Ibn Jurayj that the Prophet had the honey drink at Zaynab’s, and that his two wives who supported each other against him were ‘Ā’ishah and Ḥaḥṣah. This is also confirmed in the hadith narrated by ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb and Ibn ‘Abbās, stating that the collusion was by ‘Ā’ishah and Ḥaḥṣah. Muslim also mentions in the hadith narrated by Abu Usāmah from Hishām that the honey drink was at Ḥaḥṣah’s and that the wives who plotted were ‘Ā’ishah, Sawdah and Ṣafīyyah. The first report is more accurate. Al-Nasā’ī said: ‘The chain of transmission of the hadith narrated by Ḥajjāj, [No. 3234], is excellent and authentic.’ Al-Aṣīlī said that it is more correct and consistent with God’s Book. He is referring to the verse that says: ‘If you two support each other against him...’. The verse refers to two wives, not three. They are ‘Ā’ishah and Ḥaḥṣah as acknowledged by ‘Umar. Names have been confused by the narrator in the other hadith. Moreover, the correct thing is that the verse was revealed concerning the story of the honey drink, not the case of Maria, which is not mentioned in either of the two Ṣaḥīḥ anthologies. Indeed, the story of prohibiting Maria is not given in any authentic report. The correct thing is that the honey drink was consumed at Zaynab's.

In hadith No. 3235, 'Ā'ishah says: 'God's Messenger (peace be upon him) used to like sweet things and honey'. Scholars said that 'sweet' in this context refers to every type of sweet taste. Honey is then mentioned to highlight its special and prominent status. It is a case of highlighting the particular after mentioning the general. This indicates that all tasty and delightful foods are permissible to eat. In fact, eating them on the odd occasion is not contrary to self-discipline and the avoidance of indulgence.

The hadith then mentions the Prophet's habit: 'After he prayed 'Aṣr, he would go round to his wives, and he would get near them'. This statement supports the view of our scholars that a man who divides his nights between his wives may enter the home of any of his wives for a valid reason. He may not, however, have intercourse with any of his wives other than the one whose turn it is on that day.

Transmission

At the end of hadith No. 3235, Muslim adds two more chains of transmission of this hadith, and in the first he says: 'Abu Ishāq Ibrāhīm said: al-Ḥasan ibn Bishr ibn al-Qāsim narrated; Abu Usāmah narrated: exactly the same text'. This means that Ibrāhīm ibn Sufyān, Muslim's disciple, equals Muslim in the transmission of this hadith, narrating it from one person who narrates it from Abu Usāmah. Muslim also narrates it from one person who quotes Abu Usāmah. This makes Ibrāhīm's transmission shorter by one man than if he narrated it from Muslim, but God knows best.

WHEN A HUSBAND GIVES HIS WIFE A CHOICE

[3236-22]. (Dar al-Salam 3498) Abu al-Ṭāhir narrated to me:ⁱ Ibn Wahb narrated [H]. Also, Ḥarmalah ibn Yaḥyā al-Tujībī narrated to me (his text); ‘Abdullāh ibn Wahb reported; Yūnus ibn Yazīd reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; Abu Salamah ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf reported to me; that ‘Ā’ishah said: ‘When God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) was ordered to give his wives a choice, he started with me. He said: “I shall mention something to you, and you do not have to decide before you have consulted your parents”. She said: “He knew that my parents would have never told me to part with him”. She said: “He then said: ‘God, Mighty and Exalted, said: “Prophet! Say to your wives: ‘If you desire the life of this world and its charms, I shall provide for you and release you in a becoming manner. But if you desire God and His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter, know that God has readied great rewards for those of you who do good’.”’ (33: 28-29) I said: “On what shall I consult my parents? I choose God, His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter". Then the other wives of God's Messenger (peace be upon him) did the same as I did'.

He said: 'Abu Bakr came over, seeking permission to enter the Prophet's home, and he found people seated at his door. None of them was given permission to enter. However, Abu Bakr was permitted, and he went in. Then 'Umar came over, sought permission and it was granted. He found the Prophet seated with his wives around him, but he looked gloomy, and he was silent. Abu Bakr thought: I shall say something to make the Prophet laugh. He said: "Messenger of God, I wish you had seen Bint Khārijah [his wife] when she asked me for more money. I went up to her and poked her in the neck". God's Messenger smiled and said: "They are here around me as you see, asking me for more money". Abu Bakr went up to 'Ā'ishah to poke her in the neck and 'Umar went up to Ḥafṣah to poke her in the neck. Both said: "You are asking God's Messenger (peace be upon him) what he does not have? They said: "By God, we never ask God's Messenger (peace be upon him) something he does not have".

He then stayed away from them all for a month, or twenty-nine days. These verses were then revealed to him: "Prophet! Say to your wives: 'If you desire the life of this world and its charms, I shall provide for you and release you in a becoming manner. But if you desire God and His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter, know that God has readied great rewards for those of you who do good.' (33: 28-29) He started with 'Ā'ishah and said to her: "'Ā'ishah, I want to tell you something and I would like you not to be hasty, until you have consulted your parents". She said: "What is it, Messenger of God? He read out the two verses to her. She said: "Messenger of God, would I consult my parents concerning you? I definitely choose God, His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter. And I request you not to tell any of your women what I said". He said: "If anyone of them asks me, I shall tell her. God has not sent me to make things hard or to be hard, but he sent me to teach and make things easier for people".'

امْرَأَةً مِنْ نِسَائِكَ بِالَّذِي قُلْتُ. قَالَ: «لَا تَسْأَلْنِي امْرَأَةً مِنْهُنَّ إِلَّا
أَخْبَرْتُهَا. إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَمْ يَبْعَثْنِي مُعْتَبًا وَلَا مُتَعَتًّا، وَلَكِنْ بَعَثَنِي مُعَلِّمًا
مُيسِّرًا».

Text Explanation

The first hadith in this chapter, No. 3236, mentions that when God's Messenger was ordered to offer his wives the choice to remain with him or to be divorced, he started with 'Ā'ishah because of her special merits. He told her not to make a hasty decision. He said this out of compassion for her and her parents. It was a sort of advice to her and her parents that it would be better for them that she stayed with him. Perhaps he feared that being young and inexperienced, she might choose to be released. If she did, he would have had to part with her. That would have been the wrong choice and a bad thing for her, her parents and the Prophet's other wives who might follow her example.

The hadith shows a special merit of 'Ā'ishah's and also the other Mothers of the Believers. It also shows that it is important to immediately opt for what is good and attach greater importance to one's welfare in the life to come rather than this present life. The hadith further shows that one should give sincere counsel to one's friends and relatives, highlighting the importance of what is more useful in the life of the Hereafter.

In hadith No. 3237, ‘Āishah says: ‘If it is up to me, I would never give anyone preference over myself’. This competition for closeness to the Prophet was not for mere enjoyment, normal companionship of man and wife, or personal desire which are of importance to some people. It was rather a competition for what benefits a person in the life to come: closeness to the most noble person throughout all human generations, past and future, serving him, learning from him, attending to his needs and hoping that revelation would be given to him while he was with her, etc. This is similar to the hadith in which Ibn ‘Abbās said to the Prophet: ‘I do not favour anyone with my share of you’. There are many similar examples.

‘Āishah mentions that when God’s Messenger gave his wives a choice, they did not consider it a divorce. This provides evidence confirming the view of Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, Ahmad and the great majority of scholars that when a person gives his wife a choice between divorce and staying with him, and she chooses to stay, this does not constitute a divorce and no separation occurs. Yet, it has been reported from ‘Alī, Zayd ibn Thābit, al-Ḥasan and al-Layth ibn Sa’d that the mere offering of a choice constitutes one irrevocable divorce, whether she chooses to remain with her husband or not. Both al-Khaṭṭābī and al-Naqqāsh report that the same view was expressed by Mālik. However, Qadi ‘Iyāḍ says that this cannot be true from Mālik. Moreover, it is a weak view, refuted by these clear hadiths. Perhaps those who expressed this view were not aware of these hadiths, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3243 mentions that when Abu Bakr saw the Prophet looking gloomy and remaining silent, he thought of saying something to make him laugh. This is in fact desirable; when one sees a friend or relative feeling sad and worried, one should say something that changes the atmosphere and brings about some merriment. This adds to Abu Bakr's merits.

STAYING AWAY FROM WIVES AND GIVING THEM A CHOICE

[3244-30]. (Dar al-Salam 3507) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated to me: ‘Umar ibn Yūnus al-Ḥanafī narrated; ‘Ikrimah ibn ‘Ammār narrated; from Simāk Abi Zumayl; ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Abbās narrated to me; ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb narrated to me. He said: ‘When God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) boycotted his women, I came into the mosque and found people pressing pebbles in their hands and saying that God’s Messenger has divorced his wives. This was before the Prophet’s wives were commanded to be screened’. ‘Umar said: ‘I thought I must know this today’.

He said: ‘I went into ‘Ā’ishah’s and said: “You, Abu Bakr’s daughter, have you gone so far as to hurt God’s Messenger (peace be upon him)?” She said: “What have you got to do with me, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb? Attend to your own precious one”.’ He said: ‘I went into Ḥafṣah bint ‘Umar’s [apartment] and said to her: “Ḥafṣah, have you gone so far as to hurt God’s Messenger (peace be upon him)? By God, you know that God's Messenger does not love you. Had it not been for my sake, he would have divorced you. She wept profusely". I said to her: "Where is God's Messenger?" She said: "He is in his store place in the high room". I went in and found Rabāḥ, the Prophet's servant sitting at the doorstep of the high room, with his feet dangled on the hollow wood of the date palm the Prophet used to go up to this room and come down. I called out to him: "Rabāḥ, request God's Messenger's permission for me to come up". He looked into the room, then looked at me and said nothing. I raised my voice and said: "Rabāḥ, request God's Messenger's permission for me to come up". I think that God's Messenger may have thought that I have come on Ḥafṣah's account. "By God, if God's Messenger commands me to strike her neck, I will do it", I said that shouting. He signalled me to come up.

I went in and found God's Messenger (peace be upon him) reclining on a straw mat. I sat down, and he smoothed his lower garment, which was his only clothes. I noticed the mark of the straw mat on his side. I looked around in the Prophet's store and found a handful of barley, around one ṣā', and a similar amount of qaraz at one side and a hanged untanned hide. I was moved to tears. He said: "What makes you weep, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb?" I said: "Why would I not weep, Messenger of God, when I see the marks of this mat clear on your side, and this store place of yours with nothing other than what I see, while Caesar and Khosrow enjoying a life of plenty? Yet, you are God's Messenger and His chosen one, and this is all your store place?" He said: "Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, will you not be satisfied that we have the [goodness of] the life to come and they have this present life?" I said: "Indeed".

When I went in, I could see anger on his face. I said: "Messenger of God, what is troubling you with women? If you have divorced them, God is with you and His angels, as also Gabriel and Michael, myself, Abu Bakr and the believers are all with you". I praise God that I rarely said something without hoping that God confirms what I say. [Later] this verse, giving a choice, was revealed: "Were he to divorce you, his Lord may well give him in your stead spouses better than you" (66: 5), "But if you support each other against him, know that God is his protector, and that, therefore, Gabriel, all righteous believers and the angels will stand behind him". (66: 4) 'Ā'ishah bint Abu Bakr and Hafṣah used to support each other against the rest of the Prophet's wives.

I asked: "Messenger of God, have you divorced them?" He said: "No". I said: "Messenger of God, I went into the mosque and the Muslims were pressing pebbles in their hands and saying that God's Messenger has divorced his wives. May I go down and tell them that you have not divorced them?" He said: "Yes, if you wish". I continued to talk to him until anger disappeared from his face and he smiled with his teeth visible. He had one of the most beautiful mouths. Then the Prophet went down, and I went down. I had to hold on to the date palm as I went down, while God's Messenger descended without touching it, as though he was walking on flat earth.

I said: "Messenger of God, you only stayed in this room twenty-nine days". He said: "A month may be twenty-nine days". I stopped at the door of the mosque and shouted as high as I could: "God's Messenger did not divorce his wives". This verse was revealed: 'If any matter pertaining to peace or war comes to their knowledge, they make it known to all and sundry; whereas, if they would only refer it to the Messenger and to those from among them entrusted with authority, those of them who are engaged in obtaining intelligence would know it'. (4: 83) It was I who obtained intelligence of this matter. God also revealed the verses giving [the Prophet's wives] the choice'.

طَلَّقُكَ أَنْ يُبَدِّلَهُ أَرْوَاجًا خَيْرًا مِنْكَ». «وَإِنْ تَظَاهَرَا عَلَيْهِ فَإِنَّ اللَّهَ هُوَ مَوْلَاهُ وَجِبْرِيلُ وَصَالِحُ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ وَالْمَلَائِكَةُ بَعْدَ ذَلِكَ ظَهِيرٌ». وَكَانَتْ عَائِشَةُ بِنْتُ أَبِي بَكْرٍ وَحَفْصَةُ تَظَاهَرَانِ عَلَى سَائِرِ نِسَاءِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. فَقُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ أَطَلَّقْتَهُنَّ؟ قَالَ: «لَا». قُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ، إِنِّي دَخَلْتُ الْمَسْجِدَ وَالْمُسْلِمُونَ يَنْكُثُونَ بِالْحَصَى، يَقُولُونَ: طَلَّقَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ نِسَاءَهُ، أَفَأَنْزِلُ فَأُخِيرَهُمْ أَتَيْتُكَ لَمْ تُطَلِّقْهُنَّ. قَالَ: «تَعَمْ إِنْ شِئْتَ». فَلَمْ أَرْزُ أَحَدُهُ حَتَّى تَحَسَّرَ الْعَصَبُ عَنْ وَجْهِهِ، وَحَتَّى كَشَرَ فَصْحَكَ. وَكَانَ مِنْ أَحْسَنِ النَّاسِ تَعَرًّا. ثُمَّ نَزَلَ نَبِيُّ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ وَنَزَلْتُ. فَتَزَلْتُ أَتَشَبَّهْتُ بِالْجَذْعِ، وَنَزَلَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ كَأَنَّمَا يَمْشِي عَلَى الْأَرْضِ، مَا يَمَسُّهُ بِيَدِهِ. فَقُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ، إِنَّمَا كُنْتُ فِي الْعُرْقَةِ تِسْعَةَ وَعِشْرِينَ. قَالَ: «إِنَّ الشَّهْرَ يَكُونُ تِسْعًا وَعِشْرِينَ». فَقُمْتُ عَلَى بَابِ الْمَسْجِدِ، فَنَادَيْتُ بِأَعْلَى صَوْتِي: لَمْ يُطَلِّقْ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ نِسَاءَهُ. وَتَزَلْتُ هَذِهِ الْآيَةَ: «وَإِذَا جَاءَهُمْ أَمْرٌ مِنَ الْأَمْنِ أَوِ الْخَوْفِ أَذَاعُوا بِهِ وَلَوْ رَدُّوهُ إِلَى الرَّسُولِ وَإِلَى أُولِي الْأَمْرِ مِنْهُمْ لَعَلِمَهُ الَّذِينَ يَسْتَنبِطُونَهُ مِنْهُمْ». فَكُنْتُ أَنَا اسْتَنْبَطْتُ ذَلِكَ الْأَمْرَ. وَأَنْزَلَ اللَّهُ عَزَّ وَجَلَّ آيَةَ التَّخْيِيرِ.

[3245-31]. (Dar al-Salam 3508) Ḥārūn ibn Sa‘īd al-Aylī narrated:ⁱ ‘Abdullāh ibn Wahb narrated; Sulaymān (meaning Ibn Bilāl) reported to me; Yahyā reported to me; ‘Ubayd ibn Ḥunayn reported to me; that he heard ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Abbās narrating. He said: ‘I stayed a year hoping to ask ‘Umar ibn al-

Khaṭṭāb about a certain verse, but I could not ask him, feeling in awe of him. Then he travelled for Hajj, and I travelled with him. On the way back, as we were at some point in the journey, he went into an area with Arak trees to relieve himself. I waited for him until he finished, then walked with him. I said: “Amīr al-Mu’minīn, who were the two wives of the Prophet who supported each other against him?” He said: “They were ‘Ā’ishah and Ḥafṣah”. I said to him: “By God, I wanted to ask you about this for a year and I could not, feeling in awe of you”. He said: “Do not do that. Whatever you think I know, ask me about it. If I know it, I will tell you”.

‘Umar said: “In pre-Islamic days we had little regard for women, but then God revealed whatever He revealed about them and gave them their due shares. Once, as I was busy considering a certain matter, my wife said to me: ‘If you would do such-and-such’. I said: ‘What have you to do with what I am considering? Why do you interfere with something I intend to do?’ She said to me: ‘How strange of you, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, that you do not wish to listen to an argument, when your daughter argues with God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) leaving him angry all day?’ ‘Umar said: "I put on my upper garment and went out, going straight to Ḥafṣah. I said: 'Daughter! Do you argue with God's Messenger leaving him angry all day?' Ḥafṣah said: 'By God, we do argue with him'. I said: 'Take this from me, daughter, that I am warning you against incurring God's punishment and His Messenger's anger. Do not be tempted by the one who is proud of her beauty and God's Messenger's love'. I left her and went straight to Umm Salamah, as she was related to me. I spoke to her. Umm Salamah said to me: 'How strange of you, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb! You interfere in everything, and you wish to interfere between God's Messenger and his wives!' She was so powerful that she stopped me from some of what I felt. I left her and went away.

I had an Anṣārī friend who gave me the news when I did not attend, and I gave him the news when he was absent. At the time we were worried because we were informed that a king of Ghassān was about to march and attack us. That disturbed us much. My Anṣārī friend came and knocked at the door, and said: 'Open, open'. I asked him: 'Has the Ghassānī arrived?' He said: 'Something more serious. God's Messenger has boycotted his wives'. I said: 'Confound Ḥafṣah and 'Ā'ishah'.

I put on my garment and went out. I found God's Messenger (peace be upon him) in a high room to which one goes up on a [dry branch of] date palm. A black servant of God's Messenger was seated at the top of the steps. I said: 'This is 'Umar'. I was given permission to go in. I related to God's Messenger what happened and when I told him what Umm Salamah said, God's Messenger smiled. He was reclining on a straw mat with nothing between it and his body. Under his head he had a leather pillow stuffed with fibre. Near his feet there was a quantity of tanning stuff called qaraz, and above his head there were some hides hanging. I saw the mark of the mat on the side of God's Messenger, and I wept. He said: 'What makes you cry?' I said: 'Messenger of God, Caesar and Khosrow are having what they have, while you are God's Messenger!' He said: 'Are you not happy that they have the comforts of this life, and you have the [happiness of the] Hereafter?''''

حَدَّثَنَا هَارُونُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ الْأَيْلِيُّ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ وَهْبٍ، أَخْبَرَنِي

حَاجًّا، فَخَرَجْتُ مَعَهُ. فَلَمَّا رَجَعَ فَكُنَّا بَعْضُ الطَّرِيقِ، عَدَلْ إِلَى الْأَرَاكِ

أَتَا آتِيهِ بِالْخَبَرِ. وَنَحْنُ حِينَئِذٍ تَتَخَوَّفُ مَلِكًا مِّنْ مُلُوكِ عَسَّانَ، ذُكِرَ لَنَا
أَنَّهُ يُرِيدُ أَنْ يَسِيرَ إِلَيْنَا، فَقَدْ امْتَلَأَتْ صُدُورُنَا مِنْهُ. فَأَتَى صَاحِبِي
الْأَنْصَارِيُّ يَدُقُّ الْبَابَ، وَقَالَ: افْتَحْ، افْتَحْ. فَقُلْتُ: جَاءَ الْعَسَّانِيُّ؟ فَقَالَ:
أَشَدُّ مِنْ ذَلِكَ. اعْتَزَلَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ أَرْوَاجَهُ .
فَقُلْتُ رَغِمَ أَنْفُ حَفْصَةَ وَعَائِشَةَ .

ثُمَّ آخِذُ تَوْبِي فَأُخْرِجُ، حَتَّى جِئْتُ فَإِذَا رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ
وَسَلَّمَ فِي مَشْرَبَةٍ لَهُ يُرْتَقَى إِلَيْهَا بِعَجَلَةٍ، وَغُلَامٌ لِرَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى
اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ أَسْوَدُ عَلَى رَأْسِ الدَّرَجَةِ. فَقُلْتُ: هَذَا عُمَرُ . فَأَذِنَ
لِي . قَالَ عُمَرُ: فَقَصَصْتُ عَلَى رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ
هَذَا الْحَدِيثَ. فَلَمَّا بَلَغْتُ حَدِيثَ أُمِّ سَلَمَةَ تَبَسَّمَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى
اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، وَإِنَّهُ لَعَلَى حَصِيرٍ، مَا بَيْنَهُ وَبَيْنَهُ شَيْءٌ، وَتَحْتَ رَأْسِهِ
وِسَادَةٌ مِنْ أَدَمٍ حَشُوهَا لَيْفٌ. وَإِنَّ عِنْدَ رِجْلَيْهِ قَرِطًا مَصْبُورًا، وَعِنْدَ
رَأْسِهِ أَهْبَاءٌ مُعَلَّقَةٌ. فَرَأَيْتُ أَثَرَ الْحَصِيرِ فِي جَنْبِ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ
عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَبَكَيْتُ. فَقَالَ: «مَا يُبْكِيكَ؟» فَقُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ إِنَّ
كِسْرِي وَقَيْصَرَ فِيمَا هُمَا فِيهِ، وَأَنْتَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ. فَقَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ
صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «أَمَا تَرْضَى أَنْ تَكُونَ لَهُمَا الدُّنْيَا وَلَكَ
الْآخِرَةُ؟»

[3246-32]. (Dar al-Salam 3509) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated: ‘Affān narrated; Hammād ibn Salamah narrated; Yahyā ibn Sa‘īd reported to me; from ‘Ubayd ibn Hunayn; from Ibn ‘Abbās. He said:

‘I came back with ‘Umar. When we were at Marr al-Zahrān...’ He added the full length of the hadith in the same way as the narration by Sulaymān ibn Bilāl, except that he said: ‘What about the affair of the two women?’ He said: ‘Ḥafṣah and Umm Salamah’. He also added: ‘I went to the apartments and in everyone I heard crying’. He also added: ‘He swore to stay away from them for a month. When twenty-nine days had passed, he went down to them’.

[3247-33]. (Dar al-Salam 3510) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated (Abu Bakr’s text); both said: Sufyān ibn ‘Uyaynah narrated; from Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd; he heard ‘Ubayd ibn Ḥunayn (who is al-‘Abbās’ mawlā) say: ‘I heard Ibn ‘Abbās say: “I wanted to ask ‘Umar about the two women who supported each other during the Prophet’s lifetime. I could not find an opportunity for a whole year. Then I accompanied him to Makkah. When he was at Marr al-Zahrān, he wanted to relieve himself. He said: ‘Bring me a bottle of water’. I brought one for him. When he had relieved himself and came back, I poured the water for him and remembered. I said: ‘Amīr al-Mu’minīn, who were the two women?’ I had not finished my words when he said: “‘Ā’ishah and Ḥafṣah’.”

قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا سُفْيَانُ بْنُ عُيَيْنَةَ، عَنْ يَحْيَى بْنِ سَعِيدٍ، سَمِعَ عُبَيْدَ بْنَ
حُثَيْنٍ (مَوْلَى الْعَبَّاسِ) قَالَ: سَمِعْتُ ابْنَ عَبَّاسٍ يَقُولُ: كُنْتُ أُرِيدُ أَنْ
أَسْأَلَ عُمَرَ عَنِ الْمَرْأَتَيْنِ اللَّتَيْنِ تَظَاهَرَتَا عَلَى عَهْدِ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى
اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. فَلَبِثْتُ سَنَةً مَا أَجِدُ لَهُ مَوْضِعًا، حَتَّى صَحِبْتُهُ إِلَى
مَكَّةَ، فَلَمَّا كَانَ بِمَرِّ الظُّهْرَانِ ذَهَبَ يَقْضِي حَاجَتَهُ، فَقَالَ أَذْرِكْنِي
بِإِدَاوَةٍ مِنْ مَاءٍ. فَأَتَيْتُهُ بِهَا، فَلَمَّا قَضَى حَاجَتَهُ وَرَجَعَ، ذَهَبْتُ أَصْبُ
عَلَيْهِ. وَذَكَرْتُ فَقُلْتُ لَهُ: يَا أَمِيرَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ مَنِ الْمَرْأَتَانِ... فَمَا
قَضَيْتُ كَلَامِي حَتَّى قَالَ: عَائِشَةُ وَحَفْصَةُ.

‘Abbās. He said: ‘I was eager to ask ‘Umar about the two of the Prophet’s wives concerning whom God says: “Would that you two turn to God in repentance, for your hearts have swerved”. (66: 4) Then ‘Umar travelled for Hajj, and I went with him. At some point in the journey, he moved away, and I went after him with a bottle of water. After he relieved himself, he came back to me, and I poured the water over his hands and he performed wudu. I said: “Amīr al-Mu’minīn, who were the two of the Prophet’s wives concerning whom God says: ‘Would that you two turn to God in repentance, for your hearts have swerved?’ He said: “How strange of you, Ibn ‘Abbās! (Al-Zuhri said: By God, he disliked what he asked him about, but did not refuse to answer.) He said: “Ḥafṣah and ‘Ā’ishah”, then he related the hadith.

He said: “We, the Quraysh people, were masters of our women. When we settled in Madinah, we found its people controlled by their women. Our women started to learn from theirs. My home was with the clan of Umayyah ibn Zayd, at the higher end. One day I was upset with my wife, and she argued with me. I was unhappy that she should argue with me. She said: ‘Why should you dislike that I argue with you? By God, the Prophet’s wives argue with him. Any of them may not talk to him the whole day up till nightfall'. I left her and went to Ḥafṣah. I asked her: 'Do you argue with God's Messenger?' She said: 'Yes'. I said: 'Do any of you not talk to him the whole day up till nightfall?' She said: 'Yes'. I said: 'Whoever of you does this is certainly a loser. Is any one of you certain that God may not be angry with her for making His Messenger angry? Thus, she ends up in ruin. Never argue with God's Messenger and do not ask him for anything. Put whatever request you have to me. Do not be upset that your neighbour (meaning 'Ā'ishah) is prettier and dearer to God's Messenger than you'.

I had an Anṣārī neighbour. We took it in turns to go to God's Messenger (peace be upon him). He would go one day, and I would go the next day. He brought me any news of revelation or other things and I brought him the same. We were worried that the Ghassān were getting ready to attack us. One day, my friend went down [to God's Messenger] and returned in the evening. He knocked at my door and called me. I went out to him. He said: 'Something very serious has taken place'. I said: 'What is it? Has Ghassān come to attack?' He said: 'No, something far more serious. The Prophet (peace be upon him) has divorced his wives'. I said: 'Ḥafṣah is in utter loss. I thought that this might happen'.

When I prayed Fajr, I put on my clothes and went down. I entered Ḥafṣah's place and found her crying. I asked: 'Has God's Messenger divorced you all?' She said: 'I do not know. He is staying alone in the high room'. I went to a servant of his who was black and said: 'Request permission for 'Umar to enter'. He went in and came out. He said to me: 'I mentioned you to him, but he remained silent'. I went up to the platform [in the mosque] and sat down. I found there a number of people sitting and some of them were crying. I sat for a short while and felt the matter too hard. I went to the servant and said: 'Request permission for 'Umar to enter'. He went in then came out and said: 'I mentioned you, but he remained silent'. I turned and moved away, but the servant called out to me and said: 'You may enter; he has permitted you'. I went in and greeted God's Messenger (peace be upon him) as he was reclining on a sewn mat, which left a mark on his side. I said: 'Messenger of God, have you divorced your wives?' He looked up at me and said: 'No'. I said: 'God is Supreme!'

Had you seen us, Messenger of God? We, the Quraysh people, were masters of our women. When we migrated to Madinah, we found its people controlled by their women. Our women started to learn from theirs. One day I was upset with my wife, and she argued with me. I was unhappy that she should argue with me. She said: 'Why should you dislike that I argue with you? By God, the Prophet's wives argue with him. Any of them may not talk to him the whole day up till nightfall'. I said: 'Any of them who does that is an utter loser. Can any one of them be certain that God may not be angry with her for making His Messenger angry? Thus, she ends up in ruin'. God's Messenger smiled. I said: 'Messenger of God, I went into Ḥafṣah's and said to her: "Do not be upset that your neighbour is prettier and dearer to God's Messenger than you".' The Prophet smiled again. I said: 'May I carry on with conversation, Messenger of God'. He said: 'Yes'. I sat down. I looked around the room. By God, I saw nothing that one may look at apart from three hides. I said: 'Messenger of God, pray to God to give plenty of provisions to your community. He has given plenty to the Persians and the Byzantines, although they do not worship God'. He sat up and said: 'Are you in doubt, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb?

Those are peoples whose good things were given to them early in this present life'. I said: 'Please pray for my forgiveness, Messenger of God'. He had sworn not to enter their apartments for a whole month because he was very angry, and God, Mighty and Exalted, reproached him for that”.

أُرَاجِعَكَ؟ قَوَّالَهُ إِنَّ أَرْوَاجَ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ لَيُرَاجِعُنَّهُ،
وَتَهْجُرُهُ إِحْدَاهُنَّ الْيَوْمَ إِلَى اللَّيْلِ. فَأَنْطَلَقْتُ، فَدَخَلْتُ عَلَى حَفْصَةَ،
فَقُلْتُ: أَتُرَاجِعِينَ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ؟ فَقَالَتْ نَعَمْ.
فَقُلْتُ: أَتَهْجُرُهُ إِحْدَاكُنَّ الْيَوْمَ إِلَى اللَّيْلِ؟ قَالَتْ نَعَمْ . قُلْتُ: قَدْ حَابَ

لِغَضَبِ رَسُولِهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَإِذَا هِيَ قَدْ هَلَكَتْ؟ لَا تُرَاجِعِي

ثُمَّ أَتَيْتُ الْغُلَامَ فَقُلْتُ اسْتَأْذِنُ لِعُمْرٍ. فَدَخَلَ ثُمَّ خَرَجَ إِلَيَّ. فَقَالَ قَدْ
ذَكَرْتُكَ لَهُ فَصَمَتَ. فَقُلْتُ مُذِيرًا، فَإِذَا الْغُلَامُ يَدْعُونِي فَقَالَ: ادْخُلْ
فَقَدْ أَذِنَ لَكَ. فَدَخَلْتُ فَسَلَّمْتُ عَلَى رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ
وَسَلَّمَ، فَإِذَا هُوَ مُتَّكِئٌ عَلَى رَمْلٍ حَصِيرٍ، قَدْ أَثَرُ فِي جَنْبِهِ. فَقُلْتُ:
أَطَلَقْتَ يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ نِسَاءَكَ؟ فَرَفَعَ رَأْسَهُ إِلَيَّ وَقَالَ: «لا». فَقُلْتُ:
اللَّهُ أَكْبَرُ.

لَوْ رَأَيْتَنَا يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ، وَكُنَّا مَعْشَرَ قُرَيْشٍ قَوْمًا تَغْلِبُ النِّسَاءَ. فَلَمَّا
قَدِمْنَا الْمَدِينَةَ وَجَدْنَا قَوْمًا تَغْلِبُهُمْ نِسَاؤُهُمْ، فَطَفِقَ نِسَاؤُنَا يَتَعَلَّمْنَ
مِنْ نِسَائِهِمْ. فَتَعَصَّبْتُ عَلَى امْرَأَتِي يَوْمًا فَإِذَا هِيَ تُرَاجِعُنِي، فَأَنْكَرْتُ
أَنْ تُرَاجِعَنِي. فَقَالَتْ: مَا تُنْكِرُ أَنْ أُرَاجِعَكَ قَوْلَهُ إِنَّ أَرْوَاحَ النَّبِيِّ
صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ لَيُرَاجِعُنَّهُ وَتَهْجُرُهُ إِحْدَاهُنَّ الْيَوْمَ إِلَى اللَّيْلِ.
فَقُلْتُ: قَدْ خَابَ مَنْ فَعَلَ ذَلِكَ مِنْهُنَّ وَخَسِرَ. أَفَتَأْمَنُ إِحْدَاهُنَّ أَنْ
يَعُصَبَ اللَّهُ عَلَيْهَا لِعَصَبِ رَسُولِهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَإِذَا هِيَ قَدْ
هَلَكَتْ؟ فَتَبَسَّمَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. فَقُلْتُ يَا رَسُولَ
اللَّهِ، قَدْ دَخَلْتُ عَلَى حَفْصَةَ فَقُلْتُ: لَا يَغُرَّتْكَ أَنْ كَانَتْ جَارَتِكَ هِيَ
أَوْسَمُ مِنْكَ وَأَحَبُّ إِلَيَّ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ مِنْكَ.
فَتَبَسَّمَ أُخْرَى. فَقُلْتُ: أَسْتَأْنِسُ يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ؟ قَالَ: «نَعَمْ».
فَجَلَسْتُ فَرَفَعْتُ رَأْسِي فِي الْبَيْتِ، قَوْلَهُ مَا رَأَيْتُ فِيهِ شَيْئًا يَرُدُّ
الْبَصَرَ، إِلَّا أَهْبًا ثَلَاثَةً. فَقُلْتُ: ادْعُ اللَّهُ يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ أَنْ يُوسِّعَ عَلَى
أُمَّتِكَ، فَقَدْ وَسَّعَ عَلَى قَارِسٍ وَالرُّومِ، وَهُمْ لَا يَعْبُدُونَ اللَّهَ. فَاسْتَوَى
جَالِسًا ثُمَّ قَالَ: «أَفِي شَكٍّ أَنْتَ يَا ابْنَ الْخَطَّابِ؟ أُولَئِكَ قَوْمٌ عُجِّلَتْ

لَهُمْ طَيِّبَاتُهُمْ فِي الْحَيَاةِ الدُّنْيَا». فَقُلْتُ: اسْتَغْفِرْ لِي يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ.
وَكَانَ أَقْسَمَ أَنْ لَا يَدْخُلَ عَلَيْهِنَّ شَهْرًا، مِنْ شِدَّةِ مَوْجِدَتِهِ عَلَيْهِنَّ،
حَتَّى غَاتَبَهُ اللَّهُ عَزَّ وَجَلَّ.

[3249-35].ⁱⁱⁱ Al-Zuhri said: ‘Urwah reported to me; from ‘Ā’ishah. She said: ‘When twenty-nine nights had passed, God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) entered my home, starting with me. I said: “Messenger of God, you had sworn not to enter our homes for a month, and you have entered after twenty-nine [days]. I have counted them”. He said: “This month is twenty-nine days”. He then said: “‘Ā’ishah, I shall mention something to you, and you do not have to decide before you have consulted your parents”. He then read out to me the verses: “God, Mighty and Exalted, said: ‘Prophet! Say to your wives: “If you desire the life of this world and its charms, I shall provide for you and release you in a becoming manner. But if you desire God and His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter, know that God has readied great rewards for those of you who do good”.’ (33: 28-29)’ She said: ‘By God, he knew that my parents would have never told me to part with him. I said: “Would I consult my parents on such a matter? I choose God, His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter”.’

Ma'mar said: Ayyūb informed me that 'Ā'ishah said: 'Do not tell your wives that I have chosen you'. The Prophet said to her: 'God has sent me to deliver a message, not to make things hard'.

قَالَ الرَّهْرِيُّ فَأَخْبَرَنِي عُرْوَةُ، عَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ: لَمَّا مَضَى تِسْعٌ وَعِشْرُونَ لَيْلَةً، دَخَلَ عَلَى رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، بَدَأَ بِي. فَقُلْتُ: يَا رَسُولَ اللَّهِ، إِنَّكَ أَفْسَمْتَ أَنْ لَا تَدْخُلَ عَلَيْنَا شَهْرًا، وَإِنَّكَ دَخَلْتَ مِنْ تِسْعٍ وَعِشْرِينَ، أَعُدُّهُنَّ. فَقَالَ: «إِنَّ الشَّهْرَ تِسْعٌ وَعِشْرُونَ». ثُمَّ قَالَ: «يَا عَائِشَةُ إِنِّي ذَاكِرٌ لَكَ أَمْرًا فَلَا عَلَيْكَ أَنْ لَا تَعْجَلِي فِيهِ حَتَّى تَسْتَأْمِرِي أَبَوَيْكَ». ثُمَّ قَرَأَ عَلَى الْآيَةِ «يَا أَيُّهَا النَّبِيُّ قُلْ لَأَزْوَاجَكُمْ...» حَتَّى بَلَغَ «أَجْرًا عَظِيمًا». قَالَتْ عَائِشَةُ: قَدْ عَلِمَ وَاللَّهِ أَنَّ أَبَوَيَّ لَمْ يَكُونَا لِيَأْمُرَانِي بِفِرَاقِهِ. قَالَتْ فَقُلْتُ: أَوْفِي هَذَا أَسْتَأْمِرُ أَبَوَيَّ؟ فَإِنِّي أُرِيدُ اللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُ وَالِدَارَ الْآخِرَةَ. قَالَ مَعْمَرٌ: فَأَخْبَرَنِي أَيُّوبُ أَنَّ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ: لَا تُخْبِرُ نِسَاءَكَ أَنِّي اخْتَرْتُكَ. فَقَالَ لَهَا النَّبِيُّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «إِنَّ اللَّهَ أَرْسَلَنِي مُبَلِّغًا وَلَمْ يُرْسِلْنِي مُتَعَتِّتًا». قَالَ قَتَادَةُ: صَعَتْ قُلُوبُكُمَا: مَالَتْ قُلُوبُكُمَا.

Text Explanation

Note: As the hadiths in this chapter are very long, Imam al-Nawawī focuses on explaining the difficult words. This leaves some gaps in the narrative, which we will fill to provide a complete picture, God willing.

In the first hadith, No. 3244, 'Umar mentions that when he came into the mosque, people were pressing pebbles in their hands. There was no carpet in the Prophet's mosque. He and his Companions prayed on the bare ground. On this occasion people were greatly disturbed by the trouble in the Prophet's homes. They sat in the mosque, feeling unable to do anything. Worried as they were, they picked up some pebbles, held them tight then threw them back onto the floor. This is the full picture of what the Arabic verb yankit, which is used in the hadith, paints.

When 'Umar heard what people were saying, that God's Messenger had divorced his wives, he was greatly troubled, especially because one of the Prophet's wives, Ḥafṣah, was his daughter. He went straight to 'Ā'ishah to remonstrate with her. He makes it clear here that this was before the Prophet's wives were commanded to stay behind a screen. This means that it occurred before the Prophet's marriage to Zaynab, which took place in the fifth year of the Hijrah. 'Ā'ishah was not ready for such remonstration and she told 'Umar to speak to his own daughter.

After a repeated attempt, 'Umar gained admittance into the room where the Prophet was. He describes the storeroom the Prophet had, which could not even be described as a storeroom by any standard as there was very little therein. 'Umar continued to talk to the Prophet until he brought about some cheerfulness.

The hadiths give different reports of the event, with some adding more details and others speaking of 'Umar and the different status women had in Makkah and Madinah in pre-Islamic days. 'Umar also mentions the arrangement he had with his Anṣārī neighbour and how they took it in turns to go down and sit with the Prophet. They would then report to each other whatever they had learnt of new Qur'anic revelations, or any important events. At a time when the Prophet's Companions were worried about what they thought was an imminent attack by very powerful enemies, the Anṣārī reports to 'Umar that a more serious event had occurred, which was the Prophet's desertion of his wives. This shows the great care the Prophet's Companions had of his affairs and how worried they were about anything that might incur his displeasure.

'Umar mentions that in the morning, he put on his clothes and went to see the Prophet. This indicates the desirability of taking care of one's clothing and appearance when meeting elders and people of high status or position. This, however, should only be meant as a gesture of respect. 'Umar wept when he saw that the straw mat on which the Prophet reclined left its mark on his side. He contrasted the Prophet's poverty with the great refinements in which the rulers of great empires lived. However, the Prophet put that in the right perspective, telling him that what is in store for believers in the life to come is much greater and better.

In hadith No. 3246, the Prophet is said to have sworn 'to stay away from them for a month'. This is expressed in the hadith by the word ālā, which is used here in its linguistic sense: 'to swear'. This is different from the religious sense, which is given the term ilā, which refers to a husband swearing not to have a normal marital relationship with his wife, primarily sexual intercourse, without divorcing her. In the Qur'an, such a person is given a period of grace lasting four months, by the end of which he must either resume full marital relations with his wife or divorce her.

Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said that there is no disagreement among scholars concerning ilā’. It does not require any immediate divorce, indemnity or demand. However, scholars differ as regards its duration. Scholars of Hijaz and the majority of the Prophet’s Companions, tābi’in and their followers said that a husband is in a state of ilā’ if his oath is for more than four months. If his oath is for four months, he is not in ilā’. Kufi scholars said that anyone who swears this for four months or longer is in a state of ilā’. Ibn Abi Laylā, al-Ḥasan, Ibn Shibrimah and others differ, saying that if a husband swears not to have intercourse with his wife for one day or less, and then leaves her alone until four months have passed, he is in ilā’. On the other hand, Ibn ‘Umar said that anyone who specifies a time, even a very long period, is not in ilā’. Only the one who swears this forever is in ilā’. They are in agreement that the husband does not have to divorce his wife before the end of four months.

All scholars agree that if the husband has sexual intercourse with his wife before the end of the term, the state of ilā’ is over. If no such intercourse occurs and the four months are over, Kufi scholars say the divorce occurs. On the other hand, scholars of Hijaz and Egypt, as well as Hadith scholars who are versed in Fiqh and the Zāhirīs are all in agreement that the husband is ordered to either resume marital relations by having sexual intercourse or divorce his wife. If he refuses, the judge dissolves the marriage. This is the well-known view of the Mālikī School, which is also endorsed by al-Shāfi‘ī and his disciples. One report attributes to Mālik the same view as the Kufi scholars. Another view expressed by al-Shāfi‘ī is that the judge does not dissolve the marriage. Instead, the husband is forced to choose either to resume relations or divorce. If he still refuses, a discretionary punishment is enforced on him.

Kufi scholars differ on whether the divorce is revocable or not. Other scholars are in agreement that whether the husband or the judge enforces the divorce, it is revocable. Mālik, however, says that the reinstatement of the marriage is not complete until sexual intercourse has taken place during the wife's waiting period. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that this condition is not known to be expressed by any scholar other than Mālik. If three qurū', [i.e., periods of cleanliness from menstruation] have been completed during the four-month period of īlā', Jābir ibn Zayd says that the divorced woman need not observe a waiting period. The majority of scholars said that a waiting period is resumed.

Another point on which scholars hold different views is whether īlā' must be an oath made in anger and intended to have an adverse effect on the wife. The majority of scholars say that this is not a condition. The husband is in a state of īlā' in whatever condition he says his oath. Mālik and al-Awzā'ī said that if the oath is said in the interest of a child, until it is weaned, the husband is not deemed to be in a state of īlā'. 'Alī and Ibn 'Abbās said that the husband is not in īlā' unless he says his oath in anger.

In hadith No. 3247, the narrator, Ibn 'Abbās says: 'I wanted to ask 'Umar about the two women who supported each other during the Prophet's lifetime'. This is how it is stated in all manuscripts, 'during the Prophet's lifetime'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that Ibn 'Abbās uses this formula out of respect for the Prophet's wives. The point is that they supported each other against the Prophet, as God says in the Qur'an: 'But if you two support each other against him'. (66: 4) In all other versions, it is mentioned that they supported each other against the Prophet.

In hadith No. 3248, Ibn 'Abbās says that he poured the water for 'Umar to do his wudu. This confirms that it is permissible to ask someone's help when performing the ablution, as we have clarified earlier. In brief, we may say that if such help is sought for a reason, it is perfectly permissible. If there is no particular reason, it is contrary to the better course, but we may not say that it is discouraged or makrūh.

When 'Umar compared the Prophet's poverty to the splendid luxury which the emperors of Persia and Byzantium enjoyed and felt sorry for the Prophet, the Prophet told him: 'Those are peoples whose good things were given to them early in this present life'. Qadi 'Iyād said: 'This statement is cited by those who argue that poverty is preferable to wealth. According to their understanding, whatever luxury one enjoys in this life will be part of what is kept in store for him to enjoy in the life to come. If one does not enjoy such luxury in this life, one will definitely have it in the Hereafter. Others understand the Prophet's statement as meaning that all that the unbelievers will have is given to them in this present life, and they will have nothing in the future life, but God knows best.'

These hadiths show that it is permissible for a leader, a judge or one in a position of responsibility to remain secluded sometime in order to attend to some important matters. It is also clear that if a door keeper realizes that permission of entry is not granted by the mere silence of his chief, he should not admit anyone into his presence. In most cases, the Prophet did not have a door keeper. However, he had one on this occasion because he needed to be alone.

From the behaviour of the people mentioned in these hadiths, we learn several important points of good manners, including the following:

- It is a duty to seek permission to enter another person's place, even if one knows that that person is alone because he may be in a state which he does not like to be seen by others.
- If permission of entry is not given, there is no harm in repeating one's request.
- Everyone needs to request permission to enter, even those who are in high position.
- A man may discipline his son or daughter, even when they are an adult and when the daughter is a married woman. We note that Abu Bakr and 'Umar disciplined their daughters who were wives of the Prophet.
- The Prophet's exemplary life that sought nothing of the comforts of this present life.
- It is permissible to live in an upper floor and to have a storeroom.
- The Prophet's Companions were very keen to seek knowledge and help each other in learning what takes place in their absence.
- Information gleaned by one person is acceptable. 'Umar used to receive such information from his Anṣārī neighbour and the Anṣārī used to receive it from 'Umar. Moreover, knowledge is sought from the one who has it, even though the recipient is of a higher standard than the giver, as ‘Umar used to take from the Anṣārī.

- If one sees a friend upset and depressed and wishes to dispel his worry and relieve his problem, saying to him what he hopes will bring about a desired change in mood, one should seek permission to do so, as ‘Umar did when he said to the Prophet: ‘May I carry on with conversation’. Unless the recipient is willing, light conversation might be counterproductive. He might even embarrass the person he wants to please. This is an important point to bear in mind.
- It is commendable to show respect to one’s elders and serve them, as Ibn ‘Abbās did with ‘Umar.
- It is commendable to choose fine words when speaking to people. When ‘Umar spoke to his daughter, he referred to ‘Ā’ishah as her ‘neighbour’. He did not say ‘your ḍurrah or rival’ because ḍurrah is derived from a root which means ‘causing harm’.
- It is permissible to knock on one’s neighbour’s door for permission to enter.
- It is acceptable to feel acutely worried when a situation is very serious.
- It is permissible to look around one’s friend’s home if one knows that the friend does not dislike this. However, earlier scholars expressed a dislike of curiosity, but this is understood to apply when one knows that the owner dislikes such intrusion.
- A husband may stay away from his wife, and sleep in a different home if there is a good enough reason to justify this.

- It is permissible to say about someone ‘confound him’, as ‘Umar said ‘confound Ḥaḥṣah’. This is stated by ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz and others, while Mālik expressed dislike.
- The hadith highlights ‘Āishah’s merit as the Prophet started with her in offering his wives the choice and began his round with her after the month was over.

The hadiths include other points, but God knows best.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3247 includes: ‘Sufyān ibn ‘Uyaynah narrated; from Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd; he heard ‘Ubayd ibn Ḥunayn (who is al-‘Abbās’ mawlā) say’. This is how it occurs in all copies with ‘Ubayd described as al-‘Abbās’ mawlā. They say that this is what has been stated by Sufyān ibn ‘Uyaynah. Al-Bukhari said that what Sufyān says is wrong. Mālik said he was the mawlā of the family of Zayd ibn al-Khaṭṭāb. On the other hand, Muhammad ibn Ja‘far ibn Abi Kathīr said that he was the mawlā of Banī Zurayq. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ and others said that the correct view according to Hadith masters is the view expressed by Mālik.

NO MAINTENANCE DUE TO A THRICE-DIVORCED WIFE

[3250-36]. (Dar al-Salam 3512) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated:ⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik; from ‘Abdullāh ibn Yazīd, al-Aswad ibn Sufyān’s mawlā; from Abu Salamah ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān; from Fāṭimah bint Qays; that ‘Abu ‘Amr ibn Ṣāliḥ divorced her irrevocably when he was absent. His deputy sent her some barley, but she disliked this. He said to her: “By God, we owe you nothing”. She went to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and mentioned it to him. He said: “He owes you no maintenance”. The Prophet ordered her to observe her waiting period in Umm Sharīk’s home. He then said: “This is a woman who is visited by my companions. Observe your waiting period at Ibn Umm Maktūm, for he is a blind man, and you can take off your [top] clothes [in his home]. When you have finished your waiting period, let me know”. She said: “When I finished my waiting period, I told him that Mu‘āwiyah ibn Abi Sufyān and Abu Jahm had proposed to marry me”. God’s Messenger said: “As for Abu Jahm, he always carries his stick on his shoulder. And as for Mu‘āwiyah, he is poor, having no money. Marry Usāmah ibn Zayd”. I disliked him. He again said: “Marry Usāmah”. I married him, and God made it a good marriage and I was happy’.

وَاعْتَبَطْتُ بِهِ.

[3251-37]. (Dar al-Salam 3513) Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd narrated: ‘Abd al-‘Azīz (meaning Ibn Abi Ḥāzim) narrated. Qutaybah also said: Ya‘qūb (meaning Ibn ‘Abd al-Rahmān al-Qāriy) narrated; both from Abu Hāzim; from Abu Salamah; from Fāṭimah bint Qays that ‘Her husband divorced her during the Prophet’s lifetime. He gave her paltry maintenance. When she saw this, she said: “By God, I shall tell God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). If I am entitled maintenance, I shall take what is suitable for me. If I am not entitled to it, I shall take nothing from him. I mentioned it to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and he said: ‘You are entitled to neither maintenance nor lodging’.”’

حَدَّثَنَا قُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ الْعَزِيزِ، (يَعْنِي ابْنَ أَبِي حَازِمٍ). وَقَالَ قُتَيْبَةُ أَيُّضًا: حَدَّثَنَا يَعْقُوبُ (يَعْنِي ابْنَ عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ الْقَارِيَّ)، كِلَاهُمَا عَنْ أَبِي حَازِمٍ، عَنْ أَبِي سَلَمَةَ، عَنْ قَاطِمَةَ بِنْتِ قَيْسٍ، أَنَّهُ طَلَّقَهَا رَوْجَهَا فِي عَهْدِ النَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. وَكَانَ أَنْفَقَ عَلَيْهَا تَفَقَّةً دُونِ. فَلَمَّا رَأَتْ ذَلِكَ قَالَتْ: وَاللَّهِ لَأُعْلِمَنَّ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَإِذَا كَانَ لِي تَفَقَّةٌ أَخَذْتُ الَّذِي يُصْلِحُنِي، وَإِنْ لَمْ تَكُنْ لِي تَفَقَّةٌ لَمْ أَخْذُ مِنْهُ شَيْئًا. قَالَتْ فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ لِرَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَقَالَ: «لَا تَفَقَّةَ لَكَ وَلَا سُكْنَى».

[3252-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3514) Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd narrated: Layth narrated; from ‘Imrān ibn Abi Anas; from Abu Salamah; that he said: ‘I asked Fāṭimah bint Qays and she told me that her Makhzūmī husband divorced her and refused to give her maintenance. She went to God's Messenger and informed him. The Prophet said to her: "You are not entitled to maintenance. Move out and go to Ibn Umm Maktūm and stay with him. He is a blind man, and you can take off your [top] clothes there".'

حَدَّثَنَا قُتَيْبَةُ بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، حَدَّثَنَا لَيْثٌ، عَنْ عِمْرَانَ بْنِ أَبِي أَنَسٍ، عَنْ أَبِي سَلَمَةَ أَنَّهُ قَالَ: سَأَلْتُ فَاطِمَةَ بِنْتَ قَيْسٍ فَأَخْبَرْتَنِي أَنَّ زَوْجَهَا الْمَخْزُومِيَّ طَلَّقَهَا، فَأَبَى أَنْ يُنْفِقَ عَلَيْهَا. فَجَاءَتْ إِلَى رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَأَخْبَرَتْهُ، فَقَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: «لَا تَفْقَةَ لَكَ. فَاتَّقِلِي قَاذِهِي إِلَى ابْنِ أُمِّ مَكْتُومٍ، فَكُونِي عِنْدَهُ. فَإِنَّهُ رَجُلٌ أَعْمَى تَضَعِينَ ثِيَابَكَ عِنْدَهُ».

[3253-38]. (Dar al-Salam 3515) Muhammad ibn Rāfi' narrated to me: Ḥusayn ibn Muhammad narrated; Shaybān narrated; from Yaḥyā (who is Ibn Abi Kathīr); Abu Salamah reported to me; that 'Fāṭimah bint Qays, al-Ḍaḥḥāk ibn Qays' sister told him that Abu Ḥafṣ ibn al-Mughīrah al-Makhzūmī divorced her three times, then travelled to Yemen. His people told her: "We do not owe you any maintenance". Khālīd ibn al-Walīd and a group went to God's Messenger (peace be upon him) in Maymūnah's apartment. They said: "Abu Ḥafṣ divorced his wife three times. Is she owed any maintenance?" God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “She is not entitled to maintenance, but she must observe a waiting period”. He sent her a message saying: “Do not precipitate me regarding yourself”. He ordered her to move to Umm Sharīk’s home. He then sent her a message saying: “Umm Sharīk is visited by the early Muhājirīn. Stay in Ibn Umm Maktūm, the blind man’s [home]. He would not see you when you take off your headdress”. She went to him. When her waiting period was over, God’s Messenger married her to Usāmah ibn Zayd ibn Hārithah’.

[3257-41]. (Dar al-Salam 3518) Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm and ‘Abd ibn Ḥumayd narrated (‘Abd’s text):ⁱⁱⁱ both said: ‘Abd al-Razzāq reported; Ma‘mar reported; from al-Zuhrī; from ‘Ubaydullāh ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Utbah; that ‘Abu ‘Amr ibn Ḥafṣ ibn al-Mughīrah joined ‘Alī ibn Abi Ṭālib on his mission to Yemen. He sent his wife Fāṭimah bint Qays a divorce, which was the last remaining of her three divorces. Al-Ḥārith ibn Hishām and ‘Ayyāsh ibn Abi Rabī‘ah sent her some maintenance, and said: “By God, you are not entitled to any maintenance unless you are pregnant”. She went to the Prophet and told him what they said. The Prophet said to her:

“You are not entitled to maintenance”. She requested his permission to move out. He agreed. She said: “Where to, Messenger of God?” He said: “To Ibn Umm Maktūm”, who was a blind man. She could take off her clothes in his home while he could not see her. When her waiting period was over, the Prophet married her to Usāmah ibn Zayd.

Marwān sent Qabīṣah ibn Dhu’ayb to her asking her about the hadith, and she narrated it to him. Marwān said: “We only heard this from one woman. We shall continue to do what we are certain of, that which we found our people doing”. When Fāṭimah heard what Marwān said, she said: “The Qur’an is the arbiter between you and me. God, Mighty and Exalted, said: ‘Do not drive them out of their homes, nor shall they themselves leave, unless they commit a flagrant indecency’. (65: 1) This applies to the one whose marriage can be re-instated. What can happen after the third? How can you say she is not entitled to maintenance if she is not pregnant? On what basis do you require her to stay?””

He said: ‘I heard Fāṭimah bint Qays say: “My husband, Abu ‘Amr ibn Ḥafṣ ibn al-Mughīrah sent me ‘Ayyāsh ibn Abi Rabī‘ah with a message that I am divorced, and he sent with him five ṣā’s of dates and five ṣā’s of barley. I said: ‘Is that all my maintenance and I am not supposed to stay my waiting period in your home?’ He said: ‘No’. I put on my clothes and went to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). He asked: ‘How many times has he divorced you?’ I said: ‘Three’. He said: ‘He is right. You are not entitled to maintenance. Stay your waiting period in the home of your cousin, Ibn Umm Maktūm. He is a blind man, and you can take off your garment in his place. When your waiting period is over, let me know’. A number of men proposed to me, including Mu‘āwiyah and Abu al-Jahm. The Prophet said: ‘Mu‘āwiyah is a poor man, with little money and Abu al-Jahm is hard on women (or he hits women, or something like this), but you better have Usāmah ibn Zayd’.”’

Text Explanation

This chapter focuses on the case of Fāṭimah bint Qays in its various versions. She mentions that Abu ‘Amr ibn Ḥafṣ divorced her. This is how the majority of scholars report his name. Yet he is mentioned as Abu Ḥafṣ ibn ‘Amr, or Abu Ḥafṣ ibn al-Mughīrah. They differ concerning his name with the majority saying it was ‘Abd al-Ḥamīd, while al-Nasā’ī said his name was Ahmad, and other scholars have said that his name was the same as his appellation, Abu ‘Amr.

Hadith masters agree that he divorced her, and reliable narrators agree, in their different wording, that he divorced her thrice, or irrevocably or the last of the three divorces. A different hadith gives the impression that she was still married to him when he died, but scholars say that this report is not clear, or mistaken. We shall clarify the matter, God willing. The different versions express her divorce differently, saying: three times, irrevocably, the last of three divorces, her remaining divorce, or without mentioning a number. To reconcile these versions, we say that he had earlier divorced her twice and this was the last of three divorces. Thus, the reports that he divorced her mentioning no number, or once, or the third divorce give a clear meaning. He divorced her irrevocably means that this time her divorce became irrevocable. The report that he divorced her three times means that this was the last of three divorces.

In hadith No. 3250, the Prophet tells Fāṭimah that she was not entitled to maintenance, and in hadith No. 3251 he tells her that she receives neither maintenance nor lodging. Scholars do, however, differ about whether or not a woman who is irrevocably divorced and is not pregnant is entitled to lodging and maintenance. ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, Abu Ḥanīfah and others said that she is entitled to both lodging in her husband’s home and maintenance. Ibn ‘Abbās and Ahmad said she is not entitled to either. Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and others said that she is entitled to lodging, but not maintenance. Those who said that she is entitled to both support their argument citing the Qur’anic verse: ‘Let them dwell wherever you dwell, according to your means’. (65: 6) This is a clear order that lodging and maintenance is due because she is still unmarriageable until her waiting period is over. In hadith No. 3262 ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb said: ‘We shall not abandon God’s Book and the Prophet’s Sunnah on the basis of what one woman says, when we do not know whether she has kept [the case] in memory or forgotten it’.

Other scholars have said what is in God's Book is the entitlement for lodging. Al-Dāraqutnī said that the words 'and the Prophet's Sunnah' is an uncertain addition, and it is not mentioned by a number of reliable narrators. Scholars who say that a thrice-divorced woman is entitled neither to lodging nor maintenance base their view on the hadith of Fāṭimah bint Qays. The ones who say that she is entitled to lodging but not to maintenance cite as their evidence the Qur'anic order: 'Let them dwell wherever you dwell, according to your means'. (65: 6) Their argument for the non-entitlement of maintenance is based on the case of Fāṭimah bint Qays and the apparent meaning of the Qur'anic order: 'If they are with child, maintain them until they have delivered their burden'. (65: 6) This is understood to mean that if they are not pregnant, no maintenance is due to them. These scholars respond to the reason for non-entitlement to maintenance stated in Fāṭimah's hadith quoting Sa'īd ibn al-Musayyib and others. They say that she was an outspoken woman and that she spoke harshly to her in-laws. Therefore, the Prophet ordered her to move to Ibn Umm Maktūm's home. It is also said that the reason for leaving was that she felt apprehensive in that home, as mentioned in hadith No. 3269, where she said: 'I fear that my privacy be invaded'. Yet nothing of these interpretations is acceptable as reason for non-entitlement to maintenance, but God knows best.

A pregnant woman who is irrevocably divorced has the right to lodging and maintenance. Likewise, the one whose divorce is revocable has the right to both, according to the unanimous view. It is unanimously agreed upon that a widow is not entitled to maintenance. However, the more correct view of our school is that lodging is her right. If she is pregnant, she is also not entitled to maintenance. Some of our scholars say that she is entitled to it, but this is wrong, and God knows best.

In the first hadith, No. 3250, Fāṭimah mentions that her husband divorced her irrevocably in his absence and that his deputy sent her some barley, which she disliked. This shows that divorce can be done when the man is away from his wife, and that it is permissible to give what is due to others through a deputy. Scholars are unanimous that both these rulings are valid.

In the same hadith, the Prophet orders Fāṭimah to spend her waiting period in Umm Sharīk's home, then he said to her that Umm Sharīk was visited by his Companions. He therefore moved her to Ibn Umm Maktūm's home. Scholars said that Umm Sharīk belonged to the 'Āmir clan of the Quraysh tribe. Yet it is said that she was an Anṣārī woman. Towards the end of his book, Muslim mentions that she was from the Anṣār and her name was Ghuzayyah. It is also said that her name was Ghuzaylah. She was the daughter of Dāwūd ibn 'Awf, ibn 'Amr ibn 'Āmir ibn Rawāḥah ibn Ḥujayr ibn 'Abd ibn Mu'ayṣ ibn 'Āmir ibn Lu'ay ibn Ghālib. Yet her ancestry is given differently. She was also said to have been the woman who gifted herself to the Prophet, but it is also said that the woman who did that was someone else.

This hadith means that some of the Prophet's Companions frequently visited Umm Sharīk, as she was a devout woman. The Prophet felt that Fāṭimah might find staying with her during her waiting period troublesome as she would always need to be vigilant so that visitors did not see her and she did not see them. Therefore, he ordered her to stay with Ibn Umm Maktūm, as he could not see her, and he was not visited by as many people as Umm Sharīk. Some scholars argue that this hadith provides evidence that it is permissible for a woman to look at a man who is a stranger to her. This is a weak view. The correct one which is endorsed by the majority of scholars and most of the Prophet's Companions is that looking at a stranger of the opposite sex is forbidden for both men and women, as God says: 'Tell believing men to lower their gaze...' (24: 30), 'And tell believing women to lower their gaze...' (24: 31). Moreover, temptation occurs to both. Just like a man may be tempted by a woman, she may be tempted by him. It is further indicated from the Sunnah by the hadith narrated by Nabhān, Umm Salamah's mawlā, quoting her that she and Maymūnah were with the Prophet when Ibn Umm Maktūm entered. The Prophet ordered them to go behind the screen. They said that he was blind and could not see them. The Prophet said to them: 'Are you two also blind?' This hadith is related by Abu Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī and graded 'good'. Those who discount it have no valid argument.^{xi} The hadiths mentioning Fāṭimah bint Qays and her staying at Ibn Umm Maktūm's home do not include permission for her to look at him. What these hadiths mean is that she was safe there from being seen by others. Given she was included in the order to lower her gaze, she could guard against looking, without difficulty, which was the opposite of what would have been encountered at Umm Sharīk's home.

The Prophet tells Fāṭimah to let him know when her waiting period is over. This means that it is permissible to give a hint of a proposal to an irrevocably divorced woman. This is the correct view of our school. The Prophet also tells her that 'Abu al-Jahm always carries his stick on his shoulder'. This is interpreted in two well-known ways: the first is that he is a frequent traveller, and the other is that he often hits women. This second interpretation is more correct, in view of hadith No. 3263 in which the Prophet says that Abu Jahm is 'one who hits women'. This shows that it is permissible to mention a person's negative qualities when one is consulted and asked for advice. This does not constitute forbidden backbiting, but it is a fulfilment of one's duty of giving honest advice. Scholars say that backbiting is permissible in six situations, one of which is when advice is requested. I mentioned all these, together with the evidence supporting each in my books al-Adhkār and Riyāḍ al-Ṣaliḥīn.

It should be noted that Abu al-Jahm mentioned in these hadiths is the same as the one mentioned in the hadith speaking of the Prophet's Anbijānī garment. He is different from Abu al-Juhaym who is mentioned in the hadith concerning dry ablution, i.e., tayammum, and the one concerning going across the path in front of a praying person. This person, Abu al-Jahm, was a son of Ḥudhayfah and belonged to the 'Adiy clan of the Quraysh. Qadi 'Iyād stated that all narrators mention him without giving his affiliation, except Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā al-Andalūsī, one of the narrators of Mālik's al-Muwatṭa', naming him Abu Jahm ibn Hishām, but this is wrong as none of the Prophet's Companions were named Abu Jahm ibn Hishām. None of the narrators of al-Muwatṭa' and other scholars have endorsed what Yaḥyā said.

It is permissible to express one's meaning figuratively, as this is clear in hadith No. 3250 when the Prophet said of Abu Jahm that 'he always carries his stick on his shoulder' and says of Mu'āwiyah that he is poor and has no money. Yet it was known that Mu'āwiyah had something even though it was very little. Abu al-Jahm, on the other hand, did not carry his stick when he went to sleep or when he ate, and in similar situations. However, since Abu al-Jahm often carried his stick and Mu'āwiyah had very little, it was permissible to describe them in these terms. Our scholars have stated this, and I explained it at the end of my book al-Adhkār.

In the same hadith, Fāṭimah says: 'When I finished my waiting period, I told him that Mu'āwiyah ibn Abi Sufyān and Abu Jahm had proposed to marry me'. This is clear that the one who proposed to her was Mu'āwiyah ibn Abi Sufyān ibn Ḥarb, and it is right. Some said that it was a different person named Mu'āwiyah, but this is clearly mistaken, and I am mentioning this for clarification.

The Prophet gives Fāṭimah his advice: "Marry Usāmah ibn Zayd". I disliked him. He again said: "Marry Usāmah". I married him, and God made it a good marriage and I was happy'. The Prophet ordered her to marry Usāmah because he was well aware of his firm faith, fine merits, good manners and superior qualities. She initially disliked the idea of marrying him because he was a mawlā and was of very dark complexion. The Prophet repeated his advice, knowing it was better for her to marry such a man. She acted on the Prophet's advice and later commented that it was a fine marriage and she was happy. The Prophet

In hadith No. 3253 the Prophet sends a message to Fāṭimah saying: 'Do not precipitate me regarding yourself'. This is a hint about a future marriage proposal. This is perfectly permissible if the woman is observing a waiting period after the death of her husband and also if she is thrice divorced. A flimsy view suggests that it is permissible in the waiting period after a revocable divorce, but the correct view is the first.

In hadith No. 3257, the Prophet agrees to Fāṭimah's request and gives her permission to move out. This is understood to mean that the permission was given for a valid reason, such as her dispute with her in-laws, or her fear of invasion of privacy, etc. We have already mentioned this. If there is no such need, it is not permissible for a woman to move, or to be moved out during her waiting period. God says in the Qur'an: 'Do not drive them out of their homes, nor shall they themselves leave, unless they commit a flagrant indecency'. (65: 1) Ibn 'Abbās and 'Ā'ishah said: 'a flagrant indecency in this context means being rebellious and ill-mannered'. It is also said that it means being verbally abusive of her in-laws. Some suggested that it means committing adultery and this requires that the woman is taken out to enforce the mandatory punishment on her and bringing her back home.

In hadith No. 3259, al-Sha'bī, a prominent scholar of the tābi'īn generation, says: 'We visited Fāṭimah bint Qays and she presented to us Ibn Ṭāb dates and gave us the Sult drink'. Ibn Ṭāb is the name of a type of dates. We mentioned earlier that the dates of Madinah are of 120 types. Sult is a type of grain which is similar to wheat and barley. Hence our scholars have three different views on how to treat it: (1) it is a grain, different from both wheat and barley; (2) it is wheat; and (3) it is barley. This difference of views is useful because it opens the way to barter it for the same measure of either wheat or barley. On the other hand, it can be added to either or both to complete the threshold of zakat. This hadith shows that it is desirable to offer something to one's guest, and that it is desirable when women are visited by good men, but God knows best.

The hadith continues: 'I asked her about a thrice-divorced woman: "where does she spend her waiting period? She said: "My husband divorced me three times and the Prophet (peace be upon him) permitted me to stay with my people during my waiting period".' This is understood to mean that the Prophet permitted her to move out because of a valid reason, as we have already explained.

In hadith No. 3261 the Prophet tells Fāṭimah to move in with her cousin, 'Amr ibn Umm Maktūm. This is how it occurs in this instance, and also later in Muslim's Ṣaḥīḥ, where the following is added: 'a man from Bani Fihr, the branch to which she herself belonged'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'What is better known is different. They are not from the same branch, as she was from the branch of Muḥārib ibn Fihr and he belonged to the branch of 'Āmir ibn Lu'ay'. He was her cousin in a manner of speech, as they meet in Fihr, a distant ancestor of both. Different names are given to Ibn Umm Maktūm, with 'Amr and 'Abdullāh being better known, but others are also suggested.

In hadith No. 3265, Fāṭimah says about her subsequent marriage: 'I married him, and God honoured me with Abu Zayd. God favoured me with Abu Zayd'. This is how the name occurs in some manuscripts, Abu Zayd, as an appellation. In other manuscripts, it is Ibn Zayd in both places. Qadi 'Iyāḍ claims that the latter is reported by a larger number of narrators. [The two words are very similar in their written forms. Abu means 'father of' and Ibn means 'son of'.] My own view is that both are correct. The man she married was Usāmah ibn Zayd ibn Ḥārithah, and his appellation was Abu Zayd, but he was also called Abu Muhammad.

As stated in these hadiths, the case of Fāṭimah bint Qays gives rise to many very interesting points:

1. Divorce by an absent man is valid.
2. Appointing a deputy to receive and give what is due is permissible.
3. No maintenance is due in irrevocable divorce, and some scholars say neither maintenance nor lodging.
4. It is perfectly appropriate to listen to the speech of a stranger, man or woman, when they are seeking a fatwa, or for some other purpose.
5. It is permissible for a woman observing a waiting period to go out for some need.
6. It is desirable for men to visit devout women, provided that no forbidden seclusion between one man and one woman occurs. The Prophet said in reference to Umm Sharīk: 'My Companions visit her'.
7. It is permissible to give a woman observing a waiting period after an irrevocable divorce a hint of a future marriage proposal.

8. When a proposal of marriage has not yet been accepted it is permissible that another man makes a different proposal. Fāṭimah told the Prophet that Mu'āwiyah, Abu al-Jahm and others had proposed marriage to her.
9. Mentioning an absent person's negative qualities which he would not like being referenced is permissible when it is done as part of advice. It is not considered backbiting in this case.
10. It is permissible to express one's meaning figuratively. The Prophet said of one person, 'he always carries his stick on his shoulder', and of another, 'he has no money'.
11. It is desirable to inform a person of what is better for him or her, even if they dislike it, and to repeat this if needed. Fāṭimah said that the Prophet said to her: 'Marry Usāmah, but I disliked him. He said again: "Marry Usāmah", and I married him'.
12. It is important to act on the advice of devout and sagacious people. The outcome is bound to be good.
13. It is permissible to marry someone of a lower social status if the wife and her guardian accept him. Fāṭimah belonged to the Quraysh while Usāmah was a mawlā.
14. One should be keen to associate oneself with devout and virtuous people, even if they are of lower social status.
15. It is permissible for one scholar to object to the fatwa of another scholar if the latter's fatwa is contrary to a text or generalizes what is of limited significance.

‘Ā’ishah objected to Fāṭimah because she generalized the view that a divorcee is not entitled to lodging if her divorce is irrevocable. Fāṭimah moved out for a valid reason, such as her fear of invaded privacy, or her ill-mannered speaking, or some other reason.

16. It is commendable to be hospitable to one’s guests, offering some food and drink, whether they are men or women.

And God knows best.

GOING OUT DURING THE WAITING PERIOD

[3272-55]. (Dar al-Salam 3535) Muhammad ibn Hātim ibn Maymūn narrated to me:¹ Yahyā ibn Saʿīd narrated; from Ibn Jurayj [H]. Also, Muhammad ibn Rāfiʿ narrated; ʿAbd al-Razzāq narrated; Ibn Jurayj reported [H]. Hārūn ibn ʿAbdullāh narrated to me (his text); Hajjāj ibn Muhammad narrated; he said: Ibn Jurayj said: Abu al-Zubayr reported to me; that he heard Jābir ibn ʿAbdullāh say: ‘My maternal aunt was divorced. She wanted to gather [the fruit of] her date trees. A man rebuked her for wanting to go out. She went to the Prophet (peace be upon him) and he said: “Yes, you go and gather your fruit. You may give some charity or do some kindness”.’

Text Explanation

This hadith provides evidence that an irrevocably divorced woman may go out during her waiting period to attend to some need. The view of Mālik, al-Thawrī, al-Layth, al-Shāfiʿī, Ahmad and others is that she may go out during the day if she needs to. According to all these, a widow in her waiting period may also go out. Abu Ḥanīfah shares their view with regard to a widow, but in the case of an irrevocably divorced woman he said that she may not go out, neither during the day nor during the night.

The hadith shows that it is encouraged to give some charity out of the gathered dates, and to give gifts. It is also desirable to give the owner a hint to do so and to remind people of doing what is good and charitable, but God knows best.

THE WAITING PERIOD ENDS AT CHILDBIRTH

[3273-56]. (Dar al-Salam 3536) Abu al-Ṭāhir and Ḥarmalah ibn Yaḥyā narrated to me (in closely similar wording):ⁱ Ibn Wahb (Ḥarmalah said: ‘narrated’ and Abu al-Ṭāhir said: ‘reported’); Yūnus ibn Yazīd narrated to me; from Ibn Shihāb; ‘Ubaydullāh ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Utbah ibn Mas‘ūd narrated to me; that ‘His father wrote to ‘Umar ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Arqam al-Zuhri telling him to visit Subay‘ah bint al-Ḥārith al-Aslamiyyah and ask her about her hadith and what God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) told her when she requested his ruling. ‘Umar ibn ‘Abdullāh wrote back to ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Utbah telling him that Subay‘ah informed him that she was married to Sa‘d ibn Khawlah who belonged to [the clan of] Banī ‘Āmir ibn Lu‘ay. He took part in the Battle of Badr and he died during the Farewell Pilgrimage when she was pregnant. It was only a short while after his death that she gave birth. When she finished her period of confinement, she adorned herself for possible proposals. Abu al-Sanābil ibn Ba‘kak (a man from the ‘Abd al-Dār clan) visited her. He said: “How come that I see you adorned! Perhaps you are hoping to get married. By God, you shall not be married before you have completed four months and ten days”.

Subay‘ah said: “When he said this to me, I put on my clothes in the evening and went to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and asked him about this. He told me that I had finished my waiting period when I gave birth. He told me to get married if I wished”.

Ibn Shihāb said: ‘In my view, there is no harm if a woman gets married once she has given birth, even though she is still bleeding. However, her new husband must not consummate the marriage until she has completely cleansed herself [from postnatal discharge]’.

[3274-57]. (Dar al-Salam 3537-3538) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā al-‘Anazī narrated:ⁱⁱ ‘Abd al-Wahhāb narrated; he said: I heard Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd; Sulaymān ibn Yasār reported to me; that ‘Abu Salamah ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān and Ibn ‘Abbās met at Abu Hurayrah’s. They were discussing the case of a woman who gives birth a few days after her husband’s death. ‘Ibn ‘Abbās said: “Her waiting period lasts until the end of the later date”. Abu Salamah said: “Her waiting period is over”. They were in dispute over the question. Abu Hurayrah said: “I am with my nephew (meaning Abu Salamah)”. They sent Kurayb, Ibn ‘Abbās’ mawlā*, to Umm Salamah to ask her about this. He returned and told them that Umm Salamah said that Subay‘ah al-Aslamiyyah gave birth a few nights after her husband’s death. She mentioned this to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and he told her that she could get married’.

Text Explanation

The three hadiths in this chapter mention the case of Subay'ah who gave birth a few days after her husband's death and the Prophet said that her waiting period was over and that she could remarry. The great majority of early and later scholars have upheld this and said that the waiting period of a pregnant woman is the birth of her child, even if this happens a few moments after her husband's death, and before his body is prepared for burial. She can get married straightaway. This view is shared by Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, Ahmad and all scholars, with the exception of one report attributing to 'Alī, Ibn 'Abbās and Suḥnūn of the Mālikī School a statement that her waiting period lasts until the end of the farthest of the two terms: four months and ten days, or the birth of her child. Another report mentions that al-Sha'bī, al-Ḥasan, Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī and Ḥammād said that her marriage is not valid until she has finished her postnatal discharge and cleansed herself.

The view of the majority of scholars is based on the hadith relating Subay'ah's case. They consider it as a qualification and limitation of the verse that says: 'Those of you who die leaving wives behind, their wives shall wait, by themselves, for four months and ten days'. (2: 234) It also explains that the Qur'anic statement, 'As for those who are with child, their waiting term shall end when they deliver their burden', (65: 4) applies to any woman in a waiting period, whether a divorcee or a widow, and it should be understood in its general meaning.

Scholars sharing the majority view said that the general import of these two verses is in conflict. When two general statements are in conflict, we look for some evidence that limits one of them. In this case, we have the hadith mentioning Subay'ah's case, which provides such limitation as it makes the term 'four months and ten days' applicable to a woman who is not pregnant.

The evidence countering the view of al-Sha'bī and others is the hadith related by Muslim in this chapter, in which Subay'ah says that the Prophet (peace be upon him) 'told me that I had finished my waiting period when I gave birth'. This is a clear statement that the waiting period is over once the child is born. If they cite that this took place 'when she finished her period of confinement', meaning that she was cleansed, the answer is that this informs us of the time when she put her question. As such, it gives them no argument. The clear evidence is the Prophet's words that her waiting period ended when she gave birth. The Prophet did not attach this to the cleansing after delivery.

Scholars, including those of our school, said that the waiting period is over once delivery has taken place, whether the woman delivers one child or more, completely or incompletely formed, or even a morsel of flesh, if it has some human form, whether it is a subtle form known to women only or clear and recognizable by anyone. The evidence in support of this is the fact that Subay'ah's case was general, and no question was asked about the shape or form of what she delivered.

The hadith mentions that it was Abu al-Sanābil who objected to Subay‘ah adorning herself. His name was ‘Amr, but his name was also given by Ibn Makūlā as Ḥabbah or Hannah. On the other hand, his affiliation was given by Ibn al-Kalbī and Ibn ‘Abd al-Barr as Abu al-Sanābil ibn Ba‘kak, ibn al-Ḥajjāj ibn al-Ḥārith, ibn al-Sabbāq ibn ‘Abd al-Dār, but a different chain of ancestry was also given.

The hadith mentions that she gave birth ‘a few nights’ after her husband’s death. It is said that it was a month after his death, or twenty-five days. Figures less than that are also suggested, but God knows best.

ON MOURNING

[3275-58]. (Dar al-Salam 3539) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated: he said:ⁱ I read out to Mālik; from ‘Abdullāh ibn Abi Bakr; from Ḥumayd ibn Nāfi‘; from Zaynab bint Abi Salamah; that she related to him these three hadiths. He said: Zaynab said: ‘I went into Umm Ḥabībah’s, the Prophet’s wife, when her father, Abu Sufyān, died. Umm Ḥabībah called for some perfume that includes yellowness, a mixed perfume or some other. A maid applied it, then she rubbed with it the lower part of her two cheeks. She then said: “By God, I have no need for perfume, but I heard God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) say on the platform: ‘It is unlawful for any woman who believes in God and the Last Day to mourn for a deceased person more than three days, except for her husband: four months and ten days’.”’

Zaynab said: ‘I later went to Zaynab bint Jaḥsh when her brother passed away. She called for some perfume and applied it. She then said: “By God, I have no need for perfume, but I heard God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) say on the platform: 'It is unlawful for any woman who believes in God and the Last Day to mourn for a deceased person more than three days, except for her husband: four months and ten days'.'''

Zaynab said: 'I heard my mother, Umm Salamah, say: "A woman came to God's Messenger (peace be upon him) and said: 'Messenger of God, my daughter's husband has passed away, and now she has a complaint in her eye. Can we apply kohl to it?" The Prophet said: "No", two or three times, repeating "No". He then said: "It is only four months and ten [days]. In the days of ignorance, a woman used to throw a piece of dung at the end of a full year".'''

Ḥumayd said: 'I said to Zaynab: "What does 'throw a dung at the end of a full year' mean?" Zaynab said: "When a husband died, his widow would go into a small hut, put on her worst clothes, and would not touch any perfume or good smell for a full year. Then she would be brought an animal: a donkey or a sheep or a bird to rub herself with. Rarely would the animal she rubbed herself against survive for long. Then she would be brought a piece of dung to throw away. She could then use whatever she wished of perfume or anything else”.

Text Explanation

In hadith No. 3275 and other hadiths in this chapter, the Prophet says: ‘It is unlawful for any woman who believes in God and the Last Day to mourn for a deceased person more than three days, except for her husband: four months and ten days’. This is clear evidence that a woman who is observing a waiting period as a result of her husband’s death must be in mourning. This is unanimously agreed upon in general, with differences in details. Mourning, according to the legal Islamic definition, means refraining from putting on any adornment or wearing perfume [and we may add in our time abandoning all makeup]. There are well-known details of this in books of Fiqh.

Therefore, mourning is a duty of a woman in a waiting period due to death. This applies, whether the marriage has been consummated or not, to all wives: young or old, virgin or not, free or slave, Muslim or non-Muslim. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars. However, Abu Ḥanīfah and other Kufi scholars, Abu Thawr and some Mālikī scholars said that it does not apply to a non-Muslim wife. It is especially applicable to Muslims because the Prophet said: ‘It is unlawful for any woman who believes in God and the Last Day...’. The majority view is that only a believer heeds, benefits by and implements the Legislator’s address. Hence, the address is to believers. Abu Ḥanīfah also said that no mourning is required if the wife is young or a slave. Scholars are also unanimous that mourning does not apply to a mother-of-child or a slave when their master dies, nor to a divorced wife observing a waiting period if her divorce is revocable. Scholars differ concerning a thrice-divorced wife in her waiting period. ‘Aṭā’, Rabī‘ah, Mālik, al-Layth, al-Shāfi‘ī and Ibn al-Mundhir said that no mourning is required from her. Al-Ḥakam, Abu Ḥanīfah, Kufi scholars, Abu Thawr and Abu ‘Ubayd said that the duty of mourning applies to her. This is also a weak report from al-Shāfi‘ī. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ reports a statement attributed to al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī that no mourning is required from a divorcee or a widow. This is an odd and strange view.

Scholars who said that no mourning is to be observed by a thrice-divorced woman rely for evidence on the Prophet’s words which mean ‘except for a deceased person’. Thus, he makes it clear that mourning does not apply to any situation other than death, and he makes it clear that it is forbidden in other situations.

Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said: ‘That mourning becomes a duty when a woman is widowed is based on the fact that scholars agree on this understanding of the hadith, even though its wording does not imply obligation. Yet they are agreed that there is an obligation here, relating it to the other hadith narrated by Umm Salamah and Umm ‘Aṭiyyah which forbids widows the use of kohl, perfume and colourful clothing during their waiting period. Yet, God knows best.’

The Prophet said: ‘four months and ten days’. This means ten days and nights. This is the view of our school and all scholars, except what is mentioned that Yaḥyā ibn Abi Kathīr and al-Awzā‘ī say that it is four months and ten nights, which means that the waiting period is over at the start of the tenth day.^{vi} According to our school and the majority of scholars, the woman ends her waiting period at the start of the night of the eleventh day. Moreover, the specification, ‘four months and ten days’, is stated because it applies to most widows. A widow who is pregnant observes a waiting period that ends only when she delivers her baby, and she observes mourning throughout her waiting period, whether long or short, until she gives birth. Once she has delivered, no mourning is required of her. Some scholars, however, say that she need not observe mourning after four months and ten days, if she has not delivered, but God knows best.

Scholars said that the purpose of mourning in the waiting period after the husband's death, but not after divorce, is that adornment and perfume encourage marriage and may lead to it. Therefore, women are ordered not to use these so as to prevent their marriage. When a husband has died, he no longer has any influence on what his widow may do with regard to a new marriage. The man who wants to marry her may be totally oblivious of what is due to the deceased husband. In contrast, the mere presence of a divorcing husband provides a check on a new marriage of his divorced wife. It is for this reason that a waiting period applies to every married woman whose husband dies, even though the marriage might not have been consummated. Therefore, the deceased is considered, and the waiting period of a widow is made four months and ten days because the spirit is breathed into the embryo four months after conception. The ten days are added as a precaution. After this period, the embryo moves and the mark of pregnancy is apparent. This has not been entrusted to women's honesty so as to define the waiting period by menstruation and cleanliness. All these measures are taken as a precaution to ensure the rights of the deceased. Since wives who are very young are rare, they are joined to other wives with regard to the requirements of the waiting period and mourning, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3275 mentions that Umm Ḥabībah, the Prophet's wife, requested some sort of perfume, with a yellow colour and which she rubbed into the lower part of her cheeks. The 'lower part' means the side of one's face, from the point above the chin to just under one's ear. Umm Ḥabībah did this to remove any suggestion of mourning. What she and Zaynab did, together with the hadith, show that it is permissible to mourn for a deceased person, other than one's husband, for three days or less.

In the same hadith, the Prophet is asked whether kohl may be used by a woman in her mourning, if she has a complaint in her eyes. He said: 'No'. This hadith and the one narrated by Umm 'Atiyyah, No. 3286, which says: 'She may not apply kohl', make it clear that kohl is forbidden to a woman in mourning, whether she needs it or not. In a different hadith narrated by Umm Salamah and related in al-Muwaṭṭa' and other anthologies, the Prophet says to a woman: 'apply it at night and rub it off during the day'.

These hadiths may be reconciled on the basis that for a woman who is in no need of it, kohl is forbidden. If she is in need of it, it is permissible during the night, but not during the day, yet it is preferable not to use it. If she uses it at night, she should rub it off in the day. The hadith permitting it explains that it may be used during the night when needed, and the hadith forbidding it is understood that it should not be used when there is no need for it. The hadith concerning the one with an eye complaint implies discouragement, rather than strict prohibition. Alternatively, some scholars suggest that there was no real fear for her eye. Scholars had different views on the use of kohl by a woman in mourning. Sālim ibn ‘Abdullāh, Sulaymān ibn Yasār and Mālik in one report said that it is permissible for her to use unperfumed kohl, if she fears for her eye. Some scholars say it is permissible when there is need for it, even if it is perfumed. Our school expresses the view that it is permissible if needed, provided it is unperfumed.

The Prophet says in the same hadith, No. 3275, ‘It is only four months and ten [days]. In the days of ignorance, a woman used to throw a piece of dung at the end of a full year’. This means that you should not think the waiting period, in which you cannot use kohl, is too long. It is indeed not long, having been reduced from one year to four months and ten days. This is clear that a one-year waiting period, as mentioned in the other verse in Surah 2 The Cow, was abrogated.^{vii} The reference to throwing a piece of dung at the end of one year has been explained in the hadith. Some scholars said that it means that she has thrown the waiting period away in the same way as she threw the dung away from her. Others said that it indicated that what she had done, waiting for a year during which she stayed in a small place and wearing her worst clothes are too small compared with what is rightfully due to a husband. It is no more than throwing away such dung.

The hadith then mentions further practices of pre-Islamic days, concerning a widow’s waiting period. ‘Then she would be brought an animal: a donkey or a sheep or a bird to rub herself with’. Ibn Qutaybah said that he asked the people of Hijaz about the meaning of this action. They said that when a widow observed her waiting period, they did not take a bath or touch water or clip a nail. When a year was over, she ended her waiting period, and was given a bird with which to rub her vagina and throw away. Whatever she rubbed herself with hardly survived after that. Mālik said that it means she rubbed her skin with it. Ibn Wahb said that it means she rubbed it, or rubbed its back, with her hand. It is further said that she rubbed herself with it and then took a bath. The Arabic term used here taftaḍḍ means washing with fresh water to remove all dirt. She washed herself so that she became white clean like silver. Al-Akhfash said that it meant that she cleaned herself of all that is dirty. She could then be compared to silver in her cleanliness and whiteness.

In hadith No. 3284, the Prophet says that when a widow is in mourning, 'she may not wear a coloured dress, except a yarn dress'. This means a prohibition of all types of dyed or colourful clothing which are worn as adornment. She may instead wear only yarn clothes. Ibn al-Mundhir said that all scholars agree that a woman in mourning may not wear clothes dyed with saffron or different colours, except what is dyed black. Scholars who permit clothes dyed black include 'Urwah ibn al-Zubayr, Mālik and al-Shāfi'ī, while al-Zuhrī discourages it. 'Urwah discourages yarn clothes, while al-Zuhrī approves of it and Mālik approves what is thick of it. Our scholars tend to make it totally forbidden, but this hadith provides an argument in support of permitting it. Ibn al-Mundhir said that all scholars permit white clothes, but later Mālikī scholars disapprove of fine white clothes which are worn for adornment. The same applies to fine black clothes. Our scholars said that whatever is dyed without being intended as adornment is permissible. The more correct view is that a woman in mourning may wear silk. On the other hand, gold, silver and pearl jewellery is forbidden, except for one view that says pearl is permitted.

In the same hadith, the Prophet says that during mourning, a woman 'may not wear perfume, except that when she finishes her period, she may apply a little incense'. Two specific types of incense are mentioned because they do not impart a perfumery scent. Incense is allowed for a woman when she takes a bath after her menstruation period, and she uses it to remove any traces of blood. It is not used as a perfume, but God knows best.

 - vi. The difference here is due to the fact that according to Islam, a day begins at sunset. This means that the night preceding the day is part of it. Hence, as the Prophet says, 'four months and ten', limiting the ten to 'nights' means the waiting period ends after the night preceding the tenth day.

MUTUAL SELF-CURSINGⁱ

[3287-1]. (Dar al-Salam 3553) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated:ⁱⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik; from Ibn Shihāb; that Sahl ibn Sa'd al-Sā'idī reported to him that “Uwaymir al-‘Ajlānī went to ‘Āṣim ibn ‘Adiy al-Anṣārī and said to him: “‘Āṣim, suppose that a man finds a man with his wife and he kills him, will you kill him [i.e., kill the husband in retaliation]? Or what should he do? ‘Āṣim, ask God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) about this for me”. ‘Āṣim asked God’s Messenger but God’s Messenger disliked the question and reproached him for it. ‘Āṣim felt upset at what he heard God’s Messenger say. When ‘Āṣim went back home, ‘Uwaymir came to him and said: “‘Āṣim, what did God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) say to you?” ‘Āṣim said to ‘Uwaymir: “You did not bring me any good. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) disliked the question I asked him”. ‘Uwaymir said: “By God, I shall not stop until I have asked him about it”.

‘Uwaymir went over to God’s Messenger as people were around him. He said: “Messenger of God, suppose that a man finds his wife with a man: should he kill him and then you kill him [in return]? Or what shall he do?” God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “Revelation has been given concerning you and your wife. Go and bring her”.

Sahl said: “They exchanged curses. I was with the people attending God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). When they had done so, ‘Uwaymir said: ‘Messenger of God, if I retain her as my wife, I would have told a lie against her’. He divorced her three times before God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) ordered him”.

وَحَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ يَحْيَى، قَالَ قَرَأْتُ عَلَى مَالِكٍ، عَنِ ابْنِ شِهَابٍ، أَنَّ سَهْلَ بْنَ سَعْدٍ السَّاعِدِيَّ أَخْبَرَهُ، أَنَّ عُؤَيْمِرَ الْعَجْلَانِيَّ جَاءَ إِلَى عَاصِمِ بْنِ عَدِيٍّ الْأَنْصَارِيِّ فَقَالَ لَهُ: أَرَأَيْتَ يَا عَاصِمُ، لَوْ أَنَّ رَجُلًا وَجَدَ مَعَ امْرَأَتِهِ رَجُلًا، أَيَقْتُلُهُ فَتَقْتُلُونَهُ؟ أَمْ كَيْفَ يَفْعَلُ؟ فَسَلَّ لِي عَنْ ذَلِكَ يَا عَاصِمُ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. فَسَأَلَ عَاصِمُ رَسُولَ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَكَرِهَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ الْمَسَائِلَ وَعَابَهَا، حَتَّى كَبُرَ عَلَى عَاصِمٍ مَا سَمِعَ مِنْ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ. فَلَمَّا رَجَعَ عَاصِمٌ إِلَى أَهْلِهِ جَاءَهُ عُؤَيْمِرُ

[3288-2]. (Dar al-Salam 3554) Ḥarmalah ibn Yaḥyā narrated to me: Ibn Wahb reported; Yūnus reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; Sahl ibn Sa'd al-Anṣārī reported to me that “Uwaymir al-Anṣārī of the al-‘Ajlān clan went to ‘Āsim ibn ‘Adiy...” he narrated the hadith in the same terms as Mālik’s narration. He interpolated in the hadith: ‘The way he parted with her was subsequently the case of the couple exchanging curses’. He further added: ‘Sahl said: “She was pregnant. Her son was affiliated to her. Then the sunnah was such that he could inherit from

[3289-3]. (Dar al-Salam 3555) Muhammad ibn Rāfi‘ narrated: ‘Abd al-Razzāq narrated; Ibn Jurayj reported; Ibn Shihāb reported to me about the couple who exchanged curses and the practice concerning them the hadith narrated by Sahl ibn Sa‘d, who belonged to the Sā‘idah clan, that ‘A man from the Anṣār came to the Prophet and said: Messenger of God, suppose that a man found his wife with a man...’. He mentioned the same hadith and added: ‘They exchanged curses at the mosque and I witnessed that’. He also said: ‘He divorced her three times before being commanded by God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). He parted with her at the Prophet’s and the Prophet said: “Such is the separation between every couple who exchange such curses”.’

Text Explanation

‘Mutual self-cursing’ refers to the exchange of self-cursing between man and wife when there is an accusation of adultery but no witnesses. The ruling in such a case is provided in the Qur’an as God says: ‘And as for those who accuse their own wives [of adultery], but have no witnesses except themselves, let each of them call God four times to witness that he is indeed telling the truth; and the fifth time, that God’s curse be upon him if he is telling a lie. However, punishment is averted from her if she calls God four times to witness that he is indeed telling a lie; and the fifth time, that God’s wrath be upon her if he is telling the truth. Were it not for God’s favour upon you and His grace, and that God is the One who accepts repentance, the Wise...!’ (24: 6-10)

This process is called ‘mutual self-cursing’ because the accusing husband says: ‘May God’s curse be upon me if I am telling a lie'. Scholars said that the word 'curse' is chosen rather than the word 'wrath' although the verses mention both, and both are included in the process, because the word 'curse' is mentioned first. Moreover, the man's side is stronger as he is the one who starts the process, and because his cursing may be separated from hers, but the reverse is not possible. It is also said that it is called self-cursing because, linguistically speaking, curse in Arabic means expulsion and sending away. The process sets the couple far apart. Unlike the case of divorce, their remarriage is not permissible for life.

According to the majority of scholars of our Shāfi'ī School, the process of 'self-cursing' is treated as an oath, but some say that it is a testimony. Others say that it is an oath that includes a testimony, while some say the opposite, i.e., a testimony including an oath. Scholars say that the only cases that include multiple oaths are this one of self-cursing and the qassāmah, which is group swearing. Moreover, these two are the only cases that require the one making the accusation to swear an oath, but God knows best. Scholars also say that the process of mutual self-cursing is permitted in order to ensure correct child parentage and to remove shame from couples. It is the unanimous view of scholars that the process is valid.

Scholars express two views regarding the scenario that led to the revelation of the above-quoted Qur'anic verses outlining the process: was it the case of 'Uwaymir al-'Ajlānī or that of Hilāl ibn Umayyah? Some scholars say that it concerns 'Uwaymir al-'Ajlānī, citing in support the first hadith in this book, No. 3287, in which the Prophet said to him: 'Revelation has been given concerning you and your wife'. The majority of scholars say that these verses were revealed in connection with the case of Hilāl ibn Umayyah, citing hadith No. 3299, related by Muslim, which says that Hilāl 'was the first man to resort to mutual self-cursing in Islam'. Al-Māwardī, a Shāfi'ī scholar, says in his book al-Ḥāwī, that the majority of scholars say that the case of Hilāl ibn Umayyah was earlier than that of 'Uwaymir al-'Ajlanī, but the reporting of these cases share points of similarity whilst also points of difference. In his book al-Shāmil, another Shāfi'ī scholar, Ibn al-Ṣabbāgh, says that Hilāl's case indicates that the verses were first revealed concerning him. That the Prophet said to 'Uwaymir, 'Revelation has been given concerning you and your wife,' refers to what was revealed concerning Hilāl because the revelation gives a general ruling applicable to all such cases. My own view is that it is possible that the verses might have been revealed concerning both cases, as they might have happened within a short interval, but Hilāl was the first to follow the process, but God knows best. Scholars further say that this case of mutual self-cursing took place in the month of Sha'bān of Year 9 AH, i.e., a few months before the Prophet passed away. This is mentioned by Qadi 'Iyāḍ quoting Ibn Jarīr al-Ṭabarī.

Hadith No. 3287 mentions that when 'Āṣim put 'Uwaymir's question to the Prophet, the Prophet 'disliked the question and reproached him for it'. What is meant here is that the Prophet disliked unnecessary questions, particularly those that involved exposing another Muslim's secret, or suggesting that a Muslim did some serious wrong, or a question that tended towards toleration of some gross indecency. Scholars say that if the question relates to some necessary matter of religion, or an event that has taken place, there is no harm in asking about it. The hadith does not refer to anything of this type. Muslims used to ask God's Messenger about rulings for actual events and he would reply, showing no dislike. In this particular case, 'Āṣim's question related to an event that had not yet happened. It reflected ill on Muslim men and women and would encourage the Jews and the hypocrites to speak ill of Muslims and their families, and indeed to speak ill of Islam itself. Moreover, some questions tend, when answered, to make things even more restricted. A hadith quotes the Prophet: 'The one worst at war is the person who asks about something that has not been forbidden, and a verdict of prohibition is issued as a result of his question'.

The same hadith mentions that "Uwaymir said: "Messenger of God, suppose that a man finds his wife with a man: should he kill him and then you will kill him [in return]? Or what shall he do? God's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Revelation has been given concerning you and your wife. Go and bring her". Sahl said: "They exchanged curses".' The way the hadith is narrated leaves out the sequence of what actually happened. It means that 'Uwaymir put his question to the Prophet and accused his wife. She denied that she committed adultery and each of them stood firm by what they said. They then swore their oaths invoking curses upon themselves.

'Uwaymir suggested in his question that if the husband killed the man he found in an adulterous position with his own wife, would he be killed for having killed the adulterer? If he did nothing and remained patient, he would be tolerating something very serious. What way was open to him? Scholars hold different views about a man who kills another, then claims that he found him committing adultery with his own wife. The majority say that his claim is not accepted, and a retaliation punishment is incurred by such a person, unless there is some clear evidence that his claim is true, or that the heirs of the killed person acknowledge the accusation. The clear evidence required is four male witnesses testifying the same case of adultery, and that the killed person was married. As for the killer and his standing in God's sight, he is considered not to have committed any offence if he has told the truth. Some of our scholars are of the opinion that a retaliatory punishment is incurred by anyone who kills a married adulterer, unless the ruler has ordered his killing. The first view is the correct one. Some early scholars said that the person claiming he killed him because he found him committing adultery with his wife, should be believed.

In the hadith, the narrator, Sahl, said: 'They exchanged curses. I was with the people attending God's Messenger (peace be upon him)'. This makes it clear that the mutual self-cursing process is conducted in the presence of the ruler or a judge and witnessed by a number of people. This is one way of solemnizing the process: it is made more solemn in time, place and witness - the time is after the 'Aṣr Prayer, and the place is the most honourable place in the town, and the number of people is four as a minimum. Yet are these requirements obligatory or recommended? Our scholars express two views, but the more correct view is that they are recommended.

The hadith adds: ‘When they had done so, ‘Uwaymir said: “Messenger of God, if I retain her as my wife, I would have told a lie against her”. He divorced her three times before God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) ordered him. Ibn Shihāb said: “Such was the case of the couple exchanging curses”.’ In hadith No. 3289: ‘He divorced her three times before being commanded by God’s Messenger (peace be upon him). He parted with her at the Prophet’s place. The Prophet said: “Such is the separation between every couple who exchange such curses”.’ And in another hadith: ‘He invoked the curse upon himself, then she invoked it upon herself. He then parted them’. In the hadith No. 3292 the Prophet tells the man that he has no access to her.

[3290-4]. (Dar al-Salam 3556) Muhammad ibn ‘Abdullāh ibn Numayr narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ my father narrated [H]. Also, Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated (his text); ‘Abdullāh ibn Numayr narrated; ‘Abd al-Malik ibn Abi Sulaymān narrated; from Sa‘īd ibn Jubay: He said: ‘I was asked about a couple who go through mutual self-cursing: is their marriage terminated? I did not know what to say. I went to Ibn ‘Umar’s home in Makkah and said to his servant: “Request admittance for me”. He said that he was having his nap. He heard my voice and said: “[Is that you] Ibn Jubayr?” I said: “Yes”. He said: “Come in. By God, it must be something serious that brought you at this time of day”. I entered. I found him lying on a saddle cloth, using a pillow stuffed with fibre. I said: "Abu 'Abd al-Raḥmān, are the couple who go through mutual self-cursing separated?" He said: "Limitless is God in His glory! Yes. The first to ask about this was so-and-so, son of such-and-such. He said: 'Messenger of God, if any of us finds his wife committing adultery, what should he do? If he speaks out, he says something very serious, and if he keeps silent, it is similarly serious'. The Prophet (peace be upon him) remained silent and did not answer him. Sometime later, the man came back and said: "I have suffered what I asked you about". God then revealed those verses in the Surah Light [starting with]: "As for those who accuse their own wives..." (24: 6-9). The Prophet recited these verses to him, admonished and reminded him, telling him that punishment in this life is much lighter than punishment in the life to come. The man said: "No. By Him who sent you with the message of the truth, I have not told a lie against her". The Prophet then called her. He admonished and reminded her, telling her that punishment in this life is much lighter than punishment in the life to come. She said: 'No. By Him who sent you with the message of the truth, he is certainly lying'. The Prophet started with the man who called God four times to witness that he was indeed telling the truth and added a fifth invoking God's curse upon himself if he was telling a lie. The Prophet then asked the woman and she called God four times to witness that her husband was telling a lie and added a fifth invoking God's wrath upon herself if he was telling the truth. He then separated them".'

Text Explanation

Scholars differ concerning the termination of the marriage as a result of the mutual self-cursing. Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars say that the marriage is terminated by the process itself, and that no remarriage may take place between them for life in view of these hadiths. However, al-Shāfi‘ī and some Mālikī scholars say that the termination of the marriage occurs as a result of the husband going through self-cursing. It is not necessary that the woman does the same. However, other Mālikī scholars say that her self-cursing is a condition for the termination of the marriage. Abu Ḥanīfah said that the termination occurs only as a result of the judge’s ruling after the process of mutual self-cursing has been completed. He cites in evidence that in hadith No. 3290 the process of mutual self-cursing was completed and adds: 'He then separated them'. The majority of scholars say that the separation does not require a ruling by the judge because the Prophet told the man in hadith No. 3292: 'You have no access to her'. And in hadith No. 3289: 'He parted with her at the Prophet's place'. Al-Layth said that the mutual self-cursing does not necessitate separation and no separation occurs as a result of it.

Scholars who share the view that the prohibition of remarriage between them is permanent differ on what happens if the man subsequently admitted that he had lied when he accused his wife. Abu Ḥanīfah says that remarriage is then permissible because the cause of its prohibition is thus removed. Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and others say that she remains forbidden to him to marry for life because of the general sense of the Prophet's words when he told the man: 'You have no access to her'. But, God knows best.

In hadith No. 3287, 'Uwaymir says to the Prophet: 'Messenger of God, if I retain her as my wife, I would have told a lie against her'. This is a separate and complete statement. He then adds: 'She is divorced three times', in confirmation of stating that he would not retain her. He thus divorced her because he thought that mutual self-cursing did not make her forbidden to him. Therefore, he wanted to confirm this by divorce. Hence, the Prophet said to him: 'You have no access to her'. This means that he no longer had any claim to her, and that his divorce was invalid. This is clear evidence that the separation between them occurs through the process of mutual self-cursing itself. Our scholars also consider this hadith as providing evidence that pronouncing all three divorces together in one utterance is not forbidden. The evidence is in the fact that the Prophet did not object to 'Uwaymir's stating the three divorces together. This may be responded to by saying that the Prophet did not object to him because the divorce itself was inapplicable as the man had no right or influence in the case. This objection is countered by the argument that had combining the three divorces been forbidden the Prophet would have pointed that out and he would have said to 'Uwaymir: 'How do you utter the three divorces together although it is forbidden', but God knows best.

Ibn Nāfi', a Mālikī scholar, said that the man divorced her three times after the self-cursing process because it is recommended to publicise the divorce after the process, even though the separation had already taken place when the process of self-cursing has been completed. This view is wrong. How can it be recommended for a man to divorce a woman who has become a stranger to him? Muhammad ibn Abu Ṣufrah, a Mālikī scholar, said that separation does not occur by the process of mutual self-cursing itself, basing his argument on the fact that 'Uwaymir divorced his wife and said: 'If I retain her...', but the majority of scholars understand this as we have outlined, but God knows best.

The statement made by Ibn Shihāb at the end of hadith No. 3287, 'Such was the case between a couple exchanging self-cursing,' is understood by Ibn Nāfi' to indicate the preference of divorce after the process, as we have already mentioned. The majority of scholars, however, said that it means that the separation between the couple occurs by the process itself. In hadith No. 3289, the Prophet says: 'Such is the separation between every couple who exchange such curses'. According to Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and the majority of scholars, it means that the separation occurs between any couple who go through mutual self-cursing by the very process itself. It is also said that it means that their remarriage is prohibited for life, as the majority of scholars agree. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said that scholars from all regions agree that the mere accusation of adultery by a husband does not make the accused wife forbidden to him, except Abu 'Ubayd who says that the accusation itself makes her forbidden to him, even without going through the process of self-cursing.

Hadith No. 3288 mentions: 'She was pregnant. Her son was affiliated to her. Then the sunnah was such that he could inherit from her, and she inherits from him whatever God determined as her share'. This hadith shows that it is permissible to go through the process of mutual self-cursing with one's pregnant wife, and that if the man goes through it and denies being the cause of the pregnancy, the child is not affiliated to him. It will be affiliated to its mother. He inherits from her when she dies and if he dies before her, she inherits from him what God has assigned as the mother's share, which is one-third of his property if he is not survived by a son or a grandson of his own or by two or more daughters. In any such case, the mother's share is one-sixth. Scholars unanimously agree that inheritance occurs between that child and his mother, and also between him and the heirs with apportioned shares on his mother's side. These are his brothers and sisters through his mother and his maternal grandmother(s). If these receive their shares and there remains any residue, it goes to the state treasury. Such is the detailed view of the Shāfi'ī School, and it is agreed by al-Zuhrī, Mālik and Abu Thawr. On the other hand, al-Ḥakam and Ḥammād said that he is inherited by his mother's heirs, while others said he is inherited by his mother's paternal relatives. This is reported to be the view of 'Alī, 'Abdullāh ibn Mas'ūd, 'Aṭā' and Ahmad ibn Hanbal. Ahmad said: If his mother is his only heir, she takes all his estate. Abu Ḥanīfah agrees but he says that her apportioned share is one-third and she takes the remainder, adding it for her being his rightful heir. This is according to the rule of his school approving such addition, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3290 mentions that Ibn 'Umar was lying on a saddle cloth to take his nap. This indicates Ibn 'Umar's humility and that he did not care for personal comforts. The hadith mentions that the Prophet recited the relevant verses to the man accusing his wife of adultery. It then says that the Prophet 'admonished and reminded him, telling him that punishment in this life is much lighter than punishment in the life to come'. He did the same when it was the woman's turn to answer. The hadith shows that the ruler, or the judge, should admonish the couple and warn them against swearing a false oath. He should tell them that enduring the mandatory punishment in this life is much lighter than having to suffer punishment in the life to come.

The hadith mentions that the Prophet started with the man and that he called God four times to witness that he was telling the truth. This shows that the process of self-cursing starts with the husband because God mentions him first. Moreover, by swearing these oaths, he frees himself of any charge of false accusation which makes him incur a punishment. He may also negate the parenthood of any pregnancy. Qadi 'Iyāḍ and others state that Muslim scholars are agreed upon the start being with the husband. Al-Shāfi'ī and others maintain that if the woman starts the process, her self-cursing is invalid. Abu Ḥanīfah and others say that it is valid. The wording of the oaths in this process is as stated in the above-quoted verses of the Qur'an: (24: 6-9)

In hadith No. 3292 the Prophet says to the couple who went through the process of self-cursing: 'Both of you are accountable to God, as one of you is lying. You have no access to her'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This appears to have been said after the couple had finished their oaths. The purpose is that the one who was lying should repent. Al-Dāwūdī said that the Prophet said this to them before the start of the process to warn them against false oaths. The first view is better and fits more with the sequence of the case'. The hadith shows that neither party is punished, although we know that one of them is saying what is untrue, without being certain who the liar is.

The hadith adds: '[The man] said: "Messenger of God, what about my money?" The Prophet said: "You have no claim. If you have told the truth, it was in return for your legitimate consort with her; but if you lied against her, it is even farther away from you".' This makes it clear that the dowry becomes the woman's sole property once the marriage has been consummated. It also shows that if the marriage is consummated and the process of mutual self-cursing is subsequently done, her dowry belongs to her and may not be refunded. Both points are unanimously agreed upon. Further, if the woman confesses that she has committed adultery, her dowry remains hers.

In hadith No. 3298, when the man asks the Prophet about the case of finding one's wife in an adulterous position, the Prophet supplicates: 'Our Lord, guide us'. This is a prayer to God to give the ruling in this case.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3299 mentions that Hilāl ibn Umayyah accused his wife of adultery with Sharīk ibn Saḥmā’. Sharīk was a Companion of the Prophet who belonged to the Baliy clan of the Anṣār. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said that some people claimed that he was a Jew, but this is false.

What these hadiths add is the question put to Ibn ‘Abbās about a certain woman of whom the Prophet said: ‘Were I to stone anyone without clear proof, I would have stoned her’. In hadith No. 2300, Ibn ‘Abbās answered that it was a woman who showed indecency in Islam, and in hadith No. 2302 he said: ‘That was a woman who did that unashamedly’. What these two statements mean is that it was widely known that she committed gross indecency, i.e., adultery, but her offence was not proven through the clear testimony of witnesses or confession. This clearly shows that a mandatory punishment cannot be enforced merely by indications and circulated reports. There must be clear proof through witnesses, or else the offender's voluntary confession.

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3303 mentions that ‘Sa’d ibn ‘Ubādah asked the Prophet: “If a man finds another man with his wife, should he kill him?” God’s Messenger said: “No”. Sa’d said: “Yes, by Him who honoured you with the truth”. The Prophet said: "Listen to what your master says". And in hadith No. 3305, Sa'd says: 'No. By Him who sent you with the message of the truth, I would strike him with the sword before that'. Al-Māwardī and other scholars explain that Sa'd did not mean to reject what the Prophet said or act in disobedience of the Prophet. He only wanted to portray the state in which a man could be if he comes home to find his wife in an adulterous position. His anger could be so acute that he would strike the offender with his sword, even if this meant disobedience. The Prophet said to his other Companions: 'Listen to what your master says'. Sa'd ibn 'Ubādah was the chief of the Khazraj tribe of the Anṣār, but the Prophet did not mean this as he described him as sayyid, or master. Ibn al-Anbārī and others said that sayyid means the one who excels his community in good traits. They also said that it means a forbearing, clement and good-mannered person. The Prophet invited his Companions to consider carefully what Sa'd said.

In hadith No. 3305, Sa'd says that he would strike the adulterer with his sword, but not with his flat side. He meant he would aim its sharp side at the offender to kill him.

The Prophet describes Sa'd as protective, adding that he is more protective than Sa'd and that God is even more so. The word the Prophet uses here is ghayrah, describing Sa'd as ghayūr. These words are primarily used nowadays to signify jealousy, but this is not the meaning intended here. The Prophet says in hadith No. 3306: 'God is more protective than me. It is because of God's protectiveness that He has forbidden all indecency, open or done in private'. The original meaning of ghayrah is prevention. A man is 'ghayūr for his family' means that he prevents them looking up or speaking to a stranger. As such, ghayrah is an honourable quality because it is protective. Hence, the Prophet describes Sa'd as protective and says that he is more so, and God is even more protective than the Prophet. It is for this reason that He has forbidden all acts of gross indecency. He wants people to refrain from these in all situations. As it applies to people, ghayrah is coupled with being disturbed and upset, but this does not apply to God Almighty.

In the same hadith, No. 3306, the Prophet says: 'No one is more protective than God, and no one likes to warn more than God, and for this reason He sent His messengers to give glad tidings and warn. No one loves praise more than God, and for this reason He has promised heaven'. This means that it is not possible that anyone can be more protective than God, and it cannot even be imagined. Therefore, everyone should learn from the way God treats His servants. He does not hasten their punishment, but He warns them and repeats His warnings and gives them respite. Therefore, man should not hasten to kill or punish when such a punishment has not become applicable. God does not inflict punishment immediately, even though, if He did, it would be in justice.

The Prophet adds that no one likes to warn more than God. The warning precedes the infliction of punishment. Hence God sent His messengers to give the warning. He said: 'We would never inflict punishment on anyone until We have sent a messenger' to give warning. (17: 15) The hadith adds that God loves to be praised and for this reason He has promised heaven. This means that as He has promised people to be in heaven and shown how fine it is, people love it and often pray to Him to grant them admission into it, praising and glorifying Him, but God knows best.

He said: ‘A man from the Fazārah tribe came to the Prophet and said to him that his wife gave birth to a black boy. The Prophet asked him: “Do you have any camels?” The man said: “Yes”. The Prophet asked: “What colour are they?” He said: “Reddish”. The Prophet asked: “Does any of them tend to be nearly black?” The man said: “Some of them are dark”. The Prophet said: “How come they are so?” The man said: “It may be going back to their [original] roots”. The Prophet said: “And this child may be going back to his original roots”.’

Text Explanation

The man answered the Prophet's question about the colours of his camels saying that they are reddish, which means that they were closer to white but have a reddish tinge. The Prophet asks him whether any of them tended to be darker, closer to black. The man confirms this explaining it that it may come from a hereditary strain going back to their origins. The Prophet applies the same to the child. The hadith makes it clear that a child is affiliated to its father, even though the two may be of different colours. It is not lawful for the father to deny his parenthood of the child only because they differ in colour. Nor is it right if both parents are white and the child is black, or the opposite, because all this may be due to a hereditary strain.

The hadith shows that a hint at a desire to deny parenthood does not constitute such denial, nor does a hint of accusation of adultery constitute such an accusation. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī and other scholars. The hadith confirms that analogy is valid, and that similarities may be drawn and taken as secondary evidence. Further, the hadith shows that it is important to safeguard parenthood, and that a child is affiliated to its parent wherever this is possible.

In hadith No. 3310, the man says to the Prophet: ‘My wife has given birth to a black boy, and I dislike it’. This means that he entertained thoughts that the child might not be his. His words do not constitute a clear negation of parenthood, but God knows best.

Clarification: On Islam and Slavery

Slavery has been practised in the world for thousands of years. It is part of the human system of the powerful subjugating the weak. Hence, it was practised in all communities and civilisations. Although our modern world prides itself on the abolition of slavery, it continues under a different guise, and it is given different names, such as colonialism, imperialism, etc. There are other forms of subjugation of weaker people, including the trafficking of children and adults into sexual slavery.

At the advent of Islam, slavery was a world-wide system, with different nations adopting different methods of enslaving people. Islam stopped all methods and sources of slavery except captives of war. As this was an international system, Islam could not unilaterally stop it. However, under Islam, captives of war could only be enslaved if the ruler of the Muslim state imposed such measures on them. The rule that limits his authority in this regard is the Qur'anic verse that says: 'Now when you meet the unbelievers in battle, smite their necks. Then when you have thoroughly subdued them, bind them firmly. Thereafter, set them free either by an act of grace or against ransom, until war shall lay down its burden'. (47: 4) Thus, the preferred option for any Muslim ruler is either to set such captives of war free for ransom or as an act of grace.

Having annulled other sources, Islam went further to ensure that slaves were freed in Muslim society. It made the freeing of a slave the atonement required for several offences, such as manslaughter, zihār, which means calling one's wife unlawful to oneself, sexual intercourse with one's wife during a fasting day, a broken oath, etc.

Furthermore, Islam promised very rich reward for the freeing of a slave who was a believer. That reward was nothing short of admittance into heaven. God says: 'Yet man would not scale the Ascent'. The Ascent is a barrier preventing man's entry into heaven. 'Would that you knew what the Ascent is. It is the freeing of a slave'. (90: 11-13) The Prophet made it clear that whoever freed a Muslim slave, freed himself from the fire of Hell. What is more, if a master said in jest that his slave was free, the slave was actually freed, and the master no longer had any authority over him. Another aspect of the Islamic method of freeing slaves was such whereby a slave demanded to buy his own freedom. The master had to accept, and they would then agree a price. The slave would then work in his spare time to raise the price and the Muslim state was obliged to help him with zakat funds.

In the treatment of slaves, Islam set the ultimate standard of fairness. The Prophet said: 'Your slaves are your brothers. Whoever has a brother under him should feed him of the same food he eats and clothe him of the same type of clothes he wears. Do not charge them with tasks beyond what they can cope with, and if you have to do that, then help them'. (Related by al-Bukhari and Muslim)

With regard to female slaves, a master could consort with her. This became publicly known and once she gave birth to a child, her status changed to that of mother-of-child, which meant that she was part of her master's household and could no longer be sold on. If her master died, she was inherited by her child and this gave her full freedom, because a child cannot own its mother.

A question that has been raised in recent years has resulted from the attitude of some extremist groups, such as ISIS and al-Qaeda, who impose slavery on their opponents. Unfortunately, the practices of such groups are often laid at the door of Islam, as if they are the model representatives of our faith. The answer is that their claims to be the true representatives of Islam and to run an Islamic state are certainly false and their practice of imposing slavery on their captives is un-Islamic.

A SLAVE'S SPARE TIME WORK

[3312-2]. (Dar al-Salam 3580) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā and Ibn Bashshār narrated (Ibn al-Muthannā's text):ⁱ both said: Muhammad ibn Ja'far narrated; Shu'bah narrated; from Qatādah; from al-Naḍr ibn Anas; from Bashīr ibn Nahīk; from Abu Hurayrah; from the Prophet (peace be upon him). He said about a slave owned by two people, but one of them sets his share free. The Prophet said: 'He guarantees'.

[3313-3]. (Dar al-Salam 3581) 'Amr al-Nāqid narrated to me: Ismā'īl ibn Ibrāhīm narrated; from Ibn Abi 'Arūbah; from Qatādah; from al-Naḍr ibn Anas; from Bashīr ibn Nahīk; from Abu Hurayrah; from the Prophet (peace be upon him). He said:

‘Whoever frees a share he owns in a slave, the freedom of the remainder is paid by him if he has the money. If he does not, the slave may work without being hard pressed’.

[3314-4]. (Dar al-Salam 3582) ‘Alī ibn Khashram narrated: ‘Īsā (meaning Ibn Yūnus) reported; from Sa‘īd ibn Abi ‘Arūbah; with the same chain of transmission: the same text, but added: ‘If he does not have the money, the slave is valued in equity, then he is required to work, without being hard pressed, to raise the price of the share of the one who has not freed him’.

[3315-000]. (Dar al-Salam 3583) Hārūn ibn ‘Abdullāh narrated to me: Wahb ibn Jarīr narrated; my father narrated. He said: ‘I heard Qatādah narrating with the same chain of transmission a hadith with the same meaning as the narration of Ibn Abi ‘Arūbah. He mentioned in the hadith: “He is valued against him in equity”.’

Text Explanation

Hadith No. 3313 and No. 3314 mention the case where a slave is partly freed and that he may work for himself, without being hard pressed, to earn the money needed to buy the rest of his freedom. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ said:

The point about the slave being allowed or required to work is subject to controversy among narrators. Al-Dāraquṭnī said: ‘This hadith is narrated by Shu‘bah and Hishām from Qatādah, and both are better reporters, but they do not mention the slave’s work. Hammām agrees with them, separating the mention of the slave’s work from the rest of the hadith so that it is shown as Qatādah’s view. The hadith is related thus by al-Bukhari, and it is the right way... I heard Abu Bakr al-Naisābūrī say: “How excellent Hammām’s narration is! And how accurate he is that he isolates Qatādah’s view from the hadith...”’ Al-Aṣīlī, Ibn al-Qaṣṣār and others said that the ones who do not mention the slave's work are more accurate than those who mention it because it is not mentioned in other hadiths narrated by Ibn 'Umar. Another eminent scholar, Ibn 'Abd al-Barr said that those who do not mention the slave's work are more reliable than those who mention it. Other scholars said that in some cases it is mentioned by those who narrate the hadith from Sa'id ibn Abi 'Arūbah, stating it at times and omitting it at others. This indicates that Sa'id did not consider it as part of the hadith as mentioned by others. But, God knows best.

What is meant by the slave's work is that the slave is required to work and earn until he can pay the price of the share of the other owner. When he has paid it, he is free. This is how it is explained by scholars approving such work. Some said that it means that the slave continues to serve his master who has not freed him in proportion to his share in him. Thus, the hadiths are consistent.

These hadiths make it clear that if a slave is owned by more than one person and one partner frees his share, then the other share in the slave is valued in equity and he is required to pay to his partner(s) the value of their shares if he owns such an amount. This applies whether the partner or the slave is a Muslim or non-Muslim, and whether the slave is a man or a woman. There is no other option for any of the parties: the slave, the owner who freed his share and the other owner(s). This ruling is implemented, even if all of them dislike it, because they owe a duty to God to set that slave free. Scholars are unanimous that the share of the freeing partner is deemed free by his action. However, Qadi 'Iyāḍ mentions that Rabī'ah said that this share is not free whether the freeing partner is rich or poor. This is a wrong view, contrary to all authentic hadiths and the unanimity of scholars.

The ruling concerning the partner's share is subject to disagreement among scholars, if the freeing partner is rich. Six different views are given, and the correct one according to the Shāfi'ī School considers that this other share is also freed by the same act of setting the first share free. The value of the other partner's share is estimated on the day the freeing took place and becomes payable to that partner. The allegiance of the freed slave is totally to the freeing partner. The freed slave acquires the same rulings as all free people in inheritance and other matters from the moment he is set free. The other partner has no right other than claiming the price of his share, in the same way as though the slave was killed by one partner. This view of the Shāfi'ī School is endorsed by Ibn Shibrimah, al-Awzā'ī, al-Thawrī, Ibn Abi Laylā, Abu Yūsuf, Muhammad ibn al-Ḥasan, Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal and some Mālikī scholars. All these scholars also said that if the freeing partner subsequently becomes unable to pay the price of the other share in the slave, the slave remains free, and the unpaid share remains as a debt owed by the freeing partner. If he dies, it is taken from his estate, and if he dies penniless, the owed amount is considered lost, but the slave remains free. They add that if the other partner sets his share in the slave free after the first partner has done so, this second act of freeing is redundant, because the slave is already free by the freeing of the first share.

The second view is that the slave only becomes free when the value of the unfreed share has been paid. This is the well-known Mālikī view, and the view of the Zāhirī School and Imam al-Shāfi‘ī. The third is Abu Ḥanīfah’s view. The other partner has two options: either to let the slave work until he has paid him the price of his share or to set his share free and the slave’s allegiance would be shared between the two partners. Alternatively, he takes the value of his share from his partner who freed his share. This partner can now ask the slave to work until he has repaid him the value of that share he has given to his partner. The slave’s loyalty would be owed totally to the freeing partner. Abu Ḥanīfah adds that during this time, up to the full payment of his value, the slave’s liability is the same as one who has entered an agreement to buy his own freedom. The fourth view is stated by ‘Uthmān al-Laythī who says that the freeing partner owes nothing except in the case of the slave being a pretty maid who is sought for sex. In this case, the freeing partner owes to his partner compensation for the consequences of his action. The fifth view is mentioned by Ibn Sīrīn who says that the value of the remaining share is paid by the state treasury and the last view quotes Ibn Rāhawayh who considers the ruling applicable to male slaves only. This last view is odd and contrary to the view of all scholars. The previous three views are also invalid because they are contrary to the clear meaning of the hadiths. As such, they are rejected.

All the previous views relate to the case when the freeing partner is well off. If the freeing partner is in straitened financial circumstances, scholars hold four different views. The first is shared by Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī, Ahmad, Abu ‘Ubayd and others. It says that only the share owned by the freeing partner is freed. This partner is asked not to do anything else. The slave is not required to work but remains a slave of the other partner on the same terms as before. The same view is expressed by Hijāzī scholars on the basis of the hadith narrated by Ibn ‘Umar. The second view is shared by Ibn Shibrimah, al-Awzā‘ī, Abu Ḥanīfah, Ibn Abi Laylā, all Kufi scholars and Ishāq. They say that the slave is made to work for the share of the other partner. However, these scholars differ with Ibn Abi Laylā saying that the slave claims what he pays out of his work from the one who freed him, while Abu Ḥanīfah and his two closest associates say that the slave may not make such a claim. According to Abu Ḥanīfah, while the slave is working to buy his remaining share, he is in the same status as a slave who has agreed to buy his own freedom, but the other scholars say that he is free by extension of the portion already freed. The third view is expressed by Zufar and some scholars from Basrah: the other portion is valued for the freeing partner, and he pays it when he has enough funds. The fourth view is stated by Qadi ‘Iyāḍ quoting some scholars: if the freeing partner is poor, his action of freeing his share in the slave is invalid and the slave remains totally a slave. This view is invalid.

If a person is the sole owner of a slave and he sets a portion of the slave free, the slave is completely and immediately freed, without having to work for redeeming any part of such. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī, Mālik, Ahmad and all scholars. Only Abu Ḥanīfah said that he should work to redeem the rest of him and pays the price to his freeing partner. Abu Ḥanīfah’s disciples disagree with him, taking the same view as the majority of scholars. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ says that it is reported that Ṭāwūs, Rabī‘ah, Ḥammād and one report from al-Ḥasan share Abu Ḥanīfah's view. The Zāhirī scholars, al-Sha'bī and 'Ubaydullāh ibn al-Ḥasan al-'Anbarī said that a person may set free any portion of his slave, but God knows best.

The first hadith in this book narrated by Ibn 'Umar, hadith No. 3311 concludes with 'Otherwise, he has freed the share he had'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'This statement appears to be a part of what the Prophet said. This is how it is reported by Mālik and 'Ubaydullāh al-'Umarī, connecting it with the Prophet's statement as its concluding portion. Ayyūb, however, attributes this statement to Nāfi', saying: 'Nāfi' said: "otherwise, he has freed the share he had".' He thus makes this remark separate from the hadith, stated by Nāfi'. On one occasion, Ayyūb said: 'I am not sure whether it is part of the hadith or a useful remark by Nāfi''. Because of this report, Ibn Waḍḍāḥ said: 'This is not the Prophet's word'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said: 'What Mālik and 'Ubaydullāh al-'Umarī said is more preferable; it is certainly better as both are considered by Hadith scholars to be more accurate than Ayyūb in reporting from Nāfi'. Besides, Ayyūb himself is doubtful about it. Further, Yaḥyā ibn Sa'īd reports it from Nāfi' and he says at this point: 'Otherwise, what he did is permissible', thus expressing the same by meaning, not wording. All this is contrary to the view that the slave has to work for his unfreed portion.

The hadiths mention that the valuation should be 'in equity'. This means that it should be fair valuation, without addition or deduction, but God knows best.'

ALLEGIANCE OF THE FREED SLAVE

[3316-5]. (Dar al-Salam 3584) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā narrated:ⁱ he said: I read out to Mālik; from Nāfi'; from Ibn 'Umar; from 'Ā'ishah; that 'She wanted to buy a slave woman and set her free. Her people said: "We will sell her to you on condition that her allegiance remains to us".ⁱⁱ She mentioned this to God's Messenger (peace be upon him) and he said: "This should not stop you. [A freed slave's] allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free".'

[3317-6]. (Dar al-Salam 3585) Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ Layth narrated; from Ibn Shihāb; from 'Urwah; that "Ā'ishah told him that Barīrah came to request 'Ā'ishah's help in paying for her freedom. She had not paid any portion of the price she agreed [with her people]. ‘Ā’ishah said to her: “Go back to your people. If they wish that I pay the agreed sum on your behalf and your allegiance remains to me, I will do that”. Barīrah mentioned this to her people, but they refused. They said: “If she will do that to you for God’s reward, this will be fine, but your allegiance remains to us”. She mentioned this to God’s Messenger who said to her: “Buy her and set her free. Allegiance belongs to the one who frees”. The Prophet then addressed the people. He said: “How come some people set conditions that are not in God’s Book? Whoever makes a condition that is not approved of in God’s Book, [should know that] it is invalid, even though he stipulates it a hundred times. God’s condition has stronger claim and is more binding”.’

[3318-7]. (Dar al-Salam 3586) Abu al-Tāhir narrated to me:^{iv} Ibn Wahb reported; Yūnus reported to me; from Ibn Shihāb; from ‘Urwah ibn al-Zubayr; from ‘Ā’ishah, the Prophet’s wife, that she said: ‘Barīrah came to me and said: “‘Ā’ishah, I have made an agreement with my people to pay nine ouqiyyahs, one each year...”’ giving the same meaning as the hadith narrated by al-Layth. It adds that he [meaning the Prophet] said: ‘This does not prevent you having her [allegiance]. Buy her, then set her free’. He added in the hadith that God’s Messenger addressed the people, praising and glorifying God, then said: ‘Meanwhile...’.

اللَّهُ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فِي النَّاسِ، فَحَمِدَ اللَّهُ وَأَثْنَى عَلَيْهِ، ثُمَّ قَالَ: «أَمَّا بَعْدُ...».

[3319-8]. (Dar al-Salam 3587) Abu Kurayb Muhammad ibn al-‘Alā’ al-Hamdānī narrated:^v Abu Usāmah narrated; Hishām ibn ‘Urwah narrated; my father reported to me; from ‘Ā’ishah. She said: ‘Barīrah entered my place and said: “My people have made agreement with me for nine ouqiyyahs, one each year. Help me raise it”. I said to her: “If your people agree that I count it to them all at once and free you, provided that your allegiance will be to me, I will do that”. She mentioned this to her people, but they insisted that her allegiance must remain to them. She came back and told me this, but I reproached her. She said: “By God, such it was”.’ ‘Ā’ishah added: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) overheard and he asked me. I told him and he said: “Buy her and set her free. Give them the condition of allegiance because a [freed] slave’s allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free”. I did that. God’s Messenger addressed the people that evening, praising God and glorifying Him as He should be glorified, then said: “Meanwhile, how come some people set conditions that are not in God’s Book? Whatever condition that is not approved of in God's Book is invalid, even though it is stipulated a hundred times. God's Book is right, and God's condition is more binding. How come some people among you, any one of them says [to another]: 'Free so-and-so but his allegiance remains mine. A freed slave's allegiance belongs to the one who sets him free'."

وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو كُرَيْبٍ مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْعَلَاءِ الْهَمْدَانِيُّ، حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو أُسَامَةَ، حَدَّثَنَا هِشَامُ بْنُ عُرْوَةَ، أَخْبَرَنِي أَبِي، عَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ: دَخَلْتُ عَلَى بَرِيرَةَ فَقَالَتْ: إِنَّ أَهْلِي كَاتِبُونِي عَلَى تِسْعِ أَوَاقٍ فِي تِسْعِ سِنِينَ: فِي كُلِّ سَنَةٍ أَوْقِيَّةٌ. فَأَعِينِينِي. فَقُلْتُ لَهَا: إِنْ شَاءَ أَهْلُكَ أَنْ أَعِدَّهَا لَهُمْ عِدَّةً وَاحِدَةً، وَأُعْتِقَكَ وَبُكُورَ الْوَلَاءِ لِي، فَعَلْتُ. فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ لِأَهْلِهَا، فَأَبَوْا إِلَّا أَنْ يَكُونَ الْوَلَاءُ لَهُمْ. فَأَتَيْتَنِي، فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ. قَالَتْ: فَأَنْتَهَرْتُهَا. فَقَالَتْ لَهَا اللَّهُ إِذَا قَالَتْ. فَسَمِعَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَسَأَلَنِي فَأَخْبَرْتُهُ فَقَالَ: «اشْتَرِيهَا وَأَعْتِقِيهَا، وَاشْتَرِطِي لَهُمُ الْوَلَاءَ. فَإِنَّ الْوَلَاءَ لِمَنْ أَعْتَقَ». فَفَعَلْتُ. قَالَتْ: ثُمَّ خَطَبَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَشِيَّةً، فَحَمِدَ اللَّهَ وَأَثْنَى عَلَيْهِ بِمَا هُوَ أَهْلُهُ، ثُمَّ قَالَ: أَمَّا بَعْدُ، فَمَا بَالُ أَقْوَامٍ يَشْتَرِطُونَ شُرُوطًا لَيْسَتْ فِي كِتَابِ اللَّهِ؟ مَا كَانَ مِنْ شَرْطٍ لَيْسَ فِي كِتَابِ اللَّهِ عَزَّ وَجَلَّ فَهُوَ بَاطِلٌ، وَإِنْ كَانَ مِائَةً شَرْطٍ. كِتَابُ اللَّهِ أَحَقُّ، وَشَرْطُ اللَّهِ أَوْثَقُ. مَا بَالُ رِجَالٍ مِنْكُمْ يَقُولُ أَحَدُهُمْ: أَعْتَقْتُ فُلَانًا وَالْوَلَاءُ لِي. إِنَّمَا الْوَلَاءُ لِمَنْ أَعْتَقَ.

[3320-9]. (Dar al-Salam 3588) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Abu Kurayb narrated:^{vi} both said: Ibn Numayr narrated [H]. Also, Abu Kurayb narrated; Wakī' narrated [H]. And Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb and Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm narrated; both from Jarīr; all of them from Hishām ibn 'Urwah; with the same chain of transmission: a similar text to Abu Usāmah's narration. However, Jarīr adds in his narration: 'Her husband was a slave. God's Messenger gave her a choice and she chose to be free. Had her husband been a free man, the Prophet would not have given her such a choice'. Their narration does not include: 'Meanwhile'.

وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، وَأَبُو كُرَيْبٍ قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا ابْنُ نُمَيْرٍ، ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو كُرَيْبٍ، حَدَّثَنَا وَكِيعٌ، ح. وَحَدَّثَنَا زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ، وَإِسْحَاقُ بْنُ إِبْرَاهِيمَ، جَمِيعًا عَنْ جَرِيرٍ، كُلُّهُمْ عَنْ هِشَامِ بْنِ عُزْوَةَ، بِهَذَا الْإِسْنَادِ: نَحْوَ حَدِيثِ أَبِي أُسَامَةَ، غَيْرَ أَنَّ فِي حَدِيثِ جَرِيرٍ قَالَ: وَكَانَ زَوْجُهَا عَبْدًا، فَخَيَّرَهَا رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَاخْتَارَتْ نَفْسَهَا. وَلَوْ كَانَ حُرًّا لَمْ يُخَيَّرَهَا. وَلَيْسَ فِي حَدِيثِهِمْ «أَمَّا بَعْدُ».

[3321-10]. (Dar al-Salam 3589) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb and Muhammad ibn al-'Alā' narrated (Zuhayr's text): both said: Abu Mu'āwiyah narrated; Hishām ibn 'Urwah narrated; from 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Qāsim; from his father; from 'Ā'ishah. She said: 'Three issues concerned Barīrah: her people wanted to sell her and stipulate that her allegiance remained to them. I mentioned this to the Prophet, and he said: “Buy her and set her free. Allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free”, and she was set free. God’s Messenger offered her a choice and she chose to be free. People used to give her their charity and she would send us presents. I mentioned this to the Prophet, and he said: “It is a charity given to her, but to you it is a gift. You may eat it”.’

حَدَّثَنَا زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ، وَمُحَمَّدُ بْنُ الْعَلَاءِ، (وَاللَّفْظُ لِرُهَيْبٍ) قَالَا: حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو مُعَاوِيَةَ، حَدَّثَنَا هِشَامُ بْنُ عُزْوَةَ، عَنْ عَبْدِ الرَّحْمَنِ بْنِ الْقَاسِمِ، عَنْ أَبِيهِ، عَنْ عَائِشَةَ قَالَتْ: كَانَ فِي بَرِيرَةَ ثَلَاثُ قَضِيَّاتٍ. أَرَادَ أَهْلُهَا أَنْ يَبِيعُوهَا وَيَشْتَرِطُوا وَلَاءَهَا، فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ لِلنَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَقَالَ: اشْتَرِ بِهَا وَأَعْتِقِهَا، فَإِنَّ الْوَلَاءَ لِمَنْ أَعْتَقَ». قَالَتْ: وَعَتَقْتُ فَخَيَّرَهَا رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَاخْتَارَتْ نَفْسَهَا. قَالَتْ: وَكَانَ النَّاسُ يَتَصَدَّقُونَ عَلَيْهَا، وَتُهْدِي لَنَا. فَذَكَرْتُ ذَلِكَ لِلنَّبِيِّ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ فَقَالَ: «هُوَ عَلَيْهَا صَدَقَةٌ، وَهُوَ لَكُمْ هَدِيَّةٌ فَكُلُوهُ».

[3322-11]. (Dar al-Salam 3590) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Husayn ibn ‘Alī narrated; from Zā’idah; from Simāk; from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Qāsim; from his father; from ‘Āishah; that ‘She bought Barīrah from some Anṣārī people who stipulated that her loyalty remained to them. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said:

“Loyalty belongs to the one who did the favour”. God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) gave her a choice, as her husband was a slave. She sent ‘Ā’ishah some meat as a gift. The Prophet said: “Will you cook this meat for us?” ‘Ā’ishah said: “It was a charity given to Barīrah”. The Prophet said: “It is a charity to her, but to us it is a gift”.’

[3323-12]. (Dar al-Salam 3591-3592) Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated: Muhammad ibn Ja‘far narrated; Shu‘bah narrated; he said: I heard ‘Abd al-Rahmān ibn al-Qāsim say: I heard al-Qāsim narrating from ‘Ā’ishah that ‘She wanted to buy Barīrah in order to set her free, but her people stipulated that her allegiance remained to them. She mentioned this to God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) and he said: “Buy her and set her free. Allegiance belongs to the one who sets a slave free". Some meat was given to God's Messenger as a gift. [People] said to the Prophet: "This is a charity given to Barīrah". He said: "It was a charity to her, but to us it is a gift". She was given a choice.

'Abd al-Raḥmān said: 'Her husband was a free man'.^{vii}

Shu'bah said: 'I then asked him about her husband, but he said that he did not know'.

قَالَ شُعْبَةُ: ثُمَّ سَأَلْتُهُ عَنْ زَوْجِهَا، فَقَالَ: لَا أَدْرِي.

(Dar al-Salam 3594) Abu al-Tāhir narrated to me: Ibn Wahb narrated; Mālik ibn Anas reported from Rabī’ah ibn Abi ‘Abd al-Raḥmān; from al-Qāsim ibn Muhammad; from ‘Ā’ishah the Prophet’s wife, that she said: ‘Three sunnah practices were settled in Barīrah’s case: when she was set free she was given a choice with regard to her husband, and I was given a gift of meat. food available at home. He said: “Did I not see a saucepan with meat being cooked?” They said: “Yes, Messenger of God. This is meat given to Barīrah as a charity, and we disliked serving it to you”. He said: “It is a charity given to her, but to us, it is a gift from her”. The Prophet also said about her: “Allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free”.’

(Dar al-Salam 3595) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah narrated: Khālid ibn Makhlad narrated; from Sulaymān ibn Bilāl; Suhayl ibn Abi Ṣāliḥ narrated to me; from his father; from Abu Hurayrah; he said: “Ā’ishah wanted to buy a slave woman to set her free, but her people stipulated that her allegiance must remain to them. Text Explanation

This chapter provides the hadiths concerning Barīrah. It is a very important case that gives us several rulings and rules. There are certain points in these hadiths on which different and divergent views have been expressed.

1. The first of these is that Barīrah had made an agreement with her people, i.e., her owners, as she was a slave, to buy her freedom. Her people sold her, and she was bought by 'Āishah, with the Prophet's approval. Therefore, a number of scholars maintain that it is permissible to sell a slave who is under an agreement to buy his or her freedom. Scholars who say that such a sale is permissible include 'Aṭā', al-Nakha'ī, Ahmad and Mālik in one reported view of his. Ibn Mas'ūd, Rabī'ah, Abu Ḥanīfah, al-Shāfi'ī, some Mālikī scholars and Mālik in another reported view of his say that it is not permissible to sell such a slave.

Some scholars said that it is permissible to sell such a slave so that he could be freed, but not for service. Scholars who say that it is not permissible to sell a slave who is under agreement to buy his freedom say that the hadith concerning Barīrah shows that she was unable to meet her commitment under the agreement. Therefore, her people terminated the agreement, but God knows best.

2. The second issue is that in hadith No. 3319, the Prophet said to ‘Ā’ishah: ‘Buy her and set her free. Give them the condition of allegiance because a slave’s allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free’. This is problematic because, according to the hadith, ‘Ā’ishah bought Barīrah and agreed the condition that her allegiance remained to her former owners. This condition makes the sale invalid. Moreover, ‘Ā’ishah would be deceiving the sellers giving them a condition which could not be fulfilled and under which they could make no claim. How could the Prophet agree to ‘Ā’ishah doing that? Because of this problem, some scholars, such as Yaḥyā ibn Aktham, reject this hadith in total. He cites in evidence that this sentence does not occur in many narrated versions of the hadith.

The great majority of scholars maintain that the sentence is correct, but they differ in their interpretation of it. Some scholars said that it means: ‘Set a condition of allegiance against them’. These scholars cite in evidence a couple of Qur’anic verses where the same preposition, ‘for’, is used in the sense of ‘against’. This view is reported from al-Shāfi‘ī and al-Muzanī, and it is expressed by others. However, it is not solid because the Prophet censured Barīrah's people's condition. Had he meant in the sense suggested by these scholars, he would not have censured it. Yet, this argument may be countered by saying that the Prophet censured what they initially wanted to stipulate.

A different view suggests that the Prophet's words, 'give them the condition of allegiance', mean tell them the ruling concerning a freed slave's allegiance. It is also suggested that the Prophet's intention was to rebuke them because he had already explained the rule concerning allegiance and that the condition they wanted to stipulate was unlawful. When they insisted on it, in contravention of his order, he said this to 'Ā'ishah, advising her that whether she agreed to the condition or not, it remained invalid and had no effect because the matter was already explained to them. In this sense, the Prophet's words, 'give them the condition', do not signify permissibility.

The more correct interpretation of the hadith is what scholars of our Shāfi'ī School say in books of Fiqh, stating that this condition applies only to this case of 'Ā'ishah, and that the acceptance of this condition and its subsequent invalidity was intentionally allowed in this particular case, which applies to a particular person and has no general or wider application. These scholars say that the purpose of permitting it and then invalidating it was so that it would be more effective in stopping such practice and prohibiting it in any future case. An analogous situation is that of the Prophet's pilgrimage with his Companions. He first permitted them to start their consecration intending the hajj, i.e., the pilgrimage. He then ordered them to stop that and change their intention so that they would perform the 'umrah first. He did so as this was more effective to stop their older practice that prevented the performance of the 'umrah in the hajj season. A minor adverse situation may be tolerated in order to establish or serve a greater interest, but God knows best.

3. A third issue is the establishment of the free slave's allegiance to the one who sets him free. Muslims are unanimous that the allegiance of a freed slave, man or woman, belongs to the one who sets him or her free. Such allegiance establishes a right of inheritance giving the slave's former master a right of inheriting his former slave when he dies. The freed slave does not inherit from his former master, according to the great majority of scholars. Yet some tābi'īn scholars say that he does, meaning that the inheritance between former master and slave works in both ways.

These hadiths provide evidence that no right of allegiance is due from a convert to Islam to the person who convinces him to convert; nor to the one who picks up an abandoned child and brings him up; nor to the one who enters with another into a pledge of mutual support. All this is agreed upon by Mālik, al-Awzā'ī, al-Thawrī, al-Shāfi'ī, Ahmad, Dāwūd and the great majority of scholars. They add, if any such person has no heir, his estate goes to the state treasury. Rabī'ah, al-Layth, Abu Ḥanīfah and his disciples said that a person who adopts Islam through the efforts of someone else owes allegiance to that person. Ishāq ibn Rāhawayh said that the one who picks up an abandoned child and brings him up earns the allegiance of that child. Abu Ḥanīfah also said that allegiance is established through a pledge of mutual support, and that the two parties to the pledge inherit from each other. The evidence in support of the view of the majority of scholars is the statement in the hadiths: 'Allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free'. This is also evidence that if a person frees his slave on condition that the slave owes no allegiance to his former master, this condition is considered invalid, and the allegiance remains in force. This is the view of al-Shāfi'ī and others. They also say that if the slave owner sets him free on condition of the slave paying him an agreed sum of money, allegiance belongs to the freeing master. The same applies in the case of an agreement by which the slave buys his freedom, and also if the slave is a woman who gives birth to her master's child and becomes free when the master dies. In all these cases, the former slave's allegiance belongs to the master who set him or her free. Allegiance also belongs to the Muslim from an unbeliever slave and the opposite is also true, even though they do not inherit from each other in this last case.

4. The fourth issue relates to the fact that the Prophet gave Barīrah the choice to terminate her marriage. Muslims are unanimous that if a slave woman becomes completely free and she is married to a slave, she has the free choice of terminating her marriage. If her husband is a free man, then she has no such choice according to Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars. Abu Ḥanīfah said that she has the same choice based on the report that suggests that her husband was a free man. Muslim mentions this report, in hadith No. 3323 as narrated by Shu‘bah from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Qāsim. However, Shu‘bah said: ‘I then asked him about her husband, and he said that he did not know’. The majority of scholars argue that it is just the same case. The best-known versions in Saḥīḥ Muslim and other hadith anthologies is that her husband was a slave. Eminent hadith scholars say that the report suggesting that Barīrah’s husband was a free man is wrong, odd and rejected, because it is contrary to what is well established in the narrations by more reliable people. This is further confirmed by what ‘Āishah says in hadith No. 3320: ‘Her husband was a slave. God’s Messenger gave her a choice and she chose to be free. Had her husband been a free man, the Prophet would not have given her such a choice’.

Her statement provides two pieces of evidence. The first is that she says that Barīrah’s husband was a slave. She should know as she was the main person involved in the case. The second evidence is her saying: ‘Had her husband been a free man, the Prophet would not have given her such a choice’. Such a statement is hardly ever stated by anyone without relying on a clear ruling. Besides, a marriage is binding, and it can only be terminated by a clear religious ruling. The option to terminate is confirmed in the case of the freed woman being married to a slave. Therefore, the case of her being married to a free man remains as it is. Besides, neither harm nor shame applies to her, as a free woman, in being married to a free man, while such harm occurs if her husband is a slave. Therefore, Islamic law gives her the option to terminate the marriage in order to remove such harm. Scholars add that this hadith, in its various versions, is narrated by 'Ā'ishah and Ibn 'Abbās. In the case of Ibn 'Abbās, all narrations from him say that Barīrah's husband was a slave, and most narrations from 'Ā'ishah also confirm the same. Hence, this must be considered far more likely, but God knows best.

5. The Prophet makes it clear that any condition that does not have a basis in God's Book, the Qur'an, is invalid. In hadith No. 3319, the Prophet says: 'Whatever condition that is not approved of in God's Book is invalid, even though it is stipulated a hundred times'. A more literal translation would say: 'even though it has a hundred conditions'. Al-Nawawī says: 'This means that if the condition is stated a hundred times for re-emphasis, it remains invalid'. This is how the Prophet states it in the earlier hadith, No. 3317: 'Whoever makes a condition that is not approved in God's Book, [should know that] it is invalid, even though he stipulates it a hundred times'. Scholars say that conditions in sales and similar matters are of different types:

- i. A condition required by the contract, such as a condition requiring delivery to the buyer, or that the fruits remain on the trees until the time of collection, or that faulty items are returnable.
- ii. A condition that serves an interest, or being a necessity, such as conditions of mortgage, guarantor, option, deferment of payment, etc.

These two types are permissible, and they do not affect the validity of the contract. There is no disagreement on this point.

- iii. A condition of freeing the sold slave, man or woman. This is also permissible according to the majority of scholars, on the basis of this hadith narrated by 'Ā'ishah and to encourage freeing slaves.
 - iv. Other conditions such as one that makes an exception of one aspect of benefit, or whereby the vendor sells the buyer another thing, or that he lets him an apartment or a house, or similar conditions. All such conditions are invalid, and the contract is deemed null and void, according to the majority of scholars. Ahmad says that the contract is not invalidated by one such condition only. There must be two invalid conditions. But, God knows best.
6. The Prophet says about the meat given to Barīrah as ṣadaqah, or charity: 'It is a charity given to her, but to us, it is a gift from her'. This is clear evidence that when the description changes, the ruling also changes. Thus, a rich person can buy it from a poor one and may eat it if the owner gives it as a gift. It is also permissible for a Hashimite and others to whom zakat is not payable in the first place, but God knows best.

Further, this hadith concerning Barīrah and her case, in its different versions, highlights many interesting points and various rules. Ibn Khuzaymah and Ibn Jarīr wrote about it extensively. Here is a list of the rules based on it:

1. Allegiance, in the sense of 'right of inheritance', belongs to the person who sets the slave free. No allegiance belongs to anyone else. Allegiance is due to a Muslim by a non-Muslim, and the reverse is true.
2. An agreement between master and slave whereby the slave buys his freedom is perfectly permissible. It is also permissible to terminate an agreement with a slave to buy his freedom if he is unable to fulfil the conditions. This is taken by some scholars as indicating the permissibility of selling a slave who is bound by such an agreement. It is permissible to make such an agreement with a slave woman, as it is permissible with a male slave. It is permissible to make such an agreement with a married slave woman. A slave who enters into an agreement to buy his freedom does not become free by such an agreement. He remains a slave as long as he owes any amount, however small, as it is clearly stated in a well-known hadith related by Abu Dāwūd and others. This is the view of al-Shāfi'ī, Mālik and the great majority of scholars. Qadi 'Iyāḍ reports that some early scholars were of the view that the slave becomes free once he has made the agreement, but the sum agreed remains a debt he owes. He does not revert to slavery in any case. Some scholars consider that he becomes free when he has paid half the agreed sum, and the remainder becomes a loan he owes. It is reported that ‘Umar, Ibn Mas‘ūd and Sharīḥ expressed the same view but required payment of one-third of the agreed sum. ‘Aṭā’ has the same view, but stipulating the payment of three-quarters of the agreed amount. The agreement for self-buying should require payment of the agreed sum in instalments. In some of the hadiths in this chapter, Barīrah says that her people agreed with her the sum of nine ouqīyyahs,^{ix} to be paid over nine years, one each year. According to al-Shāfi‘ī school, it may not be paid in one sum; it must be a minimum of two instalments. Mālik and the majority of scholars say that it is valid in instalments and also in one payment. If a married slave woman regains her freedom, she has the choice to retain or terminate her marriage.

3. Conditions based on the principles of Islamic law are valid. Otherwise, they are invalid.
4. Charity, or ṣadaqah, is permissible for those allied to the Quraysh tribe. It is permissible to accept a gift given by a poor person or a freed slave. Charity is forbidden for God’s Messenger to take. ‘Ā’ishah said to him: ‘You do not eat charity’. According to our school, it was forbidden for the Prophet to take obligatory zakat, and this is unanimously agreed upon. The same applies to voluntary charity, according to the more correct view. Charity, or ṣadaqah, is not forbidden to the people of the Quraysh except for the Hāshim and al-Muṭṭalib clans. ‘Ā’ishah belonged to the Quraysh and she accepted the meat from Barīrah on the understanding that the ruling concerning charity applied to it. As such, it was permissible for her but not for the Prophet. The Prophet did not object to her assumption. It is permissible for a man to enquire about what he sees in his own home. This does not contradict what is mentioned in the hadith narrated by Umm Zar‘, as she says: ‘He may not enquire about what he used to see in his own home’. This means that a man should not ask about something which used to be in his home but is gone. He should not ask where it has gone. In this case the saucepan and the meat were still available in the Prophet’s home. Hence, the Prophet asked them about it in order to explain to them its status. He knew well that they did not withhold the meat from him for any reason other than their assumption that it was not lawful for him. He, therefore, wanted to explain the matter to them.

5. It is permissible to use rhyming phrases in one’s speech, provided that it comes naturally, unaffected [as this is used in the original Arabic text]. A slave who has entered into an agreement to buy his freedom should be financially helped. A woman of sound mind may use her own money to buy, set a slave free, or for other purposes, as she pleases. If a married slave woman is sold, her sale does not count as divorce, and it does not cause the termination of her marriage. This is the view of the majority of scholars. Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib, however, considered it a divorce. Ibn ‘Abbās is reported to have said that it terminates her marriage. The hadiths stating Barīrah's case rejects both these views, because Barīrah was given the option to stay with her husband or not. It is permissible for a slave under an agreement to buy himself to beg in order to raise the money needed.

6. When two adverse situations occur, the lesser one is tolerated in order to repel the greater one. This also means that a minor adversity is tolerated to repel a major one. This has been explained in the discussion of the condition stipulated by Barīrah's people to retain her allegiance. It is permissible for a judge to intercede with the party in whose favour a judgement is made on behalf of the other party, and to intercede with a woman to stay with her husband. A freed slave woman may terminate her marriage, even though the termination leaves an adverse effect on her husband who loves her much. Barīrah's husband cried when she refused to stay with him. It is permissible that a freed slave willingly serves the one who freed him. It is recommended when a contravention of the rules or some important matter occurs which needs explanation that the ruler or the person in charge should address the people and explain the proper Islamic ruling on the matter. He should censure any practice that is contrary to Islamic law. When doing what is recommended, the ruler should maintain proper values and give gentle and kind admonition. We note that the Prophet said to the people in his address: 'How come some people stipulate conditions that have no basis in God's Book?'. He did not speak to the individual who stipulated the condition because his purpose would be achieved and others would be similarly alerted without giving undue publicity to a particular incident.

7. A public address should start by praising God and glorifying Him as He should be glorified. It is recommended that after praising God and glorifying Him in a public address to use the words ammā ba'd, if the speech is in Arabic. These words are translated as 'meanwhile'. The Prophet often used these words in his speeches as we explained on more than one occasion. Putting clear emphasis on the removal of what is unacceptable and showing it as totally distasteful. But God knows best.

In hadith No. 3317, the Prophet says that 'God's condition has a stronger claim'. It is suggested that he meant 'Treat them as your brethren in faith and your proteges', (33: 5) and 'Whatever God's Messenger gives you, take it', (59: 7) Qadi 'Iyād said: 'To me, the reference is to the Prophet's statement: "Allegiance belongs to the one who sets the slave free".'

In the same hadith, Barīrah's people said to her when she told them of 'Ā'ishah's offer: 'If she will do that to you for God's reward, this will be fine'. They meant that if 'Ā'ishah would pay the sum agreed for Barīrah's freedom seeking only God's reward, without having Barīrah's allegiance, it would be fine with them.

Barīrah's husband's name was Mughīth, but God knows best.

PROHIBITION OF SELLING AND GIFTING ALLEGIANCE

[3327-16]. (Dar al-Salam 3596) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā al-Tamīmī narrated: Sulaymān ibn Bilāl narrated; from ‘Abdullāh ibn Dīnār; from Ibn ‘Umar; that ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) prohibited selling [a former slave’s] allegiance and giving it as a gift’.

Muslim said: ‘In this particular hadith, all people rely on ‘Abdullāh ibn Dīnār’.

Text Explanation

This hadith states a clear prohibition of selling or gifting a former slave's allegiance so that he would be inherited by someone other than the one who actually freed him. It makes it clear that neither sale nor gift is valid. The allegiance cannot be transferred from the one who is entitled to it. It sticks to him like a person's relation to his parents. This is agreed upon by scholars of the early and later generations. However, a small number of early scholars said that this transfer of allegiance was permissible, but perhaps they were unaware of this hadith.

- i. This hadith is narrated in all six authentic hadith anthologies, but with one or the other of its chains of transmission. Only Muslim combines all these chains as we see here.

PROHIBITION OF CHANGING ALLEGIANCE

عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَلَى كُلِّ بَطْنٍ عُقُولَهُ. ثُمَّ كَتَبَ «أَنَّهُ لَا يَجِلُّ لِمُسْلِمٍ أَنْ

[3333-20]. (Dar al-Salam 3601) Abu Kurayb narrated:ⁱⁱⁱ Abu Mu‘āwiyah narrated: al-A‘mash narrated; from Ibrāhīm al-Taymī; from his father. He said: “Alī ibn Abi Ṭālib addressed us and said: “Whoever alleges that we have something to recite other than God’s Book and this sheet (he said: to a sheet hanging from the sheathe of his sword) is a liar. It states the ages of camels to be given in zakat, and some indemnities for injuries. It also mentions that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: ‘Madinah is a sanctity between ‘Ayr and Thawr. Whoever commits an offence in it or shelters an offender incurs God’s curse and the curse of the angels and all mankind. God will not accept from him anything in indemnity or atonement on the Day of Judgement. A pledge given by the Muslim community is one pledge; it may be given by their lowest in rank. Whoever claims himself to belong to anyone other than his own father, or affiliates himself to any other than the people to whom he owes allegiance, incurs God's curse and the curse of the angels and all mankind. God will not accept from him anything in indemnity or atonement on the Day of Judgement'."

Text Explanation

These hadiths state the Prophet's prohibition of a freed slave attaching his allegiance to anyone other than the person who freed him. This is certainly forbidden because it deprives the person who did him a great favour of his right. Allegiance, which gives the person who sets a slave free a right of inheritance from that slave, should he die before him, is akin to a family relation. Hence, it is forbidden to disregard it in the same way as it is forbidden to disregard one's family status and affiliate oneself to anyone other than one's own real father.

In hadith No. 3330, the Prophet says: 'Whoever gives his allegiance to some people without permission from the ones to whom he owes allegiance...'. Some scholars cite this as evidence that it is permissible to give such allegiance to others if the ones to whom one owes allegiance permit this. The correct view agreed upon by the majority of scholars is that it is forbidden even if such permission is granted. This is the same as it is forbidden to claim to be the son of someone other than one's own father, even if the father permits such a claim. They understand the restriction in the hadith, i.e., 'without permission by...', as a reference to the majority of such cases because such claims are mostly done without any prior permission. Therefore, the restriction has no effect. There are similar cases in the Qur'an where a qualification merely mentions the predominant case, such as: 'Forbidden to you in marriage are your mothers... and your stepdaughters who are your foster children...' (4: 23); 'Do not kill your children because of your poverty'. (6: 151) Needless to say, killing one's child for any reason is forbidden. Hence the qualification, 'because of your poverty', has no practical effect.

In the same hadith, No. 3329: 'The Prophet (peace be upon him) wrote that each clan bear their blood money'. This means that the blood money to be paid for accidental killing or manslaughter is payable by the perpetrator's immediate relatives, who are normally his heirs, i.e., his parents, grandparents, sons, grandsons and even the grades above or lower than these.

أَوْ أَلْفَ دِينَارٍ.

Text Explanation

The hadiths in this chapter speak about the merit of freeing slaves and that it is considered one of the best things a person can do. It is an action that leads to salvation from punishment in hell and admittance into heaven. The hadiths show that it is desirable to free the entire body of the slave, so that one chooses a person who has all his body intact, not a castrated one, or one who has lost a limb or some other organ. Yet even if one frees a castrated slave or one with a missing limb, one earns rich reward from God. However, the reward for freeing a healthy and perfectly bodied slave is much better. Needless to say, the best slave to free is the best and highest in price, as explained at the beginning of the Book of Faith.

Abu Dāwūd, al-Tirmidhī, al-Nasā'ī and others narrated from Sālim ibn Abi al-Ja'd, from Abu Umāmah and other Companions of the Prophet that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: 'When any Muslim man frees a Muslim slave, the freed one will be his own saviour from the Fire, with every part of the freed slave saving a part of him. When any Muslim man frees two Muslim women slaves, they will be his saviour from the Fire, with every part of them saving a part of him. When any Muslim woman frees a Muslim slave woman, the slaved woman will be her saviour from the Fire, with every part of her [i.e., the freed slave woman] saving a part of her [i.e., the woman setting her free]'. Al-Tirmidhī said that this is a good, authentic hadith.

He and others said that this hadith shows that freeing a male slave is more preferable to freeing a slave woman. Qadi 'Iyāḍ said:

Scholars differ as to who is better to set free: slave men or slave women. Some said females are better to free because when a slave woman is set free, her children are free whether she marries a free man or a slave. Other scholars said that freeing male slaves is preferable as indicated in this hadith. Moreover, males provide benefits which females do not, such as serving as witnesses or judges and going on jihad as well as other matters that are special for men, either from a religious point of view or life practice. Furthermore, some slave women prefer not to be freed because they cannot provide for themselves. This is not the case with male slaves. This view is the correct one.

These hadiths qualify the freed slave as being a believer. This shows that this particular merit depends on freeing a slave who is a believer. To free an unbeliever slave certainly has its merits, and there is no disagreement on this point, but it is less meritorious than freeing a believer slave. Therefore, scholars are unanimous that in the case of indemnity for accidental killing, the freed slave must be a believer. Qadi 'Iyāḍ reports that Mālik considered that a slave with a higher price is preferable, even if he is an unbeliever. However, a number of his disciples, as well as other scholars, disagree with Mālik on this point. This is more valid.

FREEING ONE'S PARENT FROM SLAVERY

[3338-25]. (Dar al-Salam 3606-3607) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah and Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated: both said; Jarīr narrated; from Suhayl; from his father; from Abu Hurayrah. He said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “No child repays a parent except in the case when the child finds his father in slavery, buys him and sets him free”.’

In Ibn Abi Shaybah’s narration: ‘repays his parent’.

وَفِي رِوَايَةِ ابْنِ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ «وَلَدٌ وَالِدُهُ».

Abu Kurayb narrated: Wakī‘ narrated [H]. Also, Ibn Numayr narrated; my father narrated [H]. And, ‘Amr al-Nāqid narrated to me; Abu Ahmad al-Zubayrī narrated; all of them from Sufyān; from Suhayl; with the same chain of transmission: the same text, but they said: ‘repays his parent’.

سُهَيْلٍ، بِهَذَا الْإِسْنَادِ: مِثْلَهُ. وَقَالُوا: «وَلَدٌ وَالِدَهُ».

Text Explanation

The hadith means that what a parent does for their child, looking after it and taking care of it is too great for any son or daughter to repay, except in this specified case of freeing the parent from slavery.

Scholars differ concerning the freeing of relatives when they are owned. Zāhirī scholars say that no relative, whether father or son or any other, is freed merely by being owned by a relative. It is necessary to initiate the freeing of that person. They rely on this hadith as their evidence. The great majority of scholars say that the slave's freedom automatically takes place once ownership by such a relation has taken place. This applies to fathers, mothers, grandfathers and grandmothers and even those who are a grade or more higher, and also to sons and daughters as well as their male and female children and grandchildren. This is true whether they are Muslim or non-Muslim, near or distant, heirs or not. In short, the freedom applies to those in the direct line of ancestry.

Scholars differ in their views regarding other relatives. Al-Shāfi‘ī and his disciples said that no one other than those in the direct line [i.e., parents, grandparents, children and grandchildren, and those higher or lower] is automatically freed when they happen to be owned by such relatives, not even siblings. Mālik said that siblings, i.e., brothers and sisters, are also automatically freed by mere ownership. Another view reported from Mālik is that all unmarriageable relatives, i.e., maḥrams, are freed by ownership. A third view reported from Mālik is the same as the view of the Shāfi‘ī School. Abu Ḥanīfah said that all unmarriageable relatives are freed by mere ownership.

The majority of scholars explain the hadith mentioned in this chapter as meaning that when a person has taken steps to buy a person whom he is obliged to set free, that person’s freedom is attached to the purchase, but God knows best.

Text Explanation

Qadi ‘Iyād mentions one explanation of these sales. Our Shāfi‘ī scholars provide three different versions in explaining the touch transaction. One of these is al-Shāfi‘ī’s own: ‘The seller brings a folded robe, or brings it in darkness, and the buyer touches it. The seller then says to him: "I sell it to you for so much on condition that your touch is sufficient for a look, and you have no option of return when you have seen it". Another way is that the two parties agree that the mere touch concludes the sale, as the seller says to the buyer: 'If you touch it, you have bought it'. The third way is that the vendor sells the article to the buyer on condition that once he has touched it, the option to withdraw is no longer operative. Such a transaction is invalid in all its three versions.

The casting transaction also has three different versions. The first concludes the sale by the very casting of the article. This is al-Shāfi'ī's explanation. In the second version, the vendor says to the buyer: 'I sell it to you, and once I cast it to you, you no longer have any option because the sale is completed'. The third is by casting a little stone. We will explain this in the next chapter, God willing. These transactions are invalid because of the lack of clarity.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of the first hadith, No. 3339, mentions Mālik from Muhammad ibn Yaḥyā ibn Ḥabbān from al-A'raj. This is how it occurs in all manuscripts in our areas. Qadi 'Iyāḍ mentions that in their copies quoting 'Abd al-Ghāfir al-Fārisī the chain of transmission adds Nāfi', so as to make it: 'Mālik from Nāfi' from Muhammad ibn Yaḥyā ibn Ḥabbān'. Qadi 'Iyāḍ comments: 'This is wrong. There is no mention of Nāfi' in this hadith. Mālik does not mention Nāfi' in the reporting of this hadith in his book al-Muwaṭṭa".

INVALID DECEPTIVE SALES

[3342-4]. (Dar al-Salam 3614) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah nar-rated:ⁱ ‘Abdullāh ibn Idrīs, Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd and Abu Usāmah narrated; from ‘Ubaydullāh [H]. Also, Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated to me (his text); Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd narrated; from ‘Ubaydullāh; Abu al-Zinād narrated to me; from al-A‘raj; from Abu Hurayrah. He said: ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) prohibited the sale effected by the casting of a stone and the sale lacking clarity’.

وَحَدَّثَنَا أَبُو بَكْرِ بْنُ أَبِي شَيْبَةَ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ اللَّهِ بْنُ إِدْرِيسَ، وَيَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، وَأَبُو أُسَامَةَ عَنْ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ، ح. وَحَدَّثَنِي زُهَيْرُ بْنُ حَرْبٍ (وَاللَّفْظُ لَهُ)، حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى بْنُ سَعِيدٍ، عَنْ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ، حَدَّثَنِي أَبُو الزَّيَّادِ، عَنِ الْأَعْرَجِ، عَنْ أَبِي هُرَيْرَةَ قَالَ: نَهَى رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَنْ بَيْعِ الْحَصَاةِ، وَعَنْ بَيْعِ الْعَرَرِ.

Text Explanation

There are three forms explaining a transaction made with the throwing of a small stone. The first is that the seller says to the buyer: ‘I am selling you one of these robes, which is the one hit by this stone I am about to throw; or I am selling you a portion of this land marked by the point where this stone falls'. The second form is that the seller says: 'I am selling this to you, and you have the option until I cast this stone'. The third form is that the two parties agree that the mere casting of the stone concludes the transaction. Thus, the vendor says to the buyer: 'when I throw the stone on this robe, it is sold to you at such-and-such a price'.

The prohibition of sale transactions that lack clarity is a major heading in the Book of Sales. This is the reason why Muslim places it at this early point. It includes a great variety of cases, such as selling a run-away slave whose residence is unknown, selling what is non-existent, or unknown, or what the seller is unable to deliver, or what the seller does not own. Likewise, it includes selling fish in a large body of water, milk which is still in an udder, an unborn calf, an undefined heap of articles, one robe out of a quantity of robes, one sheep out of a flock, etc. All such transactions are invalid because they are unclear and as such lack clarity.

Some lack of clarity is tolerated in sales if it is unavoidable, such as selling a house without a clear idea about its foundation, because the foundation cannot be seen, and it forms part of the building. The same is the case of selling a pregnant sheep with a clearly full udder. There is a broad consensus that it is permissible to conduct transactions that involve a small measure of uncertainty, such as selling a stuffed coat or quilt, even if the buyer cannot see what it is stuffed with, but it is not permissible to sell the stuffing on its own. It is also unanimously agreed upon that it is permissible to let a house, a horse or some article for a lunar month, although such a month may be 29 or 30 days. Likewise, it is agreed that a public bath may be used for a set fee, although people differ in how much water they use and how long they stay. Further, it is permissible to buy a drink from a large container, although the amount of the drink is unspecified. By contrast, it is agreed that unborn calves and birds in the sky cannot be sold.

Scholars agree that the reason for the prohibition of such sale transactions is the lack of clarity. Likewise, they agree to the validity of similar sales, despite having an element of uncertainty because such an element is small and cannot be avoided without undertaking some hardship, while such transactions are necessary. In some cases, scholars differ in their verdicts, with some saying that a case is permissible and others saying it is not. This is due to how they estimate the lack of clarity: if they think that it is trifling, they treat it as non-existent, while those who consider it important judge the transaction as invalid, but God knows best.

It should be stated that sales by touch, casting, future pregnancy, stone casting and renting a male animal for mating are all transactions that lack clarity and are unlawful in Islam. However, they are specifically mentioned because they were common in pre-Islamic days, but God knows best.

THE PROHIBITION OF SELLING UNBORN CALVES

[3343-5]. (Dar al-Salam 3615) Yaḥyā ibn Yaḥyā and Muhammad ibn Rumḥ narrated:ⁱ both said: al-Layth reported [H]. Also, Qutaybah ibn Sa'īd narrated; Layth narrated; from Nāfi'; from 'Abdullāh; from God's Messenger (peace be upon him) that 'He prohibited the sale of an unborn calf'.

[3344-6]. (Dar al-Salam 3616) Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb and Muhammad ibn al-Muthannā narrated to me (Zuhayr's text):ⁱⁱ both said: Yaḥyā (who is al-Qaṭṭān) narrated; from 'Ubaydullāh; Nāfi' reported to me; from Ibn 'Umar that 'In pre-Islamic days, people made transactions selling a camel up to the time when the unborn calf gets pregnant. This means that a she-camel gives birth and the one born to her becomes pregnant. God's Messenger prohibited such a transaction'.

حَدَّثَنَا يَحْيَى (وَهُوَ الْقَطَّانُ)، عَنْ عُبَيْدِ اللَّهِ، أَخْبَرَنِي تَافِعٌ، عَنْ ابْنِ
عُمَرَ، قَالَ: كَانَ أَهْلُ الْجَاهِلِيَّةِ يَتَّبِعُونَ لَحْمَ الْجَزُورِ إِلَى حَبْلِ الْحَبَلَةِ .
وَحَبْلُ الْحَبَلَةِ أَنْ تُنْتَجَ النَّاقَةُ، ثُمَّ تَحْمِلَ الَّتِي تُتَجَثُّ، فَتَهَاكُمُ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ عَنْ ذَلِكَ.

Text Explanation

Scholars differ as to the meaning of selling an unborn calf. Some said that it is a transaction where the price is deferred until a certain she-camel has given birth and the calf born to her grows up and gives birth. Muslim mentions this explanation in this hadith as stated by Ibn 'Umar. This is the explanation agreed upon by Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī and many others.

Other scholars said that it refers to selling the unborn calf and concluding the transaction immediately. This is the explanation of Abu 'Ubaydah Ma'mar ibn al-Muthannā, his colleague Abu 'Ubayd al-Qāsim ibn Sallām, other linguists, as well as Ahmad ibn Ḥanbal and Ishāq ibn Rāhawayh.

This second explanation is closer to the linguistic meaning of the hadith, but the hadith is narrated by Ibn 'Umar and he opted for the first explanation. He certainly knows the context better. According to al-Shāfi'ī and leading scholars of methodology, an explanation stated by the narrator takes priority, unless it is contrary to the apparent meaning.

This sale is invalid whichever explanation is given to it. On the basis of the first explanation, it is invalid because it is a transaction stating a price payable at an unknown date, and the date is a factor in determining the price. According to the second explanation, it is selling something which is non-existent, unknown, unowned by the seller and undeliverable, but God knows best.

THE PROHIBITION OF OUTBIDDING AND UNFAIR TRANSACTIONS

Text Explanation

In Hadith No. 3345, the Prophet prohibits offering to sell something to someone who has already agreed a deal. For example, one says to a buyer within the time allowed for return: 'Do not go ahead with this purchase, and I will sell the same article to you for a lesser price, or I will sell you a better article for the same price or make a similar offer. This is certainly forbidden. It is also forbidden to buy something when another person has made a purchase deal to buy it. Thus, he says to the seller: 'Do not go ahead with this sale and I will pay you more for the same article', or he makes an offer along the same lines.

In hadith No. 3347, the Prophet orders that no one should make an offer to buy what his brother is buying. This refers to the case when the owner has agreed a price for some article with a prospective buyer, but the sale has not yet been concluded. A third person comes in and says to the owner that he will buy it. This is forbidden when the price has been agreed and settled. If an article is still available to the highest bidder, making an increased offer is not forbidden.

These hadiths mention the prohibition of making a counter proposal of marriage and the case of a woman seeking the divorce of another woman. We have discussed these cases in the Book of Marriage.

It is unanimously agreed upon that outbidding someone else in a deal of sale or purchase is forbidden. If someone disregards the prohibition and makes such a deal, he has committed an act of disobedience, but the new transaction takes effect. This is the view of al-Shāfi'ī, Abu Ḥanīfah and others. Dāwūd, however, says that the deal does not take effect. Mālik is reported to express two views along the same lines as the two we mentioned. The majority of Mālikī scholars suggest that sale and purchase for an increased offer are permissible. Al-Shāfi‘ī said that some early scholars discourage this.

‘Deceptive outbidding’ is to make a higher bid for an article, with no intention of buying it, but instead to simply deceive someone else who wants it, encouraging him to increase his offer and buy it. This is forbidden, according to the unanimous verdict of scholars. Yet the transaction itself is valid. The sin involved applies to the one making the deceptive bid if the vendor is unaware of it. If both the bidder and the vendor are involved in it, both incur a sin. The buyer has no option to return the goods, if the vendor was not involved in the deceptive outbidding. The same is also the case if the vendor was involved because the buyer was not sufficiently alert. However, one report suggests that Mālik considers the sale invalid because of the fact that the Prophet prohibited it.

In hadith No. 3349, the Prophet says: ‘Do not retain milk in camel and sheep udders’. This is an order not to keep the milk in the udders of such animals when intending to sell them, so that a prospective buyer may think that they habitually produce plenty of milk. People used to tie the nipples of the she-camel or the sheep for two or three days so that its udder became overfull. The buyer might then offer a better price thinking that it habitually produced plenty of milk.

It should be clear that milk retention in udders is forbidden, whether the animal is a camel, cow, sheep, horse, donkey or any other, because it is a form of cheating. However, its sale is valid, despite the prohibition. The buyer is given both options of retaining what he buys or returning it. We will clarify this in the next chapter.

The hadiths make it clear that cheating in everything is forbidden, but the sale is valid nevertheless. It also shows that cheating by action is forbidden in the same way as cheating by word.

Transmission

The chain of transmission of hadith No. 3348 includes: ‘Shu‘bah narrat-ed; from al-‘Alā’ and Suhayl; from their father; from Abu Hurayrah’. This is how it occurs in all manuscripts, ‘from their father’. This is problematic because al-‘Alā’ is Ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, while Suhayl is Ibn Abi Ṣāliḥ. The two are not brothers, and no one can be referred to as ‘their father’. The chain of transmission should have said ‘from their fathers’, in the plural. Qadi ‘Iyāḍ mentions that according to all scholars in their areas the reference is to ‘their father’, and this is incorrect because they were not brothers. He adds that in some narrations, it occurs as ‘their fathers’ and this is the correct way.

فَاشْتَرَى مِنْهُ، فَإِذَا أَتَى سَيِّدُهُ السُّوقَ، فَهُوَ بِالْخِيَارِ».

Text Explanation

The hadiths in this chapter make it clear that it is forbidden to intercept goods intended to be sold in the markets. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī, Mālik and the majority of scholars. Abu Ḥanīfah and al-Awzā‘ī said that such interception is permissible if it does not have an adverse effect on people. If it has, then it is reprehensible. The first view is the correct one because of the clear statement of prohibition. Our scholars say that the prohibition is conditional on knowing that such interception is forbidden. If a person has no intention of interception but goes out for some business of his own and buys such goods, two views are expressed about its prohibition by our Shāfi'ī scholars and also by Mālikī scholars. The more correct view, according to our scholars, is that it is also prohibited because the effect is the same. If one meets travelling traders and sells them, there are two views about its prohibition. If we adopt the verdict of prohibition, and the sale is made, it is valid.

Scholars say that the reason for the prohibition is to prevent harming the person who is bringing the goods and to protect him from anyone who tries to cheat him. Imam Abu 'Abdullāh al-Mazarī said:

It may be suggested that the reason for prohibiting an urban person selling on behalf of a Bedouin aims to make it easier for the towns people and the possibility of unfairness to the Bedouin. While the prohibition of goods interception aims to prevent unfairness to the Bedouin, as the Prophet says that if 'the original owner then comes to the market, he has a choice'. The answer to this is that in such matters, Islam considers people's interests. This requires that the interests of a group is preferred to the interests of an individual. It is not a case of one against one. When a Bedouin sells his own goods, all people in the market will benefit as they buy at a lower price, and this gives the benefit to all the people of the town. Therefore, Islamic law attaches more importance to the interests of the towns people against the Bedouin. In the case of intercepting the goods before reaching the market, only the one who intercepts has the benefit, which is a case of one against one. Hence, no interest is served by allowing such interception. There is another reason which is the fact that the people in the market are adversely affected as only the interceptor gets the cheaper price, and he prevents their access to the merchandise. They are more in number than the interceptor. Hence, Islam takes their side against the interceptor. Thus, there is no contradiction between the two cases. Both serve the interests of the community, but God knows best.

Hadith No. 3355 mentions that if 'the original owner then comes to the market, he has a choice'. Our scholars say that the seller does not have a choice until he has been to the marketplace and has found out the prevailing price. If the interceptor had bought from him at less than the prevailing price, he certainly has a choice, based on whether he believes the interceptor has lied to him about the price or not. If he sold the goods at the same market price or higher, then there are two views. The more correct one is that he has no choice because he has not been defrauded. (Note: surely his choice was never removed. All in all, although I've gone over this two/three times, I still have some uncertainty about the phrase 'he has a choice' – in both the hadiths and explanations.) The other view is that he has a choice because the hadith gives a general statement.

Clarification

The prohibition of meeting those who bring goods to sell in a town before they arrive and to buy the goods from them looks at the interests of the people generally. This used to be done with the aim of securing some profit for the interceptor who buys the goods at a lower price and then sells them in the marketplace, adding a margin of profit. This is prohibited because it involves a disadvantage for the original owner who sells at a lower price and a disadvantage for the townspeople who will buy at a higher price. In today's world, there are some forms of this, but there are other forms to which the prohibition may not apply. Take for example a businessman travelling to another country, visiting manufacturers and placing an order for a quantity of a particular product. He is an importer who makes profit, but his action does not seem to be included in the prohibition because the chance is available to other importers to do the same. Moreover, the manufacturer can resort to a different arrangement, making export agreements with business people in the country or city where his goods are needed.

As conditions change, scholars need to look at the reasons behind the prohibition of certain forms of business and determine whether these reasons apply to certain business practices. If they do, then the scholars should rule that these practices are unlawful from the Islamic point of view. One form which merits careful looking into is online trading which has had, and continues to have, a serious effect on normal business and trading. The Islamic principles that outlaw certain types of sales, due to the deception or absence of clarity involved, may be applicable to online trading, particularly where the quality of the goods available cannot be assessed until they have been used for some time. When they are discovered to be of low quality, the period allowed for returning them might have lapsed.

THE PROHIBITION OF A TOWNSMAN SELLING FOR A BEDOUIN

[3356-18]. (Dar al-Salam 3628) Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah, ‘Amr al-Nāqid and Zuhayr ibn Ḥarb narrated:ⁱ they said: Sufyān narrated; from al-Zuhrī; from Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib; from Abu Hurayrah; attributing it to the Prophet (peace be upon him). He said: ‘Let no townsman sell on behalf of a Bedouin’.

Zuhayr said that the Prophet (peace be upon him) ‘Prohibited that a townsman should sell on behalf of a Bedouin’.

[3357-19]. (Dar al-Salam 3629) Ishāq ibn Ibrāhīm and ‘Abd ibn Ḥumayd narrated:ⁱⁱ both said: ‘Abd al-Razzāq narrated; Ma‘mar reported; from Ibn Ṭāwūs; from his father; from Ibn ‘Abbās. Text Explanation

These hadiths state the prohibition of a townsman undertaking the selling of goods for a Bedouin. This is the view of al-Shāfi‘ī and the majority of scholars. Our scholars said that it refers to a stranger coming from a desert area or from another town bringing some goods that are commonly needed by people, intending to sell these goods at the price prevailing on the day. A townsman may say to him: ‘Leave it with me and I will sell it for you gradually at a higher price’. Our scholars say that this arrangement is forbidden under such conditions and, also, provided that the person concerned is aware of the prohibition. If he is unaware of it, or if the goods are not generally needed in the town and does not affect the market because its amount is small, then there is no prohibition. If the prohibition is unheeded and a townsman sells on behalf of a Bedouin, the sale is valid although the prohibition stands. This is the view of our school, and it is shared by a number of Mālikī and other scholars. Some Mālikī scholars said that the sale is cancelled unless it has already occurred.

‘Aṭā’, Mujāhid and Abu Ḥanīfah, however, said that it is permissible for a townsman to undertake selling on behalf of a Bedouin in any case, on the basis of the hadith that says: ‘Religion is sincere advice’. They add that the hadith censuring selling on behalf of a Bedouin was abrogated. Some said that it merely implies mild discouragement.

THE SELLING OF AN ANIMAL WITH AN OVERFULL UDDER

[3361-23]. (Dar al-Salam 3634) ‘Abdullāh ibn Maslamah ibn Qa’nab narrated:ⁱ Dāwūd ibn Qays narrated; from Mūsā ibn Yasār; from Abu Hurayrah; he said that ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “If a person buys a sheep with an overfull udder, let him take it away and milk it. If he is satisfied with its milk, he retains it. Otherwise, he returns it with a ṣā^{‘i} of dates”.’

[3362-24]. (Dar al-Salam 3635) Qutaybah ibn Sa‘īd narrated: Ya‘qūb (meaning Ibn ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Qariy) narrated; from Suhayl; from his father; from Abu Hurayrah; that ‘God’s Messenger (peace be upon him) said: “If a person buys a sheep with an overfull udder, he has the option for three days: he may retain it if he wishes or return it together with a ṣā‘ of dates”.

[3365-27]. (Dar al-Salam 3638) Ibn Abi ‘Umar narrated: ‘Abd al-Wahhāb narrated; from Ayyūb; with the same chain of transmission: the same text except that he said: ‘Whoever buys some sheep has the option’.

[3366-28]. (Dar al-Salam 3639) Muhammad ibn Rāfi‘ narrated: ‘Abd al-Razzāq narrated; Ma‘mar narrated; from Hammām ibn Munabbih. He said: ‘This is what Abu Hurayrah narrated to us from God’s Messenger (peace be upon him)....’. He mentioned a number of hadiths including: ‘And God’s Messenger said: “If any of you buys a she-camel that has recently given birth or a sheep with an overfull udder, he has the option he prefers after he has milked it: either to keep it, or to return it together with a ṣā' of dates”.'

حَدَّثَنَا مُحَمَّدُ بْنُ رَافِعٍ، حَدَّثَنَا عَبْدُ الرَّزَّاقِ، حَدَّثَنَا مَعْمَرٌ، عَنْ هَمَّامِ بْنِ مُنَبِّهٍ قَالَ: هَذَا مَا حَدَّثَنَا أَبُو هُرَيْرَةَ، عَنْ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ، فَذَكَرَ أَحَادِيثَ مِنْهَا: وَقَالَ: قَالَ رَسُولُ اللَّهِ صَلَّى اللَّهُ عَلَيْهِ وَسَلَّمَ: إِذَا مَا أَحَدُكُمْ اشْتَرَى لِقَحَةً مُصَرَّاءَ، أَوْ شَاةً مُصَرَّاءَ، فَهُوَ بِخَيْرِ النَّظَرَيْنِ بَعْدَ أَنْ يَحْلُبَهَا: إِمَّا هِيَ، وَإِلَّا فَلْيُرِدَّهَا وَصَاعًا مِنْ تَمْرٍ.

Text Explanation

We mentioned earlier that tying up the nipples of a sheep or a she-camel in order to retain the milk in its udder is forbidden. These hadiths show that although this action is forbidden, the sale remains valid. They also show that any sale that involves false appearance gives the buyer an option to return it. Our scholars hold different views concerning a person who buys a sheep whose nipples were tied up for a couple of days to give it an overfull udder: is his option immediate on learning of the fact, or does it extend for three days? It is said that the option extends over three days, on the basis of the apparent meaning of these hadiths. However, the more correct view according to them is that the option is immediate. They understand that the extension over three days in some hadiths applies to one who did not realize that the sheep was of this type until three days had passed, because in most cases he would not realize this in less than three days. The point here is that if the sheep gave less milk on the second day, this might be accidental as it might not have grazed well on that day, or for some other reason. If the decrease continued for three days, the buyer would then be certain that it had been tied up to increase her milk yield.

If the buyer chooses to return the animal he bought, he returns it adding a ṣā' of dates, whether the milk was plentiful or small in amount, and whether the animal was a she-camel, a cow or a sheep. This is the view of our school, and it is shared by Mālik, al-Layth, Ibn Abi Laylā, Abu Yūsuf, Abu Thawr and scholars who combine Fiqh and Hadith scholarship. It is the correct view that is consistent with the Sunnah. Some of our Shāfi'ī scholars said that what the buyer returns may be from the staple diet of his town, not necessarily dates.

On the other hand, Abu Ḥanīfah and a group of Iraqi scholars, some Mālikī scholars and Mālik in an odd report attributed to him say that the buyer returns the animal without adding a ṣā' of dates because the operative principle is that if a person spoils something belonging to another, he returns its like, if it has similar things, or its value. To give some other commodity is contrary to principle. The majority of scholars respond that if the Sunnah states something, it cannot be countered with a logical argument. That it is defined as one ṣā' of dates is due to the fact that dates were the staple diet at the time, and the ruling continues after that. It is not right to give its equivalent or its value; it must be this amount whatever the case may be, so that this is the applied standard, leaving no room for dispute. The Prophet (peace be upon him) was keen to remove any reason that may lead to dispute. An animal with an overfull udder may occur in a desert area, or in a village or in places where no one is acknowledged to know the value of what is wasted; the milk may become sour, and the people involved may dispute its quantity or amount. To prevent all such disputes, Islamic law defines something indisputable, which, in this case, is a ṣā' of dates. A similar case is blood money in the case of a killing: it is one hundred camels. It is not different in respect of any killed person, so as to prevent dispute. The same is the case of indemnity for causing miscarriage: it is the same whether the foetus is that of a male or female, completely formed or not, beautiful or not. Likewise, making up for an amount of zakat in between two limits: it is either two sheep or twenty dirhams, so that no dispute arises, whether the difference between the two cases is large or small. Al-Khaṭṭābī and others mention something on these lines, but God knows best.

It might be asked why the buyer is required to give compensation for the milk he used despite the rule that such gain is in return for his being responsible for the safety of what he bought. It is well known that if someone buys a defective article, then realizes that it is defective and returns it for that reason, he is not required to return any income he made from that defective article. So, the answer to this question would be that the milk is not an income that accrued to the buyer. It was with the seller at the time of the transaction and the deal included it together with the sheep. The two are sold together for the total price. It is impossible to return the milk because it has been mixed with what happened during the buyer's possession of the sheep. Therefore, some compensation needs to be made, but God knows best.
